SEATTLE IN 4 DAYS FOR NEW YORK MAIL

New Flier on Northern Pacific and Burlington Will Cut the Run Below 96 Hours.

QUICK DELIVERY ASSURED

And When the Mauretania's Queenstown Stop Is Cut Out, It Will Be London to Seattle in Nine Days.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The transmission of mails from New York to Seattle in four days is a certainty, from London to Seattle in nine days a possibility, of the near future. This remarkable lessening of the time between coast and coast is the result of a new train service that will be put into effect next Sunday west from Chicago. The Post Office authorities already have been advised of the change, and they are jubilant over the possibilities for bringing the Atlantic Coast into quicker communication with the Pacific Slope than ever has been possible before.

As was set forth on Wednesday in THE NEW YORK TIMES, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and Northern Pacific Railroads have combined to inaugurate a service from Chicago to Seattle that will annihilate distance. Close connection will be made with the Pennsylvania Railroad's eighteen-hour train between New York and Chicago. The Pennsylvania flier leaves New York each day at 3:55 o'clock. It arrives in Chicago at 8:55 the following morning, in the same station from which the Burlington and Northern Pacific train departs for the west. The flier for Seattle will pull out of this station at 9:20 each morning, or twenty-five minutes after the New York train rolls in, thus giving time to transfer the mail pouches.

On the Seattle flier the mail will reach St. Paul at 10:05 that night; Livingston, Mon., the third morning out of New York a few minutes after 4 o'clock; Spokane at 9:13 the same night, and Seattle at 12:30 (3:30 New York time) on the fourth day. The actual time of transit from New York to Seattle will be ninety-five hours and thirty-five minutes, just twenty-five minutes under four days.

The Post Office Department has already had its Inspectors in Chicago and St. Paul map out the routes, the connections, and the other features that enter into the make-up of mail routes. While the department has no exact knowledge of these changes, in the absence of an official report from the Inspectors, it knows that advantage will be taken of this new flier.

"Wherever we can advance the mails we do so," said an official of the department to-day. "This new arrangement, provided we can make the connections properly, (and there is no reason to doubt that we can,) will establish a record into the Northwest. Of course, the roads now holding the mail-carrying contracts may establish schedules that will equal this one, and in that case we will stick by the roads that have been doing our work. However, this seems to me a rather difficult schedule for competing roads to meet. It certainly is a wonderful tribute to American 'go aheaditiveness' and the American railroad."

The mail that will be carried on the fast trains will be confined to first-class matter. At present the fliers between New York and Chicago carry mail, being compelled to do so under the law, but the space devoted to the mail clerks is extremely small. They work in a room in a car just behind the powerful engine. This room is exactly nine feet wide by nine feet deep.

For this reason only sealed or "through" pouches will be received at New York. In Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis, and probably Spokane, other closed pouches destined for Seattle or Tacoma will be taken aboard.

"In case the service meets our expectations," said the department official, "we will not overtax it. It is evident to us that the new train is put on largely because of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, and if the experiment proves a success it will be continued. Naturally the department is desirous of having the train continued and nothing will be done to embarrass its schedule. If we attempted to enforce our legal rights and put on a postal car the chances are that the train would be promptly taken off. Cars must be sacrificed for speed."

By an arrangement of schedules two years ago the Post Office authorities were enabled to get New York mails through to San Francisco in about the same time as that now proposed for the run to Seattle. However, the schedule was so arranged that the mails could not be delivered in San Francisco until the following day, so that the contemplated arrangement will eclipse all former marks in cross-continent mail records when delivery is taken into consideration.

Although the schedules of the eastbound trains have not been made public, it is understood that the same quick time will be made.

The new train over the Burlington and the Northern Pacific from Chicago to Seattle is one of two about to be established by the Hill lines, and is not the faster of the two. Its time is seventy-seven hours and ten minutes. Beginning next Sunday, the Hill system will start a daily train leaving Chicago at 10:15 P. M. and reaching Seattle over the Burlington and Great Northern Roads in exactly seventy-two hours. This train, too, will doubtless carry mails, but as connecting trains from New York will be much slower than the eighteen-hour fliers, the time from New York to Seattle will be longer than by way of the Northern Pacific train. It is pointed out that if the schedules of these two trains were transposed mails from New York would reach Seattle in three and three-quarter days, and only three business days would be consumed in transit.

It now remains for the Cunard Line to cut out the Mauretania's Queenstown stop and possibly start the ship two or three hours earlier from Liverpool to insure the dispatch of mails and passengers from London across the Atlantic Ocean and the American continent in nine days.

HARRIMAN'S IMMENSE SYSTEM

A Trip Over His Lines to Hongkong Now Possible—Employs 80,000 Men.

E. H. Harriman's method of directing the affairs of the 18,000 miles of railways which go to make up the Harriman system and of organizing the 80,000 men employed on these lines was described last night by Julius Kruttschnitt, director of maintenance and operation of the Harriman lines, in an address delivered before the New York Railroad Club. The system of control of this vast army of men, Mr. Kruttschnitt said, while carried into effect by a number of men, was first formed as a bold conception in the mind of E. H. Harriman, whose initiative in organization has made possible the co-ordination of the many groups of railway which are to-day included in the Harriman system.

Besides these rail lines, the Harriman transportation system, including both the Atlantic and the Pacific steamship lines, he said, comprises 54,000 miles of water transportation lines, making a grand total of 72,000 miles of transportation lines which are under the direction of Mr. Harriman. As Mr. Kruttschnitt put it last evening, a traveler can start from New York and go as far as Hongkong, a distance of 9,902 miles without leaving the Harriman lines, and most of the return journey could be made traveling on still other Harriman lines, adding many thousand more miles to the total. And when the Mexican lines which are now building are completed, the Harriman lines will also extend from Seattle at the north to Guadalajara at the south, a distance of 3,169 miles.

Mr. Kruttschnitt described the details of the operating system of the Harriman lines, and among other features of the Harriman scheme of control told of the standardization of equipment and of roadway, and of the system of uncovering the cause of all serious accidents on the Harriman lines through specially appointed committees in which representation is given to the public as well as to the management of the railroad.

The trend of public sentiment on matters affecting railroads, Mr. Kruttschnitt said, was carefully followed by means of reports made to headquarters by the general managers of the system, who receive copies of practically all newspapers and periodicals published in their districts, and who have reports drawn up indicating the attitude which the publications take toward questions which interest the management of the Harriman lines.

C. P. SHEA STABS A WOMAN.

Ex-Secretary of Teamsters' Union Wounds Her Fifteen Times.

Cornelius P. Shea of 222 West Thirteenth Street, former General Secretary of the Teamsters' Union, who for many years was one of the most prominent figures in the Teamsters' Union both in Chicago and this city was arrested last night and locked up charged with having stabbed Alice Walsh, with whom he lived, fifteen times. The Walsh woman early this morning was still alive in St. Vincent's Hospital, but her death was momentarily expected.

Shea, who figured prominently in the teamsters' strikes in Chicago several years ago, and in this city about two years ago, was found covered with blood in a room adjoining the one in which the woman was found dying. The woman when asked who had stabbed her had strength enough left to point her finger at Shea and say, "there's the man."

For several weeks, according to other tenants in the house, Shea and the Walsh woman have been fighting and quarreling. Last night they quarreled so loudly that two little girls were sent to get a policeman. They got two—Policemen Mallon and Hewitt of the Charles Street Station. These two found Shea putting on his coat as if preparing to leave. When Hewitt asked him where he was going he answered: "With you, I reckon."

Shea was arrested in the strike in Chicago, and also in the strike in this city, but got off both times. A year ago he lost his prestige in the organization, and since that time has been driving a truck for a downtown firm.

COURT CENSURES A WOMAN.

Says Tale of $3,000 Lost in Subway Was a Cloak to Hide Theft.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 21.—Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, at White Plains to-day, dismissed the action of Mrs. Ellen Smyth against the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of Manhattan to recover $3,000 alleged to have been lost on a Subway train by Mrs. Edna Cozine, to whom the money had been loaned by Mrs. Smyth. Justice Tompkins declared that he believed Mrs. Cozine had perjured herself on the witness stand. He directed that the matter be referred to the District Attorney.

On Nov. 22, 1907, Mrs. Cozine testified that she had the $3,000 in a handbag and that she left a Subway local train at Ninety-sixth Street and boarded an express train for Kingsbridge. There, she said, she took a trolley car for Yonkers, and when she arrived at a private school which her daughter was attending she discovered for the first time that her bag containing the money was missing. Several days later her bag, she declared, was found in the "Lost Department" of the company, and only contained 29 cents. Mrs. Cozine, who lives in West 112th Street, Manhattan, and whose husband is a fireman in the New York department, assigned her claim to Mrs. Smyth because she owed her the money.

It was after Mrs. Smyth had requested that the money be returned to her that Mrs. Cozine said she had lost it on a subway train.

Justice Tompkins, in dismissing the complaint, said that he did not believe that Mrs. Cozine ever put the money in a bank and then checked it out to the loan broker, and that the bag was left on the train for the purpose of making a claim that she had lost the money.

"I believe she stole the money," Justice Tompkins said.

$51,000,000 NEW YORK DRY GOODS COMBINE

John Claflin Interested in New United Company Incorporated in Delaware.

DETAILS NOT ANNOUNCED

Mr. Claflin Already the Head of Associated Merchants' Company, Till Now the Largest in Existence.

DOVER, Del., May 21.—The United Dry Goods Company of New York, stated capital $51,000,000, was incorporated here to-day. This is the largest dry goods concern in existence.

Thomas F. Bayard, a Wilmington lawyer, is named as one of the incorporators. Papers for the incorporation were sent to Mr. Bayard to-day by Gould & Wilkie, attorneys, of 2 Wall Street, New York, Mr. Bayard is the resident Delaware Director.

It was learned here last night that John Claflin, President of the H. B. Claflin Company and of the Associated Merchants' Company, which is the holding company for that wholesale dry goods house and several of the largest retail dry goods concerns in this and other cities, is interested in the United Dry Goods Company. Mr. Claflin, at his home in Morristown, N. J., admitted that he was interested, but declined to discuss the matter further than to say that he would make a complete statement in a few days.

The capitalization of the new concern is nearly three times that of the Associated Merchants' Company, till now the largest dry goods combination in this country, or probably in the world, and it was surmised that the United Dry Goods Company was probably a combination of this and several other large dry goods concerns, till now independent.

The Associated Merchants' Company is understood to control the H. B. Claflin Company, James McCreery & Co., the Adams Dry Goods Company, C. G. Gunther's Sons, Hahne & Co., of Newark; McCreery & Co., of Pittsburg; J. N. Adam & Co., of Buffalo; Stewart & Co., of Baltimore, and other large retail concerns. The construction was formed in 1901 under the auspices of J. P. Morgan & Co., and has been a great financial combination success.

Its stock is divided into $10,000,000 cumulative 5 per cent. preferred, $5,000,000 6 per cent. cumulative second preferred, and $5,000,000 common, on which dividends have been paid at the rate of 8 per cent. From time to time there have been rumors that other outside concerns were desirous of entering the combination.

The two members of the law firm of Gould & Wilkie were out of town last night. Dispatches from Wilmington showed that the other incorporators named in the papers were clerks.

Louis Stewart, Treasurer of the Associated Merchants' Company and one of the members of the firm of James McCreery & Co., said that no further information about the new company would be available until the completion of its organization, which would be in a day or two.

FROHMAN GETS THE ADELPHI.

Now Controls Seven London Theatres —Henry Miller to Open It.

It was announced last night at the New York offices of Charles Frohman that Mr. Frohman has obtained control of the Adelphi Theatre, London. It will open under his management in the middle of September with the first London production of William Vaughn Moody's play, "The Great Divide." Miss Edith Wynne Matthison, who has played the part of Ruth Jordan, a rôle created by Miss Margaret Anglin, will be in the London cast. Henry Miller will appear as Stephen Ghent, and the rest of the cast will be practically the same as has acted with Mr. Miller here.

Mr. Frohman, it is announced, will establish a stock company at the Adelphi, and will devote his attention to staging plays of proved popularity. "The Great Divide" will be followed by Charles Rann Kennedy's play, "The Servant in the House," in which Miss Matthison will appear in her original part, the wife of the curate.

With the acquirement of the Adelphi Mr. Frohman has now control of seven London theatres, the others being the Duke of York's, the Aldwich, Hicks's, the Haymarket, the Comedy, and the St. James's.

AERONAUTS STOP FOR DINNER.

Accept Invitation While Sailing Near the Ground Over a New York Farm.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., May 21.—N. H. Arnold of this city piloted the balloon North Adams I. in an ascension from here to-day, carrying as passengers A. D. Converse of Winchendon and W. H. Richardson of Brattleboro, Vt. The balloon rose easily, despite the high wind, and started in a northwesterly direction. The balloon landed at 1:05 P. M. on the farm of George W. Hodges, at Greenfield Centre, N. Y., about six miles northwest of Saratoga Springs, according to a message received from the aeronauts. The trip was pleasant and uneventful.

Commenting on the descent the aeronauts said that the balloon was sailing near the ground over Mr. Hodges's farm when two of Mr. Hodges's daughters invited the party to come down and have dinner, and they decided to accept the invitation. The distance covered was about 42 miles.

Jumps Before a Train.

Frank Bohnsac, an Austrian cigarmaker, tried to kill himself last night by throwing himself headlong to the elevated railroad tracks before the uptown station at Nineteenth Street and First Avenue, as an elevated train was nearing the station.

The ticket agent and policeman got Bohnsac to the platform. He struggled with all his might, asking them to let him die. He was sent to Bellevue Hospital with a scalp wound. At the station and later in the hospital all efforts to get from the man his address failed.

REDUCED RATES TO GETTYSBURG. Dedication Regular Army Monument, Monday, May 31, Memorial Day. President Taft will participate in ceremonies. Excursion tickets to Gettysburg will be sold by the Pennsylvania Railroad May 27 to 30, good to return until June 3, inclusive, at reduced rates.—Adv.

WARRANTS OUT FOR ENNIS AND STOPPANI

Orange County Grand Jury Indicts Bankrupt Stock Brokers for Grand Larceny.

$200,000 LOST AT BRANCHES

Only Two Newburg Men Complain, but Patrons Numbered 600—Counsel to Produce Brokers in Court.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., May 21.—The Orange County Grand Jury has indicted Ennis and Stoppani, the New York Consolidated Stock Exchange brokers, who failed with liabilities of $1,500,000, and Supreme Court Justice Morschauser has issued bench warrants for their arrest.

The complaint charges grand larceny and is made by ex-Coroner Edward M. Murtfeldt of Newburg, a close friend of ex-Governor Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., who alleged that he paid Ennis & Stoppani $900, and by Samuel Humiston, another prominent resident of Newburg, who alleges he paid Ennis & Stoppani $2,200. These men complain that they gave the manager of Ennis & Stoppani's branch office at Newburg the sums mentioned to purchase certain stocks, and that the firm did not buy the stocks.

While it is estimated that the patrons of Ennis & Stoppani in Orange County lost over $200,000, only the two mentioned have instituted criminal proceedings.

After the indictments were found the Orange County authorities communicated with Black, Olcott, Gruber & McManus, the attorneys for the bankrupt firm, and arrangements were made late to-day whereby the attorneys agreed to produce Ennis and Stoppani before Justice Morschauser in the Supreme Court at Newburg either on Saturday or Monday, as suited the convenience of all parties.

The attorneys preferred to produce their clients voluntarily rather than have them submit to arrest. It was also found that they could be arraigned at the present term of court, whereas if there was delay they were liable to arrest at any moment, and their cases would have to go over to the Fall term of court.

Ennis & Stoppani had branch offices at Middletown and Newburg, in Orange County, and it is understood their customers in the two places numbered more than 600, including many prominent business men. Many of these customers have placed their claims against Ennis & Stoppani in the hands of lawyers, and it is expected when Ennis & Stoppani are arraigned there will be a large number of their creditors in court to see them. Quite a number of the creditors, however, have signed an agreement offered by Ennis & Stoppani whereby they are to receive 15 per cent. cash and the balance of their claims in notes for various terms.

Assistant District Attorney Wilson did not know late to-night whether Ennis and Stoppani would be produced in court at Newburg to-morrow or Monday.

Irving L. Ernst, one of counsel for the bankrupts, said yesterday that he would produce his clients whenever they were wanted, but expressed the opinion that the action should lie in this county, where they are resident.

A committee of Ennis & Stoppani creditors is at work here endeavoring to get a majority to agree to a plan of resumption under which a cash payment of 15 cents on the dollar will be made, the firm giving notes for the balance, which they expect to redeem after resuming business. The plan is largely dependent on the cancellation of claims held by the mother of Charles F. Stoppani, totaling about $500,000, which will be pressed if the creditors fail to accept the compromise.

COLONY CLUB ELEVATES MAN.

Puts Him on the Roof—The Chauffeurs Mustn't Wait Below.

It was rumored yesterday that the Colony Club was having erected a garage on its roof, or building for the housing of airships. The Colony Club is having two rooms built on the roof of its Madison Avenue clubhouse, but they are for neither of the purposes suggested. They are to be a sort of depository for chauffeurs.

Many of the members and guests of the club drive up in their automobiles. It has been felt that the gay badinage of the chauffeurs as they wait for some hours near the entrance of the club might be dispensed with, and this place is being arranged for their commodation. It is so located that it will not interfere at any time with airship fêtes or roofgarden tea parties that may be given on the clubhouse top, which is one of its most attractive features. Other attendants, in livery or out, are frequently obliged to wait for some time in the clubhouse. They will now share the roof waiting rooms.

An addition to the club house, Miss Elsie de Wolfe said yesterday, is proposed and it has been suggested that another building be annexed. The club has grown so rapidly that its accommodations are insufficient for the needs of the members and their guests, and the proposed addition would be an adjoining house on either Madison Avenue or Thirtieth Street, connected with the main building. Nothing definite is being done about it as yet, however.

Storm Stops Atlantic City Cars.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 21.—A heavy northeast storm has driven the highest tide in years on the Meadows and Inlet section of the city. Trolley travel is suspended above Baltic Avenue, and many small pleasure craft at the Inlet have been torn from their moorings and driven ashore. The cars to Ocean City have been forced to stop at Somers Point. The coast guards have been doubled.

STANDARD OIL GETS CONTROL IN AUSTRIA

Last Oil-Producing Country, Except Rumania, Until Now Independent.

TO PERFECT AGREEMENT

Representatives of Standard and of Austrian Combination Now in Hamburg to Settle Terms.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, May 21.—With the exception of Rumania, Austria is the only oil-producing country which so far has successfully resisted the attempts of the Standard Oil Company to gain a controlling interest in its oil business. Now, according to reports just received from Drohobycz, the centre of the oil interests in Austrian Poland, the Standard appears to be about to accomplish the desired end in Austria also.

Representatives of the Galician oil combination have just gone to Hamburg, there to perfect an agreement with Standard Oil representatives which will go far toward making the Americans masters of the oil business in Austria. According to the tenor of the agreement, the Standard undertakes to build a number of reservoirs for the storage of oil, with an aggregate capacity of 100,000 cisterns of crude oil, at a cost of 7,000,000 crowns, or about $1,400,000. The annual storage charges agreed upon will be 17½ hellers, or about 3½ cents per 100 kilos, for the first four years, which will be sufficient to defray the whole cost of the reservoirs. After the expiration of the first four years the storage charges will be reduced to 6 hellers, or 1 1-5 cents, per year for 160 kilos.

The Standard further binds itself to buy from the Austrian oil combination its whole output of benzine and crude oil at an agreed minimum price of 12 kroner (about $2.40) for benzine and 5 kroner (about $1) for oil.

SHAW PLAY FORBIDDEN.

Author Says Censor Objected to It Because It Was Religious.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 21.—A new play by Bernard Shaw was to be produced at His Majesty's Theatre on the first Friday in June, as one of a series which is being given by the promoters of "The Afternoon Theatre"—an undertaking which has been winning golden opinions since its inception a few months ago. Mr. Shaw's play was called "The Shewing Up of Blanco Posnet," and its performance was awaited with the keenest interest.

I am now informed that it has been forbidden by the censor. Certain passages were objected to, and as Mr. Shaw refused to make the required alterations, the Lord Chamberlain refused to issue the license for a public performance.

Mr. Shaw, in an interview in The Daily Chronicle, says: "The censor objects to the play, not because it is irreligious, but because it is religious, and because it suggests belief in God by picturing a set of ungodly people who wake up to the perception that God is a real, vital, and active existence. The remarkable thing is that, while it is permissible to represent God as a quaintly costumed figure, as in 'Everyman,' any verbal allusion to Him is immediately tabooed."

Mr. Shaw said he was willing to cut out or reasonably change any offending passages, "but the censor demands practically that I should cut out the whole play; therefore there was no alternative but to abandon the production."

HARDY'S POEM TO MEREDITH.

Living Novelist Lays Tribute on Urn of the Dead.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 21.—To-morrow, the day of George Meredith's funeral, The London Times will publish the following verses by Thomas Hardy, under the heading, "G. M., 1828-1909":

Forty years back when much had place
  That since has perished out of mind,
I heard that voice and saw that face.
  He spoke as one afoot will wind
A morning horn ere men awake.
  His note was trenchant, smart, but kind:
He was of those whose words can shake
  And riddle to the very core
The falsities that time will break.
  Of late, when we two met once more,
The luminous countenance and dear
  Shone just as forty years before;
So that, when now all tongues declare
  He is unseen by his green hill,
I scarce believe he sits not there.
  No matter: further and further still
Through the world's vaporous vitiate air
  His words wing on as strong words will.

LONDON, May 21.—It is said this evening that King Edward has taken a hand in the agitation to induce the Dean of Westminster to reconsider his decision not to admit George Meredith's ashes to the Abbey, and if this is the case it is almost certain that the novelist's remains will find a resting place there after all.

No official explanation has yet been made of the refusal so far to permit the burial in Westminster, but it is understood the Dean considers that the Victorian authors are already sufficiently represented there.

Meredith's body was cremated at Dorking this morning in the presence of a few members of his family. There was no religious service. The ashes were deposited in a black metal urn and taken back to Mr. Meredith's house in Dorking for interment.

BIG PRICES AT CHRISTIE'S.

Two Portraits by Romney Fetch Over $26,000 Apiece.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 21.—Big prices were obtained at the sale of the Cuthbertson collection of pictures at Christie's to-day, a number of them being purchased for Americans.

Romney's portrait of "Mrs. Blackburne" fell to Agnews for 5,200 guineas, or about $26,000, and the same master's portrait of "Mrs. Newbery" was secured by the Bath Museum for $26,775.

Scott & Fowles of New York bid $16,000 for "The Flock," a splendid example of the work of Jacques, and a typical James Maris was bought by Reinhardt of Chicago for $15,750.

Twenty-three pictures realized $311,955, an average of $15,560 each.

$13,000 FOR A CAXTON.

E. Stanley, Private Collector, Buys Treasure at Sotheby's.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 21.—There was spirited bidding at Sotheby's to-day for the remarkable Caxton volume already described in THE NEW YORK TIMES's dispatches, the victory remaining with a private collector, E. Stanley, who paid $13,000 for the treasure. Five small works were included in the original oak binding. The volume was discovered by chance recently in the library of an old manor house in the north of England.

A defective copy of Caxton's "Royal Book" was knocked down for $1,500, in spite of the fact that another copy of this work brought $11,000 in 1902.

SPLIT OVER INCOME TAX.

Democrats and Insurgent Republicans Will Offer Separate Plans.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—It was announced to-night that the coalition of Democratic Senators and insurgent Republicans had been broken, so far as the income tax question was concerned, and that amendments on that subject would be presented by both Senators Bailey and Cummins. Both of these amendments will provide for flat rates of tax, but they differ on some other important features, particularly the proposed tax on corporations.

16 YEARS FOR LAWYER SYKES.

He Pleaded Guilty to Looting the Brooks Estate—Collapses in Prison.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 21.—John Sykes, self-confessed forger and embezzler, although still a member of the New Jersey bar, was sentenced to-day to sixteen years in the State prison by Judge John Rellstab. This was the last official act of Judge Rellstab before handing his resignation to Gov. Fort.

Sykes collapsed when taken to prison. He got away with nearly all of the Brooks estate and borrowed money from almost everybody in the city. His stealings are said to amount to nearly $60,000.

FELL IN SLEEP AND SLEPT ON.

Erickson Dropped 25 Feet from Window and Finally Awoke in Dream.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., May 21.—Carl Erickson, 31 years old, holds the record for somnambulistic feats in this section of the country. While asleep last night he walked out of the window in his apartment and fell 25 feet to the ground without awakening, and kept on sleeping for more than three hours.

When he was aroused by a vivid dream, in which he imagined himself freezing to death, he found himself clutching the grass in the yard, believing it to be a wool coverlet. Beyond a few minor bruises he was none the worse for his experience.

SUFFRAGETTES ROUT ASQUITH

Premier Escapes by Side Door When They Try to Storm Meeting.

SHEFFIELD, England, May 21.—Suffragettes to-night stormed a political meeting here at which Premier Asquith was making an address. The women, however, failed to effect an entrance to the hall, and several of them were injured in encounters with the police.

Mr. Asquith was obliged to make his exit secretly through a side door before the proceedings had ended.

WHEAT UP TO $1.31¼.

Foreign Market Influence Makes Record Price in Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 21.—Strong foreign wheat markets were influential to-day in sending May wheat on the Board of Trade here to $1.31¼.

This was 1¼ cents higher than the best previous price for the crop.

QUINTET AT A BIRTH.

Three Girls and Two Boys Added to a Wisconsin Family.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., May 21.—The wife of Fay Irish of Thorp, Clark County, yesterday gave birth to five babies—three daughters and two sons. All are alive and well to-night.

There are now ten children in the family. The other five were born separately and are all living.

TORNADO WRECKS A TOWN.

Many Buildings Blown Away at Italy, Texas, but Only One Person Hurt.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, May 21.—A tornado swept over the southern part of Ellis County early to-day and did extensive damage to crops and other property.

Part of the town of Italy was blown away. The cotton warehouse, oil mill, school buildings, two churches, and more than twenty frame buildings were wrecked.

The people fled to places of safety when the wind was seen, at some distance, sweeping along in a wide path. Only one person was hurt. Mrs. Horton had her right leg broken.

Many barns and other farm outhouses were wrecked in the surrounding country, but no report of loss of life has been made.

MAYOR FOR GOVERNOR URGED BY CONNERS

Conners Splits with Murphy and Fight for State Committee Control Is at Hand.

SOME LATE APPOINTMENTS

Explanation of McClellan's Speechmaking Tours—Coney Island Attitude Also Pleases Up-Staters.

There has been a rupture in the close political relations which existed until recently between Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy and Democratic State Chairman William J. Conners. As a result a readjustment within the Democratic State organization, involving a fight for control of the Democratic State Committee with Mr. Connors and his old-time foe, Senator Patrick H. McCarren of Brooklyn, making common cause against the Tammany chieftain, is at hand.

Incidentally it became known yesterday, following the up-State speechmaking tour of Mayor McClellan and a visit to this city of Mr. Conners, that there has arisen among old-line Democrats in various sections of the State a demand that the Mayor become the next Democratic nominee for Governor, and that Mr. Conners is heartily in accord with this demand.

The news caused a profound stir among the politicians in the little inner circle whom the report reached yesterday. It came out following the present visit of Mr. Conners here. He has been in town for some days and is returning to Buffalo to-day.

McCarren Stands With Conners.

It was also learned yesterday that the future political bond between the Democratic State Chairman and Senator McCarren was cemented during Mr. Conner's present visit. With Mr. Conners have been Mr. Mahar, his private secretary, and Democratic State Committeeman Stephen Ryan of Chenango, one of his closest political lieutenants.

"Mr. Conners and Mr. McCarren are very good friends to-day,' said a political friend of both at the Hoffman House yesterday.

It was said by a friend of Mr. Conners that his hold on the up-State Democrats is stronger than ever. During the last few weeks some things have happened which will tend still further to strengthen him with the up-State members of his party and to decrease in proportion the waning popularity of Tammany Leader Murphy among Democrats outside New York City.

Up-Staters in City Jobs.

One of these recent happenings is the appointment of his lieutenant, State Committeeman Stephen Ryan to one of the Appraiserships in connection with the Ashokan dam project. Mr. Ryan had been out of a job since the Democratic administration left office on Jan. 1. Before that date he was a Supervisor of Roads under Frederick Skene, the Democratic State Engineer.

While some of Mr. Murphy's friends have expressed the opinion that the appointment of Mr. Ryan was for political reasons pure and simple, it was learned yesterday that he was selected by Assistant Corporation Counsel Sterling for his knowledge of road building and his knowledge of land values, and that during the short time he has acted in his present capacity he has already saved the city some $30,000, and that those responsible for his appointment expect that he will effect a saving of at least $250,000 if he is retained in the place.

Another good friend of Democratic State Chairman Conners who has been favored recently with an Appraisership is P. J. McGreevey of Hornell, Steuben County. Mr. McGreevey, it is said, was discovered by Thomas Hassett, Secretary of the Board of Water Supply, who accompanied the Mayor on his trip to Elmira, Corning, and Bath this week. Mr. Hassett, like Mr. McGreevey, is a native of Steuben County, where the latter is prominent in county politics as chief aid of Democratic State Committeeman Schwartzenbach, also a close friend of Democratic State Chairman Conners.

It is understood that former Deputy State Treasurer, George W. Batten, who represents the Niagara-Orleans District in the Democratic State Committee, is slated for an Appraisership, and that a job just as remunerative is in store for W. W. Riley, a close political friend of E. E. Farley of Elmira, an old line Democrat of considerable influence in his district. Mr. Batten, when Deputy State Treasurer, was practically the spokesman of Mr. Conners at the State Capitol, and has been his principal lieutenant in Western New York politics outside of Erie County.

Back to D. B. Hill's System.

An alliance between Democratic State Chairman Conners and Senator McCarren against Tammany leader Murphy would tend to restore the conditions within the Democratic organization as they existed while David B. Hill was Democratic leader of the State and the late Hugh McLaughlin was at the head of the Democratic organization in Kings. Hill, for many years, managed to dominate the State organization by using the Brooklyn machine as a check against Tammany Hall in the State Conventions and in the State Committee.

That the policy pursued by State Chairman Conners in using the name of Mayor McClellan as bait with the up-State Democrats might ultimately force the Mayor into the next Gubernatorial contest is the opinion of some out-of-town Democrats who are closely in touch with what is going on in the Democratic organization throughout the State.

They point out that the attitude displayed by Mayor McClellan during his second administration, his aloofness from Tammany Leader Murphy and his organization, would be the strongest possible commendation with the up-State Democrats, who abhor the very name of Tammany Hall. In connection with this, it was said that the Mayor's stern insistence that the Sunday-closing laws must be observed at Coney Island would not do the Mayor any harm with Democrats outside of New York City.

How Murphy Hurt Conners.

The breach between State Chairman Conners and Tammany Leader Murphy is said to be due in the first place to the attempts by the latter to supplant Mr. Conners as Democratic State leader. This is also resented by the up-State Democrats.

At the Denver Convention it was noticeable that there was friction between Mr. Conners and the Tammany leader. At the State Convention in Rochester Mr. Murphy held out against the nomination of Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, advocated by the State Chairman, until at the very last moment, when the overwhelming drift of up-State delegates to Mr. Chanler made the Tammany leader's position untenable. At that time Mr. Murphy played the part of State leader in real earnest.

State Chairman Conners, according to his friends, felt the slight keenly. While to all appearances there was a restoration of harmonious relations between the Tammany leader and the State Chairman during the campaign, friends of Mr. Conners assert that in reality they fought the battle together under a flag of truce.

MEN PICKED TO NAME COMMITTEE OF 100

Nineteen Citizens Will Select Larger Body to Make the Campaign Against Tammany.

ALL PARTIES REPRESENTED

Men Chosen by Robert C. Ogden Also Represent the Different Sections of the City—Will Report Soon.

Robert C. Ogden, who was Chairman of the Cooper Union conference yesterday, announced the Nominating Committee which will select the Committee of One Hundred to conduct the anti-Tammany campaign of the independent movement. Mr. Ogden was directed by resolution to select a nominating committee to consist of at least fifteen members. When the announcement was made yesterday it was found that, instead of a Committee of Fifteen, Mr. Ogden had appointed a Committee of Nineteen. Here is the committee:

Charles S. Brown, (Rep.,) Manhattan.
John A. Connolly, (Dem.,) Manhattan.
Thomas J. Curtis, (Dem.,) Manhattan.
Michael A. Fitzgerald, (Dem.,) Brooklyn.
Elbert H. Gary, (Rep.,) Manhattan.
Timothy Healy, (Dem.,) Manhattan.
Hamilton Holt, (Ind.,) Manhattan.
Raymond V. Ingersoll, (Ind.,) Brooklyn.
Nathaniel H. Levi, (Rep.,) Brooklyn.
Edward P. Lyon, (Rep.,) Brooklyn.
Marcus M. Marks, (Rep.,) Manhattan.
Henry Moskowitz, (Ind.,) Manhattan.
James Reilly, (Dem.,) Bronx.
B. Aymar Sands, (Rep.,) Manhattan.
William Jay Schieffelin, (Rep.,) Manhattan.
Gustav H. Schwab, (Rep.,) Manhattan.
Charles A. Schieren, (Rep.,) Brooklyn.
E. Pratt Stratton, (Rep.,) Queens.
W. S. Van Clief, (Dem.,) Richmond.

The Committee of Nineteen will meet at [illegible] o'clock on Tuesday afternoon next. Under the resolution providing for it the committee will be asked to select a Committee of One Hundred to make plans and generally conduct the campaign of the independents against Tammany Hall and in favor of the election of men who will give this city a business administration. The Committee of Nineteen is to report its selections and a declaration of principles to a mass meeting, which will be called soon.

There are eleven Republicans, five Democrats, and three men who are known as independents in politics on the committee. It was said that in making the appointments Chairman Ogden had not been prompted by the political faith of any of the appointees.

The selections were made from something like 500 names which were submitted to Mr. Ogden by persons interested in the movement. In announcing the committee, Mr. Ogden said he desired to express his appreciation of "the interest which was shown by the very numerous persons who presented names for his consideration in connection with the selection of the committee.'"

In selecting the committee, Mr. Ogden, said he, was anxious that all the boroughs in the city should be represented.

GIRL ACCUSES A CHAUFFEUR.

Attacked Her in an Auto, She Says—Prisoner a Deputy Sheriff.

Georgianna Briggs, the fifteen-year-old girl who charges that George Germaine, a chauffeur, attacked her in an automobile on Saw Mill River Road, Yonkers, late Thursday night, is dangerously ill at her home, 15 Lockwood Avenue, Yonkers. She was in a semi-conscious condition at intervals yesterday, and was hysterical at other times, but in one period of lucidness she told a sufficiently coherent story to cause a warrant to be issued for the arrest of Germaine.

Detectives Higgins and Gilbert found him after a search. He at first denied having been with the girl, but upon being closely questioned at Yonkers Police Headquarters admitted that he met her while taking the touring car of his employer, Samuel T. Hubbard, a New York broker, of 208 Palisade Avenue, Yonkers, to the garage. Germaine said he invited the girl to take a ride and she eagerly accepted. He admitted familiarities with her, but denied her charges.

Germaine is 28 years old and married, and has heretofore borne a good reputation. When arraigned before City Judge Joseph H. Beall he was held in $2,500 bail until next Tuesday morning. Germaine is a Deputy Sheriff of Westchester County and holds a special officer's badge in Yonkers.

TERRY GIRL NOT KIDNAPPED.

Young Woman Who Met Mother on a Car Took Child to Her Home.

The supposed kidnapping of twelve-year-old Grace Terry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Terry of 92 Jackson Avenue, Corona, L. I., which has upset the Terry family since Thursday afternoon, turns out apparently not to have been a kidnapping at all. Grace is now in the Children's Society rooms in Schermerhorn Street, Brooklyn, awaiting the arrival of her mother to take her home. Annie Sprague is in the Adams Street Police Station, charged with having kidnapped the little girl, but both she and Grace declare that the child accompanied her of her own accord, and were on their way back to the Terry home when the police arrested them.

The couple were found in Glen Cove, L. I., where Miss Sprague's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Skidmore Sprague, live, at Maple Street and Park Avenue. It was in the Sprague home, according to both Miss Sprague and the little girl, that Grace spent Thursday night, perfectly at ease, so she says, because she told her fourteen-year-old brother, Wilbur, of her intention of spending the night with Miss Sprague. A man who knew Miss Sprague saw the couple, and compelled them to wait in the Town Hall in Glen Cove until Detectives White and Graham came for them from the Brooklyn Headquarters.

Miss Sprague, who is 18 years old and whose real name is Mrs. Henry Bonds, she having married a drug clerk of that name two years ago from whom she is now seeking a separation, told the detectives that she met Mrs. Terry on Wednesday while she was standing at the transfer station in Mineola, L. I. According to the girl, she helped Mrs. Terry measure rooms and windows for carpets and curtains in a house she was inspecting in Hempstead, and when the elder woman was through accompanied her to Corona while they discussed a plan suddenly suggested by the girl that Mrs. Terry employ her to manage a boarding house.

Mrs. Terry agreed to the suggestion, according to the girl, and Miss Sprague says she left immediately for Port Washington to get her clothing from the Doran home. She returned on Thursday morning and, finding that Mrs. Terry had gone out for the day, the girl prepared luncheon for the children. Then, says Miss Sprague, it occurred to her to take Grace on a visit to her parents and acquaint them of the news that she was going to enter Mrs. Terry's employ.

WANTED F. J. HENEY SHOT.

Detective Declares That Railroad Counsel Expressed the Wish.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 21. — Patrick Calhoun's trial on a bribery charge ended the most important week of its five months' session to-night with the adjournment of court.

Detective John Helms, who formerly was employed by Calhoun's company to watch the agents of the prosecution, declared that several efforts had been made to prevent his appearance as a witness.

A dramatic outburst occurred when Helms charged that Mr. Abbott of counsel for Mr. Calhoun had once expressed to him a wish that "some one would shoot Heney," and that Stanley Moore had congratulated him on his performance in following Burns.

Stanley Moore rose in his place at the counsel table, and in a voice trembling with anger, told Helms he was "lying like a dog" and perjuring himself. Helms leaped to his feet and defied the attorney to make good his charge.

Rudolph Spreckels, backer of the graft prosecution, under cross-examination, said he was not aware that Francis J. Heney, the prosecutor, had received large sums of money from the Federal Government since he undertook the graft trials. He explained that a check for $1,194, given to Heney, simply covered the prosecutor's office expenses for March and April. Spreckels denied paying Heney's household expenses.

Mr. Heney was permitted to add to the record the minutes of every proceeding involving the prosecution of defendants indicted by the Oliver Grand Jury in 1906 and 1907. This he did for the purpose of meeting the inference that he was engaged to prosecute Calhoun in particular.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Upon the request of counsel for Patrick Calhoun, on trial at San Francisco, the Attorney General to-day forwarded to the United States Attorney copies of the appointment of Francis J. Heney, counsel for the Government, together with vouchers signed by Heney for money received from the Government for his services.

PLUMB ISLAND PACIFIED.

Undesirable Element Ousted and the U. S. Soldiers Ordered Away.

The "treaty of Plumb Island" was signed yesterday morning, and orders were immediately issued by Major John S. Mallory, Twelfth United States Infantry, commander in chief of the army of pacification, for the evacuation of the island. The twenty-three soldiers constituting the army that went down last Sunday to restore order broke camp and was awaiting the arrival of the transport Wikoff from Governors Island to take the men home.

As was told in THE TIMES of last Monday, there has been a lot of trouble at Plumb Island, due principally to reports of frequent prizefights, and the Government decided last week to remove all the disturbing elements from the island's ninety-odd families. This work was successfully accomplished, and yesterday morning Major Mallory reported that the prizefighting element had been eliminated.

The Wikoff started for Plumb Island at 9 A. M. The island is about six miles east of Sheepshead Bay. About four miles off the Plumb Island landing, which is near the cottage named the "O-U-Kid," the Wikoff struck the storm and there she had to remain. It was impossible to get a yard nearer to Plumb Island, and she finally turned around and returned to the city.

FORM ASSOCIATION TO BETTER COLLEGES

Incorporated in Albany with George B. Cortelyou and C. E. Sprague Among Directors.

TO IMPROVE BOOKKEEPING

Plans Involve Reforms in College Home Life, Fraternities, and Methods of Administration—Publish Paper.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 21.—The Higher Education Association, with principal offices in New York, and organized to operate throughout the United States as an agency through which funds may be furnished to bring about more careful study and improvements in American colleges, was incorporated to-day with a capital of $300,000. The incorporators include President John H. Finley of the College of the City of New York, Edwin E. Slosson, editor of The Independent; ex-Secretary of the Treasury George B. Cortelyou, who was at one time Principal of preparatory schools in New York; Vergil Prettyman, Principal of Horace Mann School, New York; Clarence F. Birdseye, lawyer and author of numerous educational works; Charles E. Sprague and Arthur H. Pogson of New York. The project is also said to have the approval of the United States Commissioner of Education.

The Directors include George B. Cortelyou, John H. Finley, and Charles E. Sprague.

The purpose of the organization as set forth in its articles of incorporation is "To improve higher education throughout the United States, and in particular the internal and external conditions of the American college, by furnishing an agency and funds whereby a careful study can be made and improvement can be brought about in the institutions of higher learning."

When asked last night for a more explicit statement of the purposes of the organization, and particularly in what respect the American colleges were considered weakest, President Finley of the City College said that the report must be in error in naming him as one of the incorporators, for he was not one so far as he knew. He had not intended to be. He had been asked by Clarence F. Birdseye, a lawyer of 42 Broadway, to be a Director, but to this request he had consented only conditionally. He was not well acquainted with the detail of the purposes of the association.

Mr. Birdseye has recently set forth his views of the shortcomings of colleges in a book which he called "The Reorganization of Our Colleges," in which he urged that the administration of such institutions should be modeled upon the strict and elaborate business system which has been evolved by America's great commercial concerns, which has enabled them to combine the highest efficiency with the greatest economy, to obtain the results sought and eliminate "waste motion." His idea is that the colleges as now constituted are full of such waste motion, and he commends them to the Standard Oil Company and the United Steel Corporation as models of adaptation of means to ends.

Inferentially the articles of incorporation of the association state that the book-keeping systems of the American colleges are far from efficient and satisfactory, and one of the first duties of the association will be to develop an internal cost-accounting system in addition to the present method of merely accounting for the cash proceeds and handling the trust and other funds.

The association will endeavor apparently to carry out the plans set forth in Mr. Birdseye's book for surrounding the college with those influences in and out of the classroom which will be productive of that class of citizen most useful and most in demand in the country. Mr. Birdseye holds that of the influences which affect the student the college home life includes fully 90 per cent., and the association designs to secure "the betterment of the college community life and of the college home life, whether in the fraternity home, the college dormitory, or the local boarding house, and the restoration so far as possible of the individual training of the students, mentally, morally, and physically."

Mr. Birdseye especially does not believe that the present fraternity life has been developed to its highest possibilities, so the association would better this as well.

In the department of instruction the purpose is to secure improvement in the pedagogical training of those proposing to teach in colleges, and attention to questions of health, compensation, pensions, and other interests of the teaching forces. The association will also endeavor to bring about a more general study of civic affairs and economics. To advance these purposes and to promulgate these ideas for which the association stands, a magazine to be known as The American College, will be published, and in addition branch associations will be established in other cities to co-operate in the general purpose of educational development.

Western Pacific Orders Locomotives.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., May 21.—The Western Pacific Railroad to-day placed an order for forty engines of the consolidated type with the Brooks plant of the American Locomotive Company. The contract stipulates that the locomotives must be delivered in July and August.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD
Bulletin.

THE SHORTEST LINE TO CHICAGO.

The shortest railroad line from New York to Chicago is through Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Fort Wayne. It is the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad—the route of the "Pennsylvania Special," the first regularly scheduled 18-hour train.

The shortest line means much to the traveler. It means the most direct line and that is what the busy man wants. When this advantage is combined with the highest grade of train service and the best type of equipment, the ideal in transportation is realized.

And not only is the Pennsylvania the shortest line between New York and Chicago, but its roadbed is as nearly perfect as experience, expenditure, and skill can make it. It is rock ballasted from the Hudson River to Lake Michigan. It is dustless. It is protected by the most approved system of automatic block signals, and its operators and trainmen are expert in the movement of high-grade passenger trains on fast schedules—the strongest assurances of reliability and promptness.

The short line is also the scenic line, embracing in its panoramic scope the highly cultivated farm lands of Pennsylvania; the charming valleys of the Juniata and Conemaugh; the magnificent Allegheny Mountains, and the fertile plains of Ohio and Indiana.

Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Offices at 263 Fifth Avenue (open until 10:00 P. M. daily, including Sundays and holidays; Telephone "Madison 1083,") 182 Fifth Avenue, 170, 461, 1354 Broadway, 245 Columbus Avenue, 111 West 125th Street, 2798 Third Avenue, 34 Mulberry Street, West Twenty-third Street Station; Stations foot of Desbrosses Street and foot of Cortlandt Street, New York; 336 Fulton Street, 4 Court Street, 479 Nostrand Avenue, 390 Broadway, and Annex Station, foot of Fulton Street, Brooklyn.

MAYOR BLAMES ALBANY.

Tells Governor There Was No One at the Capitol to Receive Bills.

Unless Gov. Hughes can be persuaded to accept the attitude taken by Mayor McClellan on five city bills, which the Governor says were not submitted to him until after the time limit prescribed by law had expired, 10,000 city employes will get no vacation this year.

A few days ago the Mayor was notified that a bill passed at the last session of the Legislature, with four others approved by him, had reached the Governor after the fifteen days allowed the Mayor for consideration of city bills had expired, and therefore the Governor could not take them up.

The other bills which will be killed if the Governor cannot be persuaded to change his position are three minor measures relating to court procedure and the bill permitting the State to transfer to the city certain lands under water in Jamaica Bay.

The Mayor sent a letter to the Governor yesterday in which he explained the delay in the transmission of the bills. The matter has been carefully investigated by the New York postal authorities, and it seems that the reason that the bills did not reach the Governor until the day after the Mayor's fifteen days had expired was because there was no one at the Capitol on Sunday, May 16, to receive the packet. They were sent from this city by special delivery to insure their speedy arrival in Albany. The Albany Post Office has reported that the packet arrived there on Sunday morning, and was taken to the Capitol, where no one could be found to sign for it. It was taken back to the Post Office and stayed there until the next day. In his letter the Mayor cites several Sunday observance court decisions to substantiate his theory that the failure in the delivery of the bills should prevent Sunday's being included in his fifteen days. He says in part:

"If an extreme view is taken in regard to the return of these bills, then they should have left New York on the 14th of May in order to insure their arrival at Albany prior to the mid-day closing on Saturday, the 15th of May. This extreme view, and the fact that they were not received here until Monday, May 3, would only give the City of New York ten and one-half working days to actually consider these five bills.

"It is, of course, unnecessary to call to your attention the fact that every hour of time for the consideration of bills passed by the Legislature affecting the City of New York is of the utmost value.

"It is, therefore, respectfully urged that it was proper for the Post Office employes and the employes at the Capitol not to physically transmit and place in the Capitol Building these five bills, but that in refraining from doing so they obeyed the fundamental law of the State, and that, therefore, Monday, the 17th of May, was in reality the last day to make a physical delivery of the bills at the Capitol."

SNORE SILENCER IN COURT.

Barber Who Invested $500 Wanted His Money or the Invention Put on Sale.

A martyr to science, as he regarded himself, David B. Date, who startled the world and filled with hope the hearts of long-suffering wives and sleeping car travelers by announcing some time ago that he had caused Columbus, Sir Isaac Newton, Marconi, and others to appear insignificant by his discovery of a plan to prevent snoring, found himself facing a charge of larceny yesterday in the Adams Street Court, Brooklyn. It was not that he had actually committed theft. It was merely that he had failed to return $500 which an ambitious Brooklyn barber, who had, naturally enough, seen "millions in it," had invested in his snore-strangling device.

One day not long ago Inventor Date dropped into the shop of Henry Pferdekamp, at 406 Jay Street. While being shaved by Pferdekamp Date suggested that he invest in the new snore-destroying invention. He invested $500 with Date to get the great invention on the market. The market, the barber says, is still waiting for it.

Date's anti-snorer, it appears, is a device fastened on with tapes and straps, and so adjusted as to act like a Maxim gun silencer on any snore.

Barber Pferdekamp asked Date about the sale of the invention, and was told that the anti-snorer was hanging fire in the Patent Office.

After hearing the testimony Magistrate Furlong said: "While I don't think this is a criminal case, I will hold the defendant in $300 bail for a further hearing."

TALE OF A PARK WILL FIGHT.

Not True, Says Steel Man's Widow—Executor Says So, Too.

Rumors originating in Pittsburg that the will of William G. Park, the steel man, who died in that city on Jan. 19 last, leaving an estate valued at about $15,000,000, was to be contested by his widow were denied yesterday both by Mrs. Park, who now lives at Westbury, L. I., and by Edwin S. Marston, President of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, trustee and executor under Mr. Park's will.

Mr. Park left his widow $50,000 outright, and an income of $60,000 a year. Three children receive the rest of the estate, except $50,000, left to Mlle. Josephine, an old French governess of the family, and one-tenth of the residuary estate, which went to Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, Pittsburg.

Mrs. Park said that the rumors of a contest of the will were news to her, and intimated that she had no reason to contest it.

ICE RAM FOR HALIFAX LINE.

The Florizel Starts from Brooklyn on Her First Trip.

The new Red Cross line steamer Florizel, which is to run between this port and Halifax, sailed from Brooklyn yesterday on her maiden voyage. The Florizel was built by C. Cornell & Co. of Glasgow. She was launched in January.

The new vessel is designed to fight the heavy ice fields encountered at the entrance to St. John's Harbor. Her bows are so constructed as to enable her to plow through heavy ice. This will enable her to run through the Winter and to avoid the vexatious delays that have occurred to ships making Winter voyages to Newfoundland.

MAYORALTY BOOM FOR HEDGES

Pastor Says He Can Have Support of His Church.

A new Mayoralty boom was launched last night at the dinner of the Men's Club of the Central Presbyterian Church in the Motel Majestic. There, amid acclamations, Job Hedges was named as a "good Republican candidate," and the Rev. William Merle-Smith, pastor of the church, said he could have the support of his congregation. This, and the presentation to Ernest K. Coulter, clerk of the Children's Court, of a loving cup from the club, were the features of the dinner.

ARRESTS FOR TRAIN ROBBERY

Slatten and McInnis Suspected of Having Held Up Great Northern Mail.

SPOKANE, Washington, May 21.—J. M. Slatten and J. S. McInnis were arrested yesterday on suspicion of being two of the robbers who held up the Great Northern mail train near Colbert last Saturday night.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, May 21.—J. S. McInnes, a telegraph operator, who was arrested at Spokane yesterday on suspicion of being one of the men who held up the Great Northern express train Saturday night, comes from one of the leading families here. "Doc," as he was sometimes called, is said to have wandered a great deal, and was last heard from in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan.

Expects Hughes's Son to Recover.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 21.—A comfortable night was passed by Charles E. Hughes, Jr., son of the Governor of New York, who is ill with cerebro-spinal meningitis at the Rhode Island Hospital here. Dr. F. T. Fulton, the attending physician, said to-day that he did not anticipate any setback and expected the patient to recover.

DR. SMITH H. M'KIM AND WIFE SEPARATE

Left Their Apartments at the Plaza Recently, and Mrs. McKim Went to Paris.

NO DIVORCE, SAY FAMILY

Separation Said to Have Been Arranged Amicably—Mrs. McKim a Daughter of I. E. Emerson.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 21.—Announcement was made here to-day of the separation of Dr. Smith Hollins McKim and his wife. Mrs. McKim was formerly Margaret Emerson, daughter of Capt. Isaac E. Emerson, the Baltimore drug manufacturer and yachtsman, and is now in Paris.

The Emersons deny that Mrs. McKim will get a divorce to marry a wealthy New York man who was recently divorced. They say she has not separated from Dr. McKim to marry any one else. The separation was arranged on amicable terms. Steps have not so far been taken for a divorce.

Mrs. McKim will return to this country in July, and with the other members of her family will go for the remainder of the season to Newport, where Capt. Emerson has a villa. Dr. and Mrs. McKim have no children. Mrs. McKim is the idol of her father, and he has lavished his wealth upon her. Her marriage to Dr. McKim, who is a son of Hollins McKim, member of an old Maryland family, was celebrated Dec. 30, 1902.

The romance between Dr. McKim and Miss Emerson developed on the high seas and in foreign lands. Soon after his daughter entered society, Capt. Emerson went with her and a party of friends for a trip around the world on his steam yacht, named Margaret in honor of his daughter. Dr. McKim was asked by Capt. Emerson to go on the journey as physician and surgeon to the party. He was also an agreeable traveling companion. A few months after the return of the yachting party the engagement of Miss Emerson to Dr. McKim was announced by her parents.

After a honeymoon spent abroad, Dr. and Mrs. McKim made their home in New York. Her father bought her a splendid estate at Irvington-on-the-Hudson near New York, and she also spent much time on the 7,000-acre plantation near Georgetown, S. C., that Capt. Emerson purchased a few years ago and equipped as one of the most beautiful estates in the country.

The last Winter Mrs. McKim had apartments at the Plaza Hotel in New York, and it was there that her sister, Mrs. T. Mitchell Horner, formerly Miss Daisy Emerson, was married in January to James McVickar of New York. The other sister of Mrs. McKim is Mrs. W. W. White.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith Hollins McKim, who are members of the Ardsley and Colony Clubs, rented their country residence on Sunnyside Road, near Tarrytown, last Autumn, and spent the Winter at the Hotel Plaza, as has been their custom for the last two years. They occupied one of the largest suites in the hotel, but gave it up three weeks ago, leaving the impression that they were going to return to their country place. Since that time Dr. McKim has been staying at the Waldorf. Mrs. McKim has not been with him. According to the Waldorf's desk clerk, Dr. McKim gave up his room there somewhat abruptly last evening at 8 o'clock and left without leaving any mailing address at the desk.

Capt. Isaac E. Emerson has had difficulty with another of his sons-in-law. On Sept. 10, 1907, he and his wife were sued for $100,000 damages by T. Mitchell Horner, who in 1896 married their daughter Daisy. Horner charged in his suit that his parents-in-law had alienated his wife's affections from him. Horner charged that, after marrying Emerson's daughter, he was appointed the Southern agent of the Emerson Drug Company, with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga. In May, 1907, Horner was dismissed from the employ of the firm, the drug company's Atlanta branch was discontinued, and the Emersons took Mrs. Horner on a trip to Europe. Horner subsequently opened an office as a broker in Atlanta.

ARMY ENTERTAINS A MAJOR

Till Hotel Collectors Coldly Intervene—He Pays and Vanishes.

After playing a star part in the social life on Governor's Island for ten days, a distinguished looking middle-aged man, whose introduction to the army post had been the visiting card of a Major in the British Army and member of the Cavalry Club, London, was escorted across the island ferry yesterday and landed at the Battery between two detectives from the Hotel nickerbocker. A matter of $52 owing to that hostelry caused the detectives to seek him out and cut short his social career at the army post. He paid the bill and departed. Governor's Island considers the incident closed.

The late afternoon boat deposited the Major on the island some ten days ago. He presented his card to the officer of the day, explaining that he was on seven months' leave, and before going back to England wanted to see something of American army life. At the Officers' Club he proved to be a genial companion, evidently familiar with army affairs. In giving his rank he said he was the senior Major of the Seventh Dragoon Guards, stationed at Canterbury. He had served as Aid de Camp to Lord Wolseley and under Sir John French at Aldershot. He was traveling with Commander Majoribanks, R. N., he said, but the Commander was so interested in things naval that he could not get further than the Navy Yard, where he was a favorite.

He spoke carelessly of his automobile, and said that his valet was a British soldier assigned to his service. In viewing the island he was particularly insistent on receiving the salute due to his rank.

Then some how the Hotel Knickerbocker heard where he was and asked questions. The hotel people heard with surprise of his entertainment on Governors Island. House Detectives McCullen and Bledes visited the island ot collect the hotel board bill. The Major said it was a small matter, and offered a check which the detectives would not take. A nurse in a city hospital cashed the check, however, and the Major after settling disappeared.

The hotel people declare that the Major is a salesman for a patent umbrella. Governors Island prefers to remember him as a pleasant man with a liking for army life and entertainment.

PRINCELY LIVING KILLED FIRM.

A. W. Lincoln Declares Ensign's Extravagance Wrecked Shepard & Co.

Arthur W. Lincoln, the young bond salesman, who undertook to manage the affairs of the bankrupt bondhouse of E. D. Shepard & Co. for a year or two before its failure, on a salary of $1,000 a week and all his expenses, took his turn on the stand in the Shepard bankruptcy proceedings yesterday before United States Commissioner Alexander. Mr. Lincoln passed back to partner Henry A. Ensign quite as heavy a share of the responsibility for the troubles of Shepard & Co. as Mr. Ensign in his recent testimony laid upon the $1,000 a week manager.

Mr. Lincoln said that when Mr. Ensign ceased his active connection with Shepard & Co in 1907 the firm was virtually insolvent, and that it was with the greatest difficulty that he and Mr. Shepard pulled it through. Ensign, according to Lincoln's testimony, accepted $12,000 as a consideration for giving up all connection with the affairs of the firm, and then E. D. Shepard, at a salary of $10,000 a year, and Lincoln, at a salary of $1,000 a week, undertook to see what could be done.

Lincoln had most of his trouble, according to his testimony yesterday, as a result of Ensign's residence at Raton, New Mexico, where Shepard & Co. had some properties that Ensign was supposed to be developing. Ensign, according to Lincoln, lived in princely style, kept five automobiles, had 150 horses, and had bought enough materials of all kinds to keep the plant going for years.

"He had two chauffeurs, to whom he paid $100 a month, besides the maintenance of themselves and their families," Lincoln continued, "and had 1,000 letterheads and 500 envelopes printed for one of them to use in his private correspondence. There was a big bill due a brewing company for beer and one account of $13,008, entitled 'The H. A. Ensign Church Account.' I asked what was the church account, for there wasn't a church within miles. We found that he had made plans for the erection of a church, gymnasium, and swimming pool, and had given orders for their immediate construction."

Lincoln said further that he found $144,000 unpaid coal bills, $40,000 due on dump cars that were never used, and $73,128 miscellaneous indebtedness, besides $286,629 contracts outstanding. When he returned to New York, Lincoln said, he sent for Ensign and told him that he would have to get out, to which the latter agreed readily. It was arranged that Ensign should receive $12,000 in consideration of retiring from the firm, and that subsequently he discovered that Ensign owed the firm $9,700 in this country and $4,500 in England.

Lincoln's testimony will be continued on Tuesday.

DENY EXTORTION BY MADDEN.

Defense Says Strikes Were Legitimate and Union Labor Was Persecuted.

CHICAGO, May 21.—The defense in the trial of Martin B. Madden, President of the Associated Building Trades of Chicago, and his associates, F. A. Puchot and M. J. Boyle, who are charged with accepting graft money in settling "fake" strikes, put in the main part of their case to-day.

In building up a defense Madden's lawyers contended that union labor was persecuted by the Chicago Employers' Association; that the strikes concerning which the State charged that bribes were taken were legitimate strikes, and that $1,000 was not received by Madden or any of his representatives in settlement of the strike in the Joseph Klicka plant.

Charles M. Rau, business agent of the Steamfitters' Protective Association, testified that he first called attention to the fact that a non-union firm was putting in dry kilns at the Klicka plant. He said that this caused the strike and the men were not ordered back to work until that contract had been relet to a firm that employed union labor.

"Were you in Powers & Gilbert's saloon on Nov. 18," asked Attorney Brady, "and did you see Andres there?"

Thoman said he was in the saloon then and saw there George S. Andres, a contractor, who testified yesterday that he paid Madden $1,000 to settle the Klicka strike in that saloon. He said Andres was carrying a roll of blue prints and talked to Madden. There was some discussion about a contract for work on the Klicka job that had been let to a non-union concern. Madden said that Andres would have to go to the organization.

Witness said that Madden and Andres did not leave his sight at any time and that he did not see anybody pay Madden any money.

TO MOVE ITS MILLIONS TO-DAY

Police to Guard Transfer of Knickerbocker Cash Into Its New Home.

The Knickerbocker Trust Company will to-day move about $5,000,000 in cash and about $38,000,000 in stocks and bonds, besides many millions more of securities held in trust, into the company's new building at the corner of Broadway and Exchange Place. The present quarters are at 66 Broadway, only two doors from the new building, but Commissioner Bingham will have a guard of men in uniform and in plain clothes there.

The new building was contracted for before the panic of 1907, and was originally to be a skyscraper. When Charles H. Keep took the Presidency of the reorganized institution and every effort was concentrated on getting cash to pay off the deferred deposits, it was at first sought to sell the Exchange Place block front, the old site of the Consolidated Exchange, which had been purchased before the panic, but with the stagnation in real estate it was finally decided to hold the plot for better times and improve it with a building big enough to pay carrying charges. The new building is practically the structure contracted for cut to one-third size, with the steel skeleton strong enough to support a dozen or more additional stories.

The same policy of economy was carried out in fitting up the banking rooms, which are an example of how successfully a decorative scheme of massive simplicity can be carried out at a minimum of cost. The walls are of stone, which has the warm-colored matt surface of limestone, but is in reality a patent composition. The fittings of the officers' rooms are in a brown-grained wood, which closely resembles Circassian walnut, but which really is a native wood. The upper floors, all except a space in the centre of the second floor, are given over to offices and are nearly all rented.

The Knickerbocker Trust Company, which opened under a deferred payment plan which contemplated the lapse of two years and a half before the payments were completed, has anticipated all of the deferred payments before a year has elapsed, and now the only reminders of the failure are the "surplus certificates" which depositors accepted for 30 per cent of their deposits. The deposits are now over $35,000,000 and the undivided profits $1,242,088.

The company will begin its first day's business in the new building on Monday.

ROOT IN THE CHAIR SILENCES BEVERIDGE

Vice President Gives Him an Opportunity to Overawe Senators Who Hazed Him.

AUTOMOBILE RATES GO UP

Several Senators Attack Reckless Operators of Them—Committee Wins on Higher Carbon Rate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Senator Root of New York, who recently received his hazing as a new member, had his inning in the Senate to-day. Vice President Sherman called upon him to preside over the tariff debate for a time, an honor generally accorded only to Senators of long service. While he did not have much to do, he gave several indications that any attempt to haze him while in this high post would be promptly squelched. Moreover, he subjected Senator Beveridge to a bit of hazing which helped to make up for his experiences.

Senator Root from the first was evidently bent on expediting business, as he had demanded before, and as Senators Aldrich, Tillman, and others have demanded recently. Mr. Beveridge did not have the floor, but asked and obtained permission to ask a question of Senator La Follette. The answer of the Wisconsin man brought other questions, and the two were engaging in a lively colloquy when suddenly Mr. Root interrupted. He suggested that Mr. Beveridge was taking Mr. La Follette from his feet.

"I am not trying to take the Senator from his feet," retorted Mr. Beveridge, with features drawn in resentment. "I asked and obtained permission to interrupt him."

Mr. Root replied firmly that he was "bound to inform the Senator from Indiana that he has made several observations without obtaining the recognition of the chair."

"We might as well have this ruling settled here now," responded Mr. Beveridge. "If that is to be the rule—that we are to ask and receive permission for each interruption—then we will take up two-thirds of the time of the Senate in asking questions."

Root Makes Beveridge Subside.

"There must be some limit to general conversation permitted," said Mr. Root, coldly, "and the chair supposed in this case that the conversation had gone as far as requested by the Senator from Indiana."

"Then," said Mr. Beveridge, with his most intense sarcasm, "it is for the chair to determine when a Senator is through asking questions and not the Senator himself?"

Mr. Root made no reply, and after some hesitation Mr. Beveridge took his seat, saying something about such a proceeding being "absurd."

Mr. La Follette had proceeded only a short time when he was interrupted by Mr. Rayner, and the latter was called to order by Mr. Beveridge, whereupon a colloquy ensued as to whether the Senator from Maryland had complied with the rules of the Senate by properly asking permission to ask a question.

"It's a pity," retorted Mr. Rayner, "that the Senator from Indiana has not something more important to occupy him. He is wasting most of his time over there anyway."

Later in following up his baiting of Mr. Root, Mr. Beveridge came in for a rebuke from Senator Hale, who was speaking against automobiles in general. He was interrupted with a jocular remark by the Indianian that the rules were not being enforced, as the Senator had been speaking half an hour without touching the tariff.

"I don't include myself in colloquies for the sake of getting my name in the newspapers," said Mr. Hale severely, looking at Mr. Beveridge. "I don't carry a credit and debit account with the Finance Committee, voting with it half the time and against it half the time for the sake of strengthening my strategic position. I can't submit to the polite censure of my young friend from Indiana, who is criticising older Senators than himself. Whenever I have any statement to make about a schedule I will make it at the time most appropriate for that schedule, and in that respect the Senate will see the difference between the Senator from Indiana and me."

Automobile Rate Put Up.

A debate on automobiles to-day kept the Senate amused for over an hour, and in the end the committee accepted an amendment increasing to 50 per cent. the duty on automobiles and parts, leaving the present rate of 45 per cent. on auto cycles, bicycles, and their parts. Mr. Heyburn was the principal speaker against the machines, and he was supported by Mr. Hale and Mr. Bailey.

"I should like to see a tax of 100 per cent. on these machines," said Mr. Heyburn of Idaho, "and I am amazed that the courts should have decided that they have the same right as other vehicles to our country roads. People must flee to places of safety while these engines of destruction pass along the roads. Laugh? Why, the rich shout with glee while the farmer flies through the air to be distributed over near-by fences."

A committee amendment reported by Mr. Aldrich to-day, and agreed to without objection, reduces the duty on unspecified carbon manufactures from 35 per cent. to 20 per cent.

Four hours were consumed in debating the committee amendment putting a duty of 65 cents per hundred feet on the grades of electric light carbons that are now imported. Objection was made because carbons two feet in length now come in under a duty of about 47 cents a hundred feet. Mr. Aldrich declared, however, that the 65-cent rate was really a decrease under the rate fixed under the Dingley law, because its provision was intended to apply to one-foot carbons, so that a rate of about 90 cents per hundred feet should be imposed, but the foreign makers had evaded it by doubling the lengths.

Senator La Follette said the manufacture of the article was controlled in this country by the National Carbon Company of Cleveland, and that the ultimate consumer of the carbons were not the electric light companies, but the people who leased the lights.

One effect of high protection on this article, said Mr. Smoot, would be to force foreign manufacturers to build plants in this country. He read from an alleged interview with a New York importer, Hugo Reisinger, a statement that the imposition of the Aldrich rates would mean that a large German plant would be established in this country, and that the resulting competition would cut the price of carbons in two.

The committee's amendment was sustained by a vote of 43 to 36. No Democrat voted in the affirmative, while Senators Beveridge, Bristow, Burkett, Clapp, Crawford, Cummins, Dolliver, La Follette, and Nelson voted in the negative.

Senator Aldrich announced to-day just before adjournment that he would try to-morrow to bring the Senators to agree on a definite and early date for the final vote on the Tariff bill.

$6,000,000 TO WESTERN UNION

Amount of Verdict Against American Telephone Co. Decided.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 21.—The Western Union Telegraph Company gets $6,000,000 in its suit against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, after litigation lasting thirty years. The United States Circuit Court decided in favor of the Western Union, and the amount which the former is to get has just been decided by a master.

The suit was brought to require the telephone company to account to the Western Union for shares of stock under an agreement by which the latter alleged the Bell concern agreed to account for 20 per cent. of all rentals or royalties received from licenses or leases for speaking telephones. It was alleged that the stocks were received as rentals for such licenses. The first special master named by the Circuit Court was John Lowell, and Everett W. Burdett of Boston is the present one.

After hearings before him extending over several years it was found that if the stocks were to be figured upon par value the telephone company owed the Western Union more than $6,000,000 as 20 per cent. of the $339,065,003 which the former had received for licenses, dividends, and other receipts for which it was accountable under the agreement. Master Burdett's report will soon be filed with the court.

Many of the ablest attorneys in the country have been engaged in this legal contest.

TAFT FOR CIVIL PENSIONS.

Wants Some System Whereby Old Government Employes May Benefit.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—To a committee of the United States Civil Service Retirement Association, which called upon him to-day to enlist his interest in some plan for taking care of superannuated employes of the Government, President Taft declared that he was in hearty sympathy with any project that could be devised.

"I am strongly in favor," said the President, "of the merit system of appointment in all Government positions. It fell to my lot in the Philippines to institute a system even more rigid in many measures than the system adopted by the Federal Government. A necessary concomitant of that system, however—a logical accompaniment—is a provision for those who have become too old to render proper service to the Government.

"There has been in Congress a strong fight against the civil pension list on the ground, I presume, that the military pension list has been so large and heavy necessarily. Other methods have been proposed by means of either voluntary or involuntary contributions of a percentage of the salaries paid, which should constitute a fund from which pensions or annuities, whatever you choose to call them, should be paid to those who have reached the time fixed for their payment. Something of that sort ought certainly to be done."

LOEB TOWN TOPICS WITNESS.

In Suit Giving Photographer Six Cents Damages in Roosevelt Picture.

A photograph of ex-President Roosevelt sitting in front of his home at Oyster Bay, was the subject of a trial before Supreme Court Justice Dowling and a jury yesterday, when Peter A. Juley, a photographer, of 327 Pearl Street, sought to recover $5,000 damages from The Town Topics Publishing Company, for reproducing the photograph in "Fads and Fancies," without crediting him with the copyright.

The photograph was put in evidence, as was a copy of "Fads and Fancies," and also the write-up on Col. Roosevelt. Counsel for Mr. Juley asked that the book be not defaced by the stenographer's usual marking for exhibits. Justice Dowling agreed, and the book was passed around among the jurors.

William Loeb, Jr., Collector of the Port, and former Secretary to Col. Roosevelt, who said it was his first experience on the witness stand, testified for the defense. He said that he always made the arrangements for the photographing of his Chief, and that a condition was that the President should not be restricted as to any use he might afterward make of the photographs.

The deposition of Col. Roosevelt taken at Oyster Bay shortly before he left for Africa, in which he said that Mr. Loeb sent the photograph to Town Topics, was offered in evidence.

Lawyer Craig for Town Topics asked for a dismissal. Justice Dowling denied the motion, but instructed the jury to bring in a verdict for 6 cents in favor of Mr. Juley, as he had suffered no substantial damage.

EARLY MAGAZINES STOLEN.

Newsdealer Who Got Them in Advance from a Driver Pleads Guilty.

In explaining the prosecution of a driver and newsdealer for the petty larceny of magazines and receiving stolen goods, Supt. William H. Eckelston of the packing department of the American News Company told Magistrate Breen, in the Tombs Court yesterday, that the crimes were serious ones, inasmuch as the news company is under heavy bonds to prevent magazines or their contents from being placed on the market before the date of publication. Many magazine articles, he said, had been sold to newspapers prior to the date set for selling the magazines, presumably by men who stole the magazines while in shipment to some distant point. The prisoners were Martin McNamara of 574 Broome Street, who has a newsstand at Desbrosses Street ferry, and Andrew Wagner of Plainfield, N. J., a truckman employed by the news company.

The newsdealer pleaded guilty and was held in $500 bail for trial. Wagner was held in a similar amount.

CITIES MUST GUARD HEALTH OF WORKERS

Henry Morgenthau Outlines in Washington a Plan to Obtain Model Homes for Poor.

BETTER TRANSIT NEEDED

Present Conditions a Crime, He Declares—Cabinet Officers to Preside at Conference To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Henry Morgenthau of the Committee on Congestion of Population in New York was one of the principal speakers to-night at the opening session of the National Conference on City Planning, held in the Masonic Auditorium. He spoke on "A National Constructive Programme for City Planning."

In discussing the necessity for a National "city planning" programme Mr. Morgenthau said:

"We now have in the ninety-one largest cities in the United States twenty-five millions of population at least. Many are dependent upon incomes less than $500 a year. In twenty years this number will be doubled. What a great service to this Nation it would be to solve their housing problem, make healthy, patriotic citizens the mainstay of the Republic instead of letting them drift into a disease infected, Socialistically inclined mass, and then spending millions of dollars on hospitals to cure them, provisions to punish them, and police to repress them.

"As individuals we spend thousands to insure ourselves against fire, accident, death, and theft. Why should the city not tax itself against the increase of peril?

"How to do it?

"First—Stop the continued present use of the existing tenements by making still more stringent tenement house laws and strictly enforcing them; have continued inspection to see that no one sleeps in rooms without windows; that every one has the required amount of cubic feet of air.

"Second—Have every city have a plan which will provide for its proper development along hygienic lines for the next fifty years. Let them establish zones for their factories and for their residences, with plenty of space for playgrounds. And see to it by strict regulations that present conditions cannot be duplicated. Fortunately the Supreme Court of Massachusetts has shown us the legality of it.

"Third—Provide proper transit facilities. The way the various large cities' franchises have been given away and misused is a shame and a crime. The manipulators of the traction stock have criminally enriched themselves and have watered the stock and increased the burdens and fixed charges on the roads to such an extent that it is for the time being leaving many cities without the needed facilities and blinding the issue. Yet it has been demonstrated that passengers can profitably be carried fifteen miles through well-populated districts for 5 cents. There are no cities whose present population will not be larger in years to come. Let their authorities study the problem and provide properly for future needs.

"Let the cities build their own subways and elevated roads or permit private capital that is content with a moderate income on its actual investment to do so. Make the outlying districts accessible.

"Fourth—Restrict certain large sections to one and two family houses, so that the poor can have homes and all the advantages and none of the drawbacks of city life.

"To-day there are many thousands of acres within thirty minutes' reach of the heart of New York that can be bought for $1,500 an acre or less. It costs about $2,000 or $3,000 an acre, according to the condition of the soil, to sewer, grade, sidewalk, and curb properly. As there are twelve lots to each acre, the cost per lot will not be under $400. A family home can be secured for $2,000; the interest on the investment at 6 per cent. will be $120, and the taxes about $25, and the monthly rent will not exceed $12. The people that live this way will be so much more efficient as workmen that the factories will follow them, and the problem is nearing its solution."

President Taft was to have opened the conference, but was prevented by an attack of hoarseness. Other speakers to-night were Benjamin C. March of New York and Surgeon General Sternburg, U. S. A., (retired.)

The conference will be continued to-morrow. Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh will preside at the morning session and Secretary of the Interior Ballinger at the afternoon session. There will be a banquet in the evening at the Raleigh Hotel, where the city-planning exhibit which was recently open for inspection at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory in New York has been installed.

A. G. HALL SUED FOR DIVORCE.

Mrs. Hall Asks Allmony and Counsel Fee—Cruel Treatment Also Alleged.

Supreme Court Justice Guy reserved decision yesterday on the application of Mrs. Edith Jane Hall for an allowance of $75 a week alimony and a counsel fee of $750 pending the trial of her suit for divorce from Alexander Gordon Hall, President of the Henry Hall's Sons Company, manufacturers of fishing rods and tackle at Highland Mills, N. Y.

The Halls were married Nov. 15, 1908, and lived in this city during the Winter. In her complaint Mrs. Hall accuses her husband of cruel and improper conduct, and alleges that he once held a revolver to her head until she complied with his request to turn over to him the capital stock of the Henry Hall's Sons Company, together with $6,000 she had on deposit. On another occasion, she says, he drew the back of a razor across her throat until she imagined he had cut her throat. Allegations in which a stenographer and other women figure are also mentioned in Mrs. Hall's charges.

Hall denied all his wife's allegations.

DEAD, KEEPS HIS COMPACT.

Mr. McLaurin Promised Miss Glover They'd Rest in Same Lot.

Charles Edward McLaurin, the oldest member of the New York Produce Exchange, and for twenty-five years a member of Thomas Morgan & Co., brokers, 68 Broad Street, died on Thursday of heart disease in his home, 60 Clark Street, Brooklyn. He was in his sixty-fourth year, and was in active work until a few days ago. Mr. McLaurin was born in Leicestershire, England, and came to this country forty years ago to settle in New York.

He was a bachelor. Mr. McLaurin made a compact sixteen years ago with Miss Belle M. Glover of Rochester, that should he die before her he would be interred in the Glover family plot in that city. There was no engagement between them. In accordance with his wishes the body was sent to Rochester last night for interment.

The six causes of distinction in
Saks Apparel for Men

No. 6. THE FINISHING OF THE GARMENTS

Stripped of technicalities, "the finish" is just the final touches which a well-made and distinctive garment deserves at the hands of its producers. Included under this head:

The stitching or felling of edges which not only improves the fronts and collars but serves to retain their shapeliness and grace.

Sleeve cuffs may require an extra line of stitching to make them "set" properly.

The careful rounding or pointing of lapels is part of the finishing process—and if you want convincing evidence of how our craftsmen do these things, just note the lapels of the first Saks coat you chance upon.

When, finally, the Saks label is stitched into the collar of a coat, the suit of which it is part has been examined through and through, and judged worthy to bear the name.

Our Fifth Floor Department of Apparel for Men is so light, even upon the cloudiest day, that the most delicate colorings or patterns are distinct and the superiority of the processes employed by our craftsmen is readily distinguishable.

ACCUSES MAGISTRATE OF KEEPING CASH BAIL

Mrs. Donohue Says Higginbotham Took It to Release Her Husband but Failed.

PROSECUTOR INVESTIGATING

Implies That the Kings County Grand Jury Will Hear the Case—"Ridiculous," Magistrate Says.

Magistrate Higginbotham of the Bedford Avenue Court, Brooklyn, was charged yesterday before Judge Fawcett in the County Court with accepting $500 cash bail and failing to return it. According to Assistant District Attorney Elder, the Grand Jury will probably be called upon to investigate the case.

The accusations against the Magistrate developed when Mr. Elder moved before Judge Fawcett for the trial of William J. Donohue, who was arrested in June, 1908, charged with felonious assault upon John J. Bronk of 1,021 Putnam Avenue. Donohue was not in court, and his wife, Mrs. Mary J. Donohue, said he was in the observation ward of the Kings County Hospital, Flatbush.

Donohue was arraigned before Magistrate Higginbotham in the Bedford Avenue Court after his arrest and was held in $500 bail. Donohue's mother, Mrs. Julia Donohue, advanced the money, according to his wife's statement. A few days after his release Donohue gave evidence that his mind was unbalanced, and he was sent to the Kings County Hospital. The bail was then refunded. He had been there less than a week, said Mrs. Donohue, when she and her mother-in-law went to Magistrate Higginbotham to see if Donohue could be released. According to the story told by the women, they offered to renew the $500 bail to obtain his release. The money was paid to the Magistrate, they said, and he filled out an undertaking.

The two women presented the bond to the hospital authorities, but they refused to release Donohue. Returning to Magistrate Higginbotham, Donohue's wife and mother demanded their money, so they said. He told them he had the money in his safe, but intimated that they should employ a lawyer to get it released by the court. They told Judge Fawcett that they had tried several times since then to get their money, but that each time the Magistrate had put them off.

Judge Fawcett sent the two women to the District Attorney's office, and an investigation was at once begun by Mr. Elder. He learned from them that the last time they made the demand on Magistrate Higginbotham for their money was a week ago yesterday.

Mr. Elder remained only a short time in his office when he began a hunt for the missing $500. With Assistant District Attorney White and Magistrate Steers he entered a taxicab and drove to the Bedford Avenue Court. Mr. Elder saw the two clerks of the court, Daniel Quinn and John Gerhardt, and demanded access to the court safe. They said there was no safe in the court and that there never had been one, but that there was a safe in the Lee Avenue Court which was Magistrate Higginbotham's personal property. At the Lee Avenue Court Mr. Elder had the safe removed to the police station next door.

Mr. Elder declared that Magistrate Higginbotham's act was unlawful, and that it was safe to assume that the case would be placed before the Grand Jury.

"In the first place," said Mr. Elder, "Magistrate Higginbotham had no right to take cash bail. The City Chamberlain is the only official who can do it, and his certificate for the money should be presented to the Magistrate to show that cash instead of real property is offered for bail."

Mr. Elder said that the Donohue case was in the Grand Jury's hands, and therefore out of the Magistrate's jurisdiction on July 7, 1908, the date on which Mr. Donohue said the money was handed to him. An indictment was returned against Donohue a few days later.

When seen at his Summer home in Far Rockaway last night, Magistrate Higginbotham characterized Mrs. Donahue's charges as "ridiculous." He said that he had called on District Attorney Clarke and Assistant District Attorney Elder yesterday for the fifth time to tell them all he knew about the Donahue case.

"I don't think young Mrs. Donahue's mother-in-law will support her in the charges," he said. "Of course, the cash should have been deposited in the City Chamberlain's office. But this would have meant additional cost to Mrs. Donahue in attorneys' fees to get the money again. She begged me not to deposit the money. Her money has been in an iron safe in the Lee Avenue Court since July 7, and is still there."

FOR 38 FRENCH BATTLESHIPS.

New Programme Will Insure Republic Fourth Place Among Naval Powers.

PARIS, May 21.—The Superior Council of the Navy has decided upon a programme which includes bringing the number of French battleships up to thirty-eight, a total that would insure France fourth place among the naval powers of the world. It is proposed to lay down in 1910 two 21,000-ton vessels of an enlarged Danton type.

The armament has not yet been decided upon, but the Council is in favor of twelve 12-inch guns in six turrets, those aft to be superposed. The naval artillery experts, however, have brought forward arguments in favor of sixteen 10.8-inch guns in eight turrets.

They will have to organize a complete expedition, with pack horses and an escort, and they plan to be gone until next Fall.

The American Embassy has secured the necessary permission to travel in Turkestan.

LIBERIA ENTERTAINS ENVOYS.

American Commissioners So Feted That Work Is Interfered With.

MONROVIA, Liberia, Thursday, May 13, (via Sierra Leone, May 21.)—The members of the American Liberian Commission, R. P. Falkner, E. J. Scott, and Dr. George Sale, who arrived at Monrovia May 8 on board the scout cruiser Chester, have been busy since their arrival with the preliminaries to their investigation into conditions in the Liberian Republic. They are all in excellent health, but inclined to complain of the attentions and courtesies shown them on every hand, as the many invitations interfere with the work before them.

Last Sunday the Commissioners attended the Methodist Church and heard Bishop Scott preach. They were much impressed with the reverence of the congregation and the dignity of the service. Sunday evening the visitors and a number of distinguished guests were entertained at an informal dinner by Ernest Lyon, the American Minister Resident and Consul General. Speaking of Monrovia, one of the Commissioners described it as "a Southern city with a puritanical atmosphere."

Commander Henry B. Wilson of the Chester and the members of the commission were cordially received on May 10 by President Barclay and the members of the Cabinet. The Government has promised its hearty co-operation in the investigation, and the Legislature will be convened in special session to assist in the work. The night of the 10th there was an elaborate and formal dinner at the American Legation.

On May 12 the President of the republic gave a formal reception in honor of the American visitors. All the leading men of Liberia were present. The Commissioners, who had been living on board the Chester, have taken up their residence in Monrovia. This was done to avoid the necessity of going back and forth through the dangerous surf.

The enthusiasm over the commission continues everywhere, and the European residents are much interested in the investigation. The weather is beautiful.

The scout cruiser Birmingham came into port May 13. She accompanied the Chester across the Atlantic, but was delayed several days at Cape Verde Islands making repairs to her boilers. She is now in good condition.

ROOSEVELTS BAG BUFFALOES.

Kermit Shares Honors—Two Gazelles Sent as Presents to Mrs. Roosevelt.

NAIROBI, British East Africa, May 21.—Theodore Roosevelt and his son Kermit are continuing their hunting excursions from their camp on the Heatley ranch, on the Nairobi River.

Two bull buffaloes have fallen before their guns. One, the bigger of the two, was brought down by Mr. Roosevelt alone, while the other was bagged by Mr. Roosevelt and Kermit together.

Two young gazelles are now on their way to Oyster Bay from East Africa as a present from the ex-President to Mrs. Roosevelt. They were obtained for Mr. Roosevelt by Capt. Doherr of the German East African Company's liner Admiral, and were allowed to wander freely around the decks. The gazelles are said to belong to the Dorcas species, and are two very handsome, harmless creatures, and quite suitable for household pets. An animal dealer, who was consulted yesterday regarding the advent of the gazelles to this country, said that it would no doubt create a craze for the animals as pets.

Gazelles can eat green stuff, corn, and the like—in fact, the same sort of food as a sheep, he said, and are fond of bananas and dates. They are sometimes a little troublesome in the Spring, when they are full grown and possess horns, but at other times they are quite gentle and follow their owners about like pet dogs. They generally live from ten to twelve years in captivity.

STEAMER FREE FROM ICE.

The Mongolian Has Another Bad Night, but Goes to Clear Water.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 21.—The Allan Line steamer Mongolian early to-day freed herself from the ice pack off the entrance to St. John's Harbor, in which she had been imprisoned for two days. She made no attempt to enter St. John's Harbor, but worked off shore, and, making slow progress through the heavy drift ice, went to a point off Bay Bulls, 18 miles south. At Bay Bulls she found that the harbor was completely packed with ice, and she then started south for the open water beyond Cape Race.

When she reached Cape Race the agents of the Allan Line here signaled instructions to Capt. Williams to proceed to Halifax and land the few passengers originally destined for St. John's, together with the 200 tons of cargo consigned to this port.

The heavy easterly swell which set in last night broke up the ice pack and enabled the Mongolian to shake herself free. All night there was constant commotion in the great field, the big bergs twisting and turning, and the pressure on the steamer was greater than before. Dawn revealed open water within a few miles of the steamer, and a little later a lead opened through which the Mongolian steamed.

STEPHENSON OFF THE FORCE.

Court Upholds Removal of Police Captain for Neglect of Duty.

Ex-Capt. John T. Stephenson, who has thrice been dismissed from the police force and twice reinstated by the Appellate Division, failed yesterday in his third attempt to get back when the higher court decided that this time Capt. Stephenson had been properly removed by Police Commissioner Bingham.

Capt. Stephenson was attached to the Arsenal Station, in Central Park, when charges of neglect of duty and violation of the rules of the department were made against him by Inspector Schmittberger. After trial, Stephenson was found guilty and dismissed. The principal charge against him was failure to visit parts of his precinct.

TO ALTER HUNTINGTON HOUSE

Cornell Club, Its New Tenant, Will Spend $20,000 in Changes.

Rossiter & Wright, architects for the Cornell University Club, have filed plans for remodeling the old Collis P. Huntington house, which the Directors of the club have leased for a term of years from Mrs. Huntington. The changes are to be made at a cost of $20,000. The basement will contain a café and billiard room. The first floor will have a library and cardroom on one side and a dining room and reception room on the other.

A feature of the building will be the sitting rooms, of which there are to be half a dozen, the fourth floor being entirely apportioned for this use. There will be cardrooms and sitting rooms on the second floor also.

The other floors will be devoted to living rooms.

REGRET DIVORCE INCREASE

Urge States to Seek Closest Possible Uniformity in Laws—Social Conditions Fast Destroying Home Life.

DENVER, May 21.—Among the reports presented to the Presbyterian General Assembly to-day was that of the Special Committee on Sabbath Observance. The report says that the battle for the maintenance of the American Christian Sabbath the last year has been more aggressive than ever.

"Not only," says the report, "have the friends of the Sabbath met with concentrated opposition from interests which we always find inimical to the Sabbath, but the last year we have been saddened by the fact that in an important battle in New York State we have encountered the opposition of some ministers of the Gospel."

The report continues: "Various cities of the United States have been aroused concerning the Sabbath as perhaps in no one year during the last half century. Chicago, New York, Louisville, Newark, Baltimore, Atlantic City, and others have agitated this question of such vital moment to the municipality and to the Nation."

On the Sabbath question the committee commends Canada's aim for 1909 as the world's motto:

> That no employer for gain shall demand unnecessary work on the Lord's Day of any employe.
>
> That no employe for gain shall willingly work at unnecessary work on any Lord's Day.
>
> That every person who works on the Lord's Day at any work of real necessity shall have a full day of rest that week; and that no person shall be called upon to work on two successive Lord's Days.

In conclusion the committee recommends the adoption of the following resolutions:

> That the General Assembly expresses its strong conviction that the sacred character of the Sabbath must be carefully and strenuously maintained, and to this end enjoins all ministers, officers, and members of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America to exercise special care and faithfulness, and discourage holding funerals on that day.
>
> That the General Assembly reiterates its strong and emphatic disapproval of all secular uses of the day, all games and sports, in civic as also in army and navy; all unnecessary traveling and all excursions, and urges upon all employers of labor and captains of industry to recognize the need of the laboring man for his weekly rest day, and thereby insure his greater efficiency and happiness and the greater prosperity of both capital and labor.
>
> That the General Assembly urges on all families not to buy anything on the Sabbath, to plan for their servants on the Sabbath, and to help them to fulfill their religious duties, and to pay laborers so that they may have Saturday afternoon to make provision for the Sabbath.
>
> That this assembly heartily indorses the plan of the Saturday half holiday, and recognizes it as tending to the better observance of the Sabbath.
>
> That the General Assembly hereby reiterates its emphatic condemnation of the Sunday newspaper, and urges the members of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America to refuse to subscribe for it or read it or advertise in it.
>
> That the General Assembly respectfully requests the Faculties of colleges and seminaries, if the way be clear, to omit recitations on Monday mornings, so as to leave the Sabbath free from the felt necessity of some of the students to prepare their lessons on that day.

The special Committee on Marriage and Divorce calls attention to the alarming increase in the number of divorces granted, as shown by the Government census.

"There is a strong sentiment yet against the enactment of a National law regulating marriage and divorce, owing to the jealousy of States to preserve their rights. But the States should seek the closest possible uniformity, and secure the least possible perplexity and the best results for the purity of our people and for the peace and prosperity of our Christian Nation."

The home is being secularized, according to the report of the Special Committee on Religious Education, and as a consequence there is a pressing duty facing the Presbyterian Church.

"The social and industrial conditions of the present day are depriving our homes, even our Christian homes, of some of their most beneficent features," the report says. "The family room and the family lamp have disappeared from many homes.

"In the present condition of family life the hope that the home will supply the deficiencies of the day school in the matter of formal religious instruction is a vanishing one. It is a struggle for the home to maintain in any fair degree its own religious atmosphere and discharge its own function in the matter of the nurture of the youth."

Dr. J. D. Moffatt, President of Washington and Jefferson College of Pittsburg, submitted the report of the Special Committee on Administrative Agencies, and asked that it be made a special order for Monday afternoon. This was granted.

This committee has been at work upon the proposition of consolidating the work of the eight administrative boards since the General Assembly of 1905, and upon each report has met with such strong opposition that consolidation and the closer harmony sought by what is known as the Cleveland overture has seemed further away than ever.

FINDS US STILL PURITAN.

This Basis of Anti-Plutocratic Movement in America, Says Ferrero.

PARIS, May 21.—Continuing his letters in the Figaro, Signor Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian who recently visited the United States, undertakes to explain to-day the moral upheaval in America of the last few years against some "methods of high finance." He says that Europe, to comprehend America and the crises preparing there, should not confound the anti-plutocratic movement with European Socialism.

After reviewing the immense sensation caused by the crusade of individual writers and official inquiries and prosecutions into matters of industry and finance, which, he says, have made Europe believe that America was a seething caldron of moral corruption, Signor Ferrero insists that a close examination compels a different conclusion. He gives it as his opinion that while the anti-plutocratic movement was fostered by the jealousies of the middle classes toward the rich and borrowed many catch words from Socialism, the fundamental idea was to prove that America, so often accused of materialism, was still strongly inspired by puritanical traditions and democratic instincts.

"Those who know the political and economic history of Europe," the Italian continues, "know also that analogous conditions in Europe have been denounced thousands of times without arousing a moral agitation to be compared in intensity with that which has arisen in America. Here, when such revelations were not used for political purposes, they degenerated into mere intellectual protests. Philosophers find that immorality and corruption in modern society are forces which lead to better things, but the masses in America are not imbued with such a profound philosophy. There, remembering the simple, austere days, the reaction is instinctive against moral disorder.

"It is the protest of elementary morality," Signor Ferrero writes, "that is imbedded in every soul not blinded by passions nor perverted by vice, against the artificial and sophisticated methods of the higher civilization. History affords nothing more tragic than this battle between elementary and eternal morality, and the passions and interests of a complex civilization. Europe does not appreciate the grandeur of this struggle because its living is obtained by artificial compromises."

BIG-NAVY MEN WIN.

Four Additional Dreadnoughts to be Laid Down, It Is Said.

LONDON, May 21.—Premier Asquith, Foreign Secretary Grey, and popular opinion, according to The Pall Mall Gazette, have overcome the scruples of the ultra-economists in the Ministry in the matter of the naval programme. The Pall Mall says the Cabinet has decided that the four contingent Dreadnoughts mentioned in the naval estimates shall be laid down before the end of the financial year.

Addressing a gathering of Australasians here to-night on the naval question, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford urged that the colonies, instead of contributing toward the building of a Dreadnought should build cruisers to protect their trade and commerce, and to form the nucleus of navies of their own after the example of Japan, which a half century ago was fighting with tortoise shell armor and bows and arrows. This, he said, should not be difficult for the colonies. What the British Empire wanted was a navy that was able to go out and attack, and to protect trade routes. He considered that "our insane advertising of Dreadnoughts" offended other nations and involved Europe in a terribly expensive naval competition.

RUNAWAY MATCH ENDS HAPPILY HERE

Miss Rives, 17, Wouldn't Wait a Year to Marry Her Childhood Sweetheart.

WED ON A SHOPPING TRIP

Young Pendleton Followed Miss Rives to Atlanta—Her Father Brings Them His Blessing Here.

A runaway marriage had a happy ending at the Hotel Astor yesterday when, after an elaborate luncheon in the palm room Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Pendleton, who live near Augusta, Ga., started in an automobile for Atlantic City with the blessing of Mrs. Pendleton's father and a well-filled pocketbook to provide for a pleasant honeymoon.

Mrs. Pendleton is the daughter of Richard C. Rives, a planter whose home is about nine miles from Augusta. Her mother has been dead since she was a small child. She is not 18. After the death of her mother her old colored "mammy," who had been a servant in the house for two generations, was put in charge of the child while Mr. Rives went on frequent business trips to New York and other places.

The Pendletons lived near the Rives home, and frequent visits were exchanged. The Pendletons had a son, Samuel, who since childhood had been a warm admirer of Miss Rives.

Last Fall Miss Rives went to boarding school for the first time, and it was believed by the parents of the young couple that this separation would probably break up the love affair. But young Mr. Pendleton and Miss Rives corresponded and made other plans.

Miss Rives returned to the plantation several weeks ago. After having a talk with young Pendleton, they decided that they would get married. In fear they approached Mr. Rives on the subject. Miss Rives told her father that she had had enough of school and wanted to get married. There was no objection on the score of family, nor was there any objection on account of the financial standing of the two families, but Mr. Rives thought there was one very serious objection. Mr. Pendleton was barely 21 years old and Miss Rives had just reached her eighteenth year. Mr. Rives thought they were too young to be married, and told them so. However, in order to encourage them to look to the future, he informed them that if after waiting a year they were of the same opinion he would give his consent.

Last Monday Miss Rives told her father it was necessary for her to have some Summer clothes, and it was arranged that she should go to Atlanta and get them. Accompanied by "Mammy" Jane, they started out for the Georgia capital, and arrived there Monday night, stopping at a hotel in the shopping district.

In accordance with a previous arrangement young Pendleton arrived in Atlanta Tuesday morning and managed to see Miss Rives alone. It did not take him long to tell her of the plan he had on foot. They gave "Mammy" Jane the slip and went off to be married. After the knot had been tied they went to the hotel and told "Mammy" Jane what they had done. While she was getting over an attack of hysterics they telegraphed to Mr. Rives, informing him that they were going to New York for a wedding trip and would "return in a few weeks for his blessing."

But Mr. Rives did not wait for the "few weeks." He came to this city immediately and arrived at the Hotel Astor, where, he had been informed, the young couple could be found. He gave them a severe scolding, then quickly relented under the tears of the young bride. He arranged a luncheon to celebrate the event, gave the couple a handsome present in money, hired a big automobile, and started them off to Atlantic City to enjoy themselves.

Let Us Show You Men's Summer Suits With INDIVIDUALITY

A STONE-CUTTER MAY DO PERFECTLY GOOD WORK on perfectly good stone and produce a result that is perfectly good—and conventional.

A sculptor will use the same tools and produce—something different.

Loeser Clothes are made sculptor-wise.

That is to say, they have originality, ideas, individuality back of their designing and craftsmanship.

The materials are unquestionably fine—and guaranteed. The tailor work is done by trained and careful workmen, who know no other processes except the slow and thorough ones that make GOOD Clothes.

And there is the ADDED merit of individuality—the something that makes a man well dressed even though you cannot just define it.

Let us show you summer Clothes with this individuality—this SPECIAL excellence.

There are serges, plain and fancy. There are worsteds and unfinished fabrics—every color note and every sort of pattern for every man.

AND THE COST IS NO MORE THAN ORDINARY COST OF ORDINARY CLOTHES—and very often less.

Prices range between $12.50 and $35.

Main Floor. Elm Place.

$1 Silk Gloves at 55c.
16 Button Mousquetaires.

PERFECTLY WOVEN double tipped silk Gloves, in the sixteen button mousquetaire style; up to the Loeser standard in every detail. Silk Gloves that would usually sell at a dollar a pair, now for 55c.

Tans, browns, pongees, purple, white and black.

Main Floor.

Misses' Wash Frocks---$4.98.

THE COOL FRESH GINGHAM and pique dresses that every girl needs for summer, AND LESS THAN FIVE DOLLARS APIECE FOR THEM.

That is as interesting Saturday news as we could very well print.

They have just been finished for us by one of the best makers in the country. He has used the fine Anderson ginghams in very smart fast color patterns for some of them. One-piece effects with fancy handkerchief collar and bias band down front, finished with pearl buttons. Full length sleeves and gored skirt. Another style is of dotted pique with Dutch neck and trimming of pin tucking and braid in ornamental design.

Second Floor, Front.

$1.25 Fancy 36 Inch Striped Silks at 88c.

CONSISTENT WITH THE OTHER GOOD SILK VALUES which have occurred here in the past few weeks.

Yard wide fancy stripe silks in a range of splendid color combinations, including black and white, blue and white, brown and white, reseda and white and others. The Silks are of a fine quality for dresses, waists, skirts or for lining purposes.

Main Floor, Bond Street.

$14.50 Imported Hand-Made 3-Piece Bridal Sets at $10.

THERE ARE ONLY ABOUT 25 of these lovely three-piece Sets at this low price, so those most anxious to secure summer Underwear Sets at a clear saving of $4.50 will need to be here early this morning.

All are hand made and hand embroidered. They are of a very fine soft nainsook, prettily trimmed. The gown has a small circular yoke of hand embroidery in unusually graceful, dainty designs, finished with eyelets and ribbon. The chemise is carried out in the same style as the gown, also having the round neck. The drawers have a deep embroidery ruffle which opens at the side, the pattern of the embroidery matching that of the other two pieces. Just the sort of fine French Bridal Sets that many a bride-to-be will want to fill out her summer trousseau.

Second Floor.

Very New and Dainty Are These $3.75 and $6 Waists---$2.98 and $4.98.

FRENCH LAWN AND LINGERIE WAISTS, each with a touch of color, in such dainty fashion as you might expect to find in the little and exclusive Paris waist shops—though these are American Waists.

Those at $2.98 are of French lawn in colored stripes—navy blue, green and lavender, open in front, with various pretty styles of tuckings and plaitings.

Those at $4.98 are of the sheerest batiste with colored silk embroidery, in a number of the daintiest styles imaginable. This is combined with fine Valenciennes lace and pin tucking. Some have high neck and others the pretty Dutch neck.

Second Floor, Bond Street.

$3.50 Leather Table Covers, $1.98.

SELDOM HAVE WE HAD a more artistic or attractive lot of Leather Table Covers in an underpriced sale.

These are in the soft shades of green, tan and red, with grape and autumn leaf decorations.

Studio, Second Floor.

$15,000 VERDICT FOR MISS PECORA

Jury Decides Quickly for Girl Led to Sign a Release Instead of a Marriage Contract.

DEFENDANT QUITS COURT

Del Gaudio, Manager of a Medical Institute, Does Not Wait to Hear Verdict Against Him.

One of the largest verdicts recorded in the City Court in a breach of promise suit was returned by a jury before Justice La Fetra yesterday, when $15,000 was awarded to Rosina Pecora, a dressmaker, in her action to recover $25,000 from Salvadore Del Gaudio, manager of a medical institute at 30 West Twenty-ninth Street. The jury took only thirty minutes to come to a decision.

Through an interpreter, Miss Pecora who is an Italian, thanked the jurymen, and with tears received the congratulations of those in the court who had been present throughout the trial. After the charge by Justice La Fetra, Del Gaudio left the courtroom and was not present when the jury returned.

Miss Pecora was on the stand most of Thursday and part of yesterday, telling her story. She and Del Gaudio were sweethearts in Naples, she declared, and he asked her to marry him there. She then described her subsequent trip to America. Here he continued to pay her attention, she said, although he told her he had a love affair with an American girl. After it was fixed up, she said he told her, they would be married. She agreed to this, she testified, but after waiting many months with no prospect of a wedding she brought suit for breach of promise in October, 1907. Not long after this, she alleged, he asked her to come to his office, in West Twenty-ninth Street, where she signed a paper she said he told her was a marriage contract. She expressed surprise at this way of conducting a wedding, but was told it was "the way they did it in America." Then they lived together for a number of months, when one day he informed her that she was not his wife, and that he was already married. Then he left her.

Del Gaudio, who denied that he ever promised to marry the girl, was put through a severe cross-examination for four hours yesterday by ex-Judge of the City Court Palmieri.

"You have said," Mr. Palmieri remarked, "that you were not engaged to Miss Pecora. If that is so, what do you mean by writing to her as follows: 'Tell me, my dear Rosina, would it be a vain hope for me if within two months I should have you by my side?'"

"It was just a little pleasantry," the witness replied.

"And how about this," continued the lawyer, "when you wrote to her 'To reply immediately and receive one million strong, strong kisses on your lips only on account of those you will receive when you are with me?'"

The witness made no answer to this.

Del Gaudio testified that he had loved Miss Pecora in 1904 and 1905, but that he ceased to do so in 1906. He said she signed the release for a $40 consideration, and that he had on several occasions loaned money both to the plaintiff and her sister. Miss Pecora was recalled to the stand and denied that he ever gave her $40 or loaned her money. She said that the only money she ever received from him was $10 or $15 with which to buy a dress.

Andrew S. Fraser, counsel for the defendant, in summing up his case, said that the paper signed by Miss Pecora was "a general release," and that she knew it at the time.

Ex-Judge Palmieri, in closing his argument for Miss Pecora, said:

"They tell me that this defendant transferred all of his property to his sister, but I promise you that if you give a verdict in favor of my client I will follow Del Gaudio to his grave or until he pays every cent!"

The defendant's counsel appealed for a stay, which was refused. He was given thirty days in which to prepare an appeal.

KEENAN NOT IN CONTEMPT.

Chamberlain's Refusal to Turn Over State Money Upheld by Court.

By a unanimous decision yesterday the Appellate Division affirmed the order of the lower court denying the application of the Attorney General to punish City Chamberlain Keenan for contempt of court on the ground that he had failed to comply with an order requiring him to turn over to the State all moneys that had remained in his hands for a period of twenty years or more, and which had been unclaimed during that period.

The Appellate Division held that Chamberlain Keenan had complied with the order, so far as he could, but that he could not pay over the remainder until he had first ascertained that it had remained "unclaimed for twenty years or more."

The amount involved is said to be several hundred thousand dollars, and came into the hands of the City Chamberlain in a large part from unclaimed estates and from persons who died without wills and whose heirs cannot be found.

BRIDGE LOOP SOON READY.

But Can't Be Used for at Least Two Years—Waits on City Building.

The $10,000,000 bridge loop subway, which is to connect the Brooklyn and Williamsburg Bridges with a spur to the Manhattan Bridge, is practically completed, according to information obtained yesterday, with the exception of the southernmost section connecting with the Brooklyn Bridge.

That section as planned is to have a station underneath the new Municipal Building, at Centre and Chambers Streets and Park Row. The station cannot be put in until the foundations for the building have been laid, and some months ago at the suggestion of Mayor McClellan the Public Service Commission had work on this section stopped. The contracts of the contractors on the other sections originally called for the completion of the work by the 1st of last January, but the Public Service Commission extended them until Aug. 1.

It is now estimated that the bridge loop subway will have to remain idle for at least two years on account of the delay occasioned by the Municipal Building, the foundations of which will not have been completed inside of eighteen months.

CARS BETWEEN SUBWAY ENDS

To Run on and After May 29—Transfers to Subway Trains.

Under alterations in route for which the Public Service Commission gave its permission yesterday to the New York City Interborough Company a line of surface cars will shortly be operated from the newly opened 238th Street station of the Subway on the Broadway-Van Cortlandt line to the terminus of the branch of the Subway which runs to Bronx Park.

At present the New York City Interborough cars leave 181st Street, where there is a Subway station, and get into the Bronx across Washington Bridge. After May 29 that line will run no further eastward than Kingsbridge Road and Aqueduct Avenue.

Two transfer points will be established, one between the lines of the New York City Interborough at Kingsbridge Road and Aqueduct Avenue, and the other, on the basis of an eight-cent fare, between the Interborough Rapid Transit's line and the New York City Interborough line at 238th Street.

TYSON FINED FOR SPEEDING.

Man Under Bail on Manslaughter Charge a "Second Offender."

John H. Tyson of 33 East Seventy-second Street, who is now out on $10,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter for running down Oluf Gunderson, a steward of the Columbia Yacht Club on Amsterdam Avenue, near Eighty-fifth Street, last year, was fined $50 yesterday in Special Sessions for automobile speeding, as a second offender.

Tyson was arrested in February, 1908, by Policeman Frank Rickert, who swore that the prisoner's own speedometer showed that he was going twenty miles an hour.

COURT LETS MORRISON GO.

Girl Fails to Press Charge That He Tossed a Note Into Her Berth.

Magistrate Herbert discharged John Morrison, the Chicago traveling man, who was alleged to have thrown a note into the berth of Miss Mary Kenney on a New York Central Buffalo express train last Sunday morning, after a hearing yesterday afternoon in the Essex Market Court, because the plaintiff did not appear in court. A policeman detailed on the case reported that he had been unable to find her. The Magistrate remarked that he was "forced reluctantly" to let Morrison go.

John C. Kenney of 367 West Fifty-sixth Street, who said he was the girl's brother, testified, but his evidence, being only hearsay, was thrown out. George Robnison, the colored porter on the train, also failed to furnish satisfactory testimony.

Gilsey House Under New Management.

The John H. Fife Company has taken over the unexpired lease of the Gilsey House, Broadway and Twenty-ninth Street, from the Broadway and Twenty-ninth Street Company. The building and furnishings are owned by the estate of Peter Gilsey. The hotel was erected by Peter Gilsey some forty-two years ago, and was leased to the late James H. Breslin, who operated the hotel for upward of thirty years. The ground has been owned by the Anderson estate for more than eighty years, having passed down to the third generation without being mortgaged.

Cadets at Sandy Hook for Gun Tests.

A detachment of 100 cadets from the United States Military Academy at West Point went to the Sandy Hook Proving Grounds yesterday, to remain there several days. They came to New York and were transferred to the army steamer Gen. Meigs, which took them to the Hook. At the Proving Grounds the cadets will be instructed in the workings of the great pieces of ordnance now being tested there. there.

John T. Not a Brother of C. E. Sexton.

The name of John T. Sexton, a Director of the Dowd Lumber Company of 627 East Eighteenth Street, appeared by mistake in THE TIMES yesterday morning as a brother of Charles E. Sexton, who committed suicide at the Grand Union Hotel on Thursday night. Mr. Sexton says he was no relative of Charles E. Sexton and did not know him.

PRISONER TELLS OF TWO-ACTION TORPEDO

Zaccheus Favor Says His Invention Explodes Twice and Demolishes Everything It Hits.

ARMY OFFICER NOT AFRAID

Cynically Hopes the Terrible Thing Will Not Get Lost Down on Plum Island.

Zaccheus Favor, former private in the Coast Artillery Corps, United States Army, now serving a sentence of two years in Castle Williams on Governors Island for desertion, is about to apply for a patent for a death-dealing missile, which he and his friends in the prison, as well as a firm of New York lawyers, who have agreed to exploit it, declare to be the most destructive engine of warfare ever invented. While refusing to give any technical details of his deadly device, Favor describes it in general as a flying electrical torpedo that explodes twice, once when it strikes the object against which it is fired, and a second time after it has entered the object that is to be destroyed.

Favor is about 23 years old, and yesterday said that he had been working on his double-action torpedo for about four years. He admitted that he had enlisted in the army to learn all about torpedoes, and after he had gained what he considered a thorough knowledge of them he decided it was time to quit the army and sell his invention. He did quit, but the Government caught him, and he was court-martialed and sentenced to Castle Williams.

When not mowing the lawns, grinding bones to make fertilizer, sweeping the walks, or shoveling coal, Favor says that he has spent all of his spare time perfecting his invention. Day before yesterday he turned over the plans and specifications to his New York lawyers, who will immediately apply to the Patent Office in Washington for a patent. If that is granted the lawyers will look around for some Government to which to sell the secret of the invention.

The imprisoned inventor said yesterday that he had been indirectly approached by a foreign Government, but that he had declined to enter into negotiations for the present.

"Though I am a prisoner sent here by the Government of my own country, I am still patriotic enough to want my native land to have the first chance at this torpedo," he said.

"What do you shoot the thing from?" Favor was asked.

"Ah," he answered, "there is the secret of the whole thing. It is shot from nothing at all. There are no tubes, such as are used in firing the Whiteheads. It is like a great electrical bird, and it soars through the air. It can be fired from anywhere, and is just as effective for land defense as for sending warships to the bottom of the sea.

"Speaking of warships, one well-placed projectile that can be fired from a distance of ten miles, if it strikes the ship, will send the ship and all the men in her to the bottom. This torpedo of mine is a double exploding affair. That is, it explodes first to effect an entrance into the ship or fortification, and once inside it goes off again to finish the job."

"Suppose you fired one of them at a regiment of soldiers, what would happen to the soldiers?" Favor was asked.

"It would kill every blessed one of 'em," answered Favor.

"Would anything be left for the second explosion?"

"No, that would just scatter about what was left," added the inventor.

"Suppose you set one off in the cellar of one of New York's big buildings, what would be the finish?"

"There would not be enough of that building left to fill a cigar box," responded the inventor proudly.

Favor said he would deal through his attorneys, pending his release from prison.

When an officer of the army was told about the birdlike electrical double firing torpedo, he said:

"Is it not terrible; I hope one of them will not get lost down there at Plum Island."

REOPENS MRS. BATONYI'S SUIT

Not to Blame, Says Court, for Absence of the Co-respondent at Trial.

Supreme Court Justice Gildersleeve decided yesterday that Mrs. Fanny Burke-Roche Batonyi may open the default taken against her in the suit for divorce, which she brought against Aurel Batonyi, the whip. She must, however, pay a $30 trial fee and $10 costs.

When the suit was brought to trial before Justice Platzek and a jury, W. M. K. Olcott, counsel for Mrs. Batonyi, refused to go on in the absence of a woman witness, whom he described as the principal co-respondent, with the result that the court dismissed Mrs. Batonyi's complaint.

An inquest was then taken on the countersuit of Batonyi, who asked for a separation from his wife. By direction, the jury returned a verdict in favor of Batonyi, who took the stand and denied his wife's charges of infidelity. Justice Gildersleeve in his decision says:

"There is no doubt of the materiality of the evidence to be given by the missing witness, while the plaintiff was guilty of no negligence in trying to secure the presence of said witness, having subpoenaed her twice. The said witness contumaciously disobeyed the subpoena and had left the State when the case came up for trial. The plaintiff intends in good faith to prosecute the action, and I think the motion should be granted."

SULSBACHER BAILED AGAIN.

He Is to Face Charges of Minor Forgery and Larceny Next.

Joseph H. Sulsbacher, the stock broker, who was acquitted early yesterday morning before Judge Malone, in General Sessions, of a charge of bribing a witness against him to leave the jurisdiction of the court, appeared again later in the day before Judge Foster, and gave $4,000 bail on two other indictments still pending.

The charges are for forgery in the third degree and grand larceny in connection with alleged irregular stock transactions on the account of Camille J. Ludmann. It is stated in the indictment that Sulsbacher made $50 profit out of the transaction.

James W. Osborne, counsel for Sulsbacher, said later that the Ludmann transaction, which the indictments covered, was all thrashed out in the late trial and explained fully to the jury by Anson McCook Beard.

"I feel confident," he added, "that the sense of justice of the District Attorney of this county will compel him within a short time to discharge Sulsbacher on his own recognizance, so far as the Ludmann charge is concerned. No indictment was found on this until April, 1909, when the period affecting them under the Statute of Limitations was just about to expire."

MRS. THAW FIGHTS BIG FEE.

Wants Hartridge to Itemize $195,736 Claim for Defending Harry Thaw.

Abram J. Rose, as counsel for Mrs. Copley Thaw, mother of Harry Thaw, moved before Judge Hough in the United States Circuit Court yesterday for a bill of particulars in the suit of Clifford W. Hartridge to recover $125,000 counsel fees and $70,736 disbursements in connection with his services in defending Harry Thaw for the murder of Stanford White.

Judge Hough allowed thirty days for the filing of the bill of particulars, which, it is understood, will contain data bearing upon the expense accounts of 300 persons employed on the Thaw case.

Transit Act Hearing To-day.

Public Service Commissioner Bassett will go to Albany to-day to argue before Gov. Hughes the commission's attitude on the Travis-Robinson bill, amending the Rapid Transit act so as to allow the construction of subways by private capital on the principle of the indeterminate franchise and profit-sharing with the city.

Loving Cup for Mrs. McLean.

ANNAPOLIS, May 21.—A committee of eight midshipmen went to Washington to-day to present to Mrs. John R. McLean of that city a handsome loving cup. The cup was voted to Mrs. McLean as an appreciation of her intended entertainment of the midshipmen on March 4. She had invited them to be her guests at dinner after the inauguration, but Annapolis was snowbound, and Mrs. McLean and her elaborate luncheon waited in vain.

Duffy Prison Sentence Affirmed.

The sentence of not more than four years and three months and not less than two years and three months in Sing Sing imposed by Judge Rosalsky in General Sessions on Frank Duffy, former Democratic Captain of the Seventeenth Election District of the Seventeenth Assembly District, for aiding and abetting illegal registration in the election of 1907, was affirmed yesterday by the Appellate Division. Duffy had been out on bail pending the appeal.

Straw Hat Sale

12,000 Straw Hats at About Half Price

These hats are from one of the best makers in Baltimore, the home of the finest straw hats. Most of these hats were intended to retail at $3 & $4. All were made for summer 1909. There are over 30 different shapes to become every face, in all sizes from 6½ to 7⅝.

Brill stores bought these hats underprice because they agreed with the maker to buy his surplus stock, over-orders, samples and hats cancelled by jobbers and retailers.

Brill stores sell these hats to you as they bought them—WAY UNDER PRICE.

3,000 Straw Hats, $1.50 Grade, Sale Price, 95c
4,000 Straw Hats, $2 & $2.50 Grades, Sale Price, $1.40
5,000 Straw Hats, $3, $4 & $5 Grades, Sale Price, $1.95

This is the first time that any concern anywhere right at the season's beginning ever offered so great a quantity of strictly high grade straw hats underprice. Straw hat prices are maintained—often by agreement among wholesalers and retailers—until July 1st at the earliest. Even then prices are not cut to anywhere near the low figure Brill stores ask now for these high grade straw hats.

Men's $1.75 to $2.50 Shirts for $1.25

Adams Building, First Floor.

All silk, silk-and-linen, mohair, soisette, light weight flannel—and to each purchaser we shall give his initial already embroidered to attach to the shirt sleeves or pocket, as shown in the illustration—a Parisian fad among men.

There are two distinct styles—Shirts with soft collars, or with regular shirt bands. All of them are finished with the soft, regular or French turn-back cuffs. There are all sizes, 14 to 18.

Veils & Veilings

Both Buildings—First Floor

The greatest novelty in an automobile veil is not only exceedingly striking but exceedingly comfortable.

There are two styles of it:

Two different mesh veils, in contrasting colors, with a hemstitched chiffon-cloth border, about 1½ by 2½ yards; and a mesh veil, over a veil of chiffon-cloth—these, too, in contrasting colors, each style is $6.95.

Another almost as exclusive a novelty, is the ombre veil, which shades from a dark to an exceedingly delicate shade of mauve, or pink—or any color you like. These delicate and beautiful things are $4.95 each.

Lace veils are in good demand, and the scroll designs in Chantilly and Lierre laces are the most sought, 50c.

Chiffon Cloth veils, 1½ yards long, are 50c, 95c, $1.25 and $1.95.

Some 75c Russian mesh veils are 38c a yard, in the new combination colors; taupe, brown, green, catawba, wistaria, black and white.

Some regular 25c veiling is 15c.

Fancy net veiling, including the hair-line, Russian and hexagon meshes; dotted effects in black, and this spring's colors.

We got them to sell for so little, because we can sell so much.

Untrimmed Millinery

O'Neill Building—Second Floor.

Styles have drifted, just as we said they would, to black and burnt straw. Both mushroom and hats with brims are good. We have some medium small new mushroom shapes, made of burnt straw and black chip, at 65c.

And some Neapolitan black hats at 95c., which you can't duplicate for that price anywhere.

Sample hats, ready to wear, and less than half price—$1.50 each.

Children's simply trimmed hats, $1.25.

Banded sailor hats, and the newest mushroom hats, in black straw, $1.45 and $1.95.

Imported flowers, 25c.—probably worth three or four times that.

White lilacs, hydrangeas, bluets, daisies, foliage, roses and sprays.

CLUBBING CUSTOMERS.

So far there has been no serious discussion of the Aldrich plan for a dual tariff, the famous maximum and minimum scheme from which vaguely many advantages are promised. Before the Senate drops the subject that amazing contrivance will have to be examined carefully.

Its actual purpose is plain enough. It is intended to force other nations to give us as low rates as are given to any of our rivals under the penalty of having our rates against them made prohibitive. Nothing else or less than this can be made of it. In connection with this threat of bulldozing all the reciprocal provisions of the Dingley tariff, by which a few of its worst features were tempered for the nations that gave us concessions, are to be done away with. The "minimum" is to be extremely high, and no power is lodged anywhere in the Government to reduce it by a fraction of 1 per cent. The element of persuasion, of inducement, is to be taken out of our trade relations with foreign countries, and nothing but naked coercion, harsh and unashamed, is to be left.

Nor is this the worst of this stupid, coarse policy. If the alternative to the increased rates which are threatened were reasonable rates, with which our customers could do some business, it would not be so bad. But these rates—after the Dingley modifications are abolished—will, in a great proportion of our foreign commerce, be practically prohibitory. That is to say, they will be so high as to make it very hard to compete with our own manufacturers. On the other hand, Germany and France—at whom this policy is aimed—will be driven to make the barriers to American goods as nearly impassable as may be. The professed purpose of our scheme—to force foreign nations to be good to us—will encounter the greatest practicable resistance. International trade will be cut down wherever the influence of our bullying policy is felt.

The result, necessarily, will be to drive our customers to other markets, where these can be found. For some important branches of exports such markets can be found readily across our northern border. In food stuffs, in agricultural machinery, and, to a steadily increasing extent, in varied manufactures, Canada can enter the French markets on better terms than we can secure under the Aldrich plan. She has a treaty far more favorable than we can hope to get without actual resort to coercion, while even with successful coercion, our markets would still be largely closed to French trade. This is but a single instance. They would multiply on every hand if we should really apply Mr. ALDRICH's policy of hunting trade with a club.

A SENATOR EMANCIPATED.

Senator DEPEW has had the happy thought to give to the public in more readable form than that of The Congressional Record a little speech he made on the Census bill. It will be remembered by our readers that this bill replaced one vetoed by President ROOSEVELT and provided for the selection of employés of the Census Bureau, in connection with the Thirteenth Census, by competition. This provision Senator DEPEW heartily approved.

He recalled, with a characteristic touch of humor, his experience with appointments previous to the last census. These were distributed among Senators and Representatives:

> Under that distribution I received 12 appointments. As soon as it became known I had 800 applications. I had no means of ascertaining by any sort of an examination the merits of the 800, so that out of them I might select 12 who could properly perform the duties of the places for which they were applicants.
> But that was only the beginning of my trouble. The party organization in each one of the 61 counties of the State demanded its share of the 12 appointments. I then was confronted with the question how I could keep my party status with 61 counties and only 12 offices to assign. The net result of the whole matter was that I appointed 12 people.

When their work was done in the census he was expected to find other places for them. And they were but a small squad in an invading army of office seekers. More than half of his time during sessions of the Senate was consumed by them, and he had no leisure at home. Most of the besiegers were failures in private life, and, therefore, not the stuff of which good public servants are made. They came with letters from the local clergymen and the Mayor of their towns, and the Supervisor and the member of the Legislature. Every writer "knew that if the Senator cared for him, a place would be given to this most worthy applicant," &c.:

> The amount of mental distress I suffered during that period from the misery of these unfortunate applicants made me more unhappy while it continued than I ever had been before in my life. I was utterly helpless. I was eternally hammering at the door of every Cabinet Minister, eternally pestering and boring every head of a bureau, establishing a species of information bureau by which I could find out when a man died or a woman was discharged, in order that I might get there first so as to take care of an unfortunate and starving constituent.

The Senator is thankful that that time has passed and this source of weariness and distress is done away with. He no longer spends his time in the "Marble Room" listening to pathetic and persistent appeals for places on every conceivable ground except the proved fitness of the applicant. Along with immense relief to the Senators there has come a great improvement in the service the people pay for. There was a strong effort by Congress to get back to the old, bad way so far as census appointments were concerned. Mr. DEPEW is to be congratulated on the part he took in defeating it.

THE MAURETANIA'S SPEED.

The latest record made by the Mauretania on a voyage westward, namely, 4 days and a trifle under 17 hours from Daunt's Rock to the Ambrose Channel, indicates what that prodigiously fast liner could accomplish for the transatlantic mail and passenger service if the delay at Queenstown, demanded by the mail contract with the British Government, could be avoided. Dropping down the Mersey soon after noon on Saturday, the Mauretania might dock in New York early Thursday afternoon. It would be possible for an alert passenger, unincumbered with much luggage, to catch one of the eighteen-hour trains to Chicago, and thence proceed by one of the new fast trains to Seattle, making the trip from Liverpool to Puget Sound in nine days. Such a possibility of quick travel appeals strongly to the imagination.

Perhaps few would care to try so long a journey at that rate of speed. But the removal of the restrictions on the speed of the Mauretania is most desirable. She is the fastest steamship in the world. Yet her records must be confined to midocean. She is unable to put her speed to practical advantage.

CONEY ISLAND.

Mayor McCLELLAN is quite right. We cannot suspend for the benefit of Coney Island a Sunday law applicable to the entire city. There can be no distinctions or discriminations. The proprietors of the amusement places at Coney Island are also quite right when they insist that the people shall not be deprived of their innocent pleasures. The closing on Sunday of the places of amusement down there would be a calamity. It would drive great multitudes of our population to other diversions less agreeable, and many of them, probably, not so blameless.

The Coney Island people put themselves in a wrong and indefensible position when they insist that the Mayor shall revoke his recent utterances and accord to them the privilege of a wide-open Sunday. How can he? There is the law, which he has taken an oath to enforce. The Mayor must know that he will not have the support of the people in the attitude he takes, that the shows and galleries and healthful sports and pleasures of Coney Island must be closed on Sunday to the tired thousands and hundreds of thousands who crave the recreations they afford.

Not a word can be said against the Mayor's indisputably sound and praiseworthy resolve not to extend absolution from the consequences of the law to the proprietors of the Coney Island shows. It is impossible to make that exception. It is also unthinkable that Coney Island should be made a desert on Sunday. The people of this city resort there in numbers all the way from 50,000 to 300,000 on pleasant Sundays through the Summer for amusement, for change, to relieve the fatigues and forget the cares of a week of toil. They have practically no other place to go. No other city in the world has within its limits or near by a pleasure resort at all to be compared with Coney Island. Millions have been invested there to make the place attractive and useful to the people for their pleasures. Coney Island must be open on Sunday as usual. Also, the Mayor must see to it that the law is not violated.

These perfectly self-evident propositions, the truth of each and all of which will be perceived and accepted by candid minds, must bring within the grasp of even the most decrepit understanding the further proposition that discussion of the Coney Island matter involves not a few difficulties. Then why discuss it? A great many things are done without discussion. Conceivably a court of law might take the view that things done "for the good order, health, and comfort of the community"—so the statute reads—should be held to include the things done at Coney Island on Sunday for the recreation and pleasure of tired and [illegible] [illegible]. But we are not permitted in advance to assume anything whatever about the decisions of the courts.

Silence and slow time bring forth a numerous and robust progeny. In a few days or a few weeks the uproar about Coney Island will have been lulled, we presume. The attention of the community will be turned to other things. The amusement places there will be open every day in the week. The old shows and the old diversions, together with the new ones, will be accessible at the usual prices. Immeasurable benefit will accrue to the myriads of visitors to the island. They will have a good time. They will be refreshed and invigorated for their week's work, good order will prevail, the peace and dignity of the State and city will not suffer, and the city's insufficient police force will be left free to attend to its usual duties in other places. That is the way we have in the past solved these insoluble problems. The teachings of experience are invaluable.

THE NATIONAL BANKING POSITION.

The answers to the call of the Controller of the Currency show that the loans of the National banks of the United States are now at their maximum, just short of five billions, having increased nearly a half billion within a year. This increase is but the natural rebound after so severe a reaction as we have recently experienced. The percentage of legal reserve increased correspondingly, and is now higher than it has been since the great increase of speculation which began with the century, the new era in which old statistics do not count. We used to have reserves ranging about 30 per cent., but for the last few years they have ranged about 20 per cent., and are now rather high at 22.38 per cent.

The singular thing is not that the loans increased after the panic, but that they did not decrease because of the panic. The deposits show no decrease at all, and the loans decreased from 1907 by only $7,500,000 in 1908. That is practically no decrease at all on such a volume, and there was a steady increase right through the flurry of 1903. In other words, the country has experienced no such liquidation as Wall Street passed through. As strong a man as Mr. ROGERS had to take in sail and test his commitments by market prices, taking for his offerings what anybody would give. The country has proved itself stronger than Mr. ROGERS, lands and commodities and whatever is bought and sold not having passed through this bitter experience.

That is both the strength and the weakness of the banking and economic positions. It accounts for the confidence which is so strongly promoting the revival now under way. It also accounts for the high range of prices which makes the cost of living so burdensome, and by enhancing costs impedes the revival, also reducing the spending power of the mass of consumers on which producers depend for such a degree of distribution as shall empty shelves and demand fresh production. Our captains of trade are carrying all sail right through the storm. The craft is exceptionally well found, and the greatest blow we have ever experienced has had no more effect than a Summer squall. It is not impossible that this seamanship is just what the case calls for. Possibly 1907 will be followed by no general liquidation, although that has not been the experience of the United States or of other countries under like conditions. The captains may be better judges of the weather than the storm glass, but it is prudent to read the storm glass, nevertheless.

It has already been noted that our currency is also at its maximum. Now it appears that the greatest loans we have ever had at this season are not adequate to our needs, and we are borrowing largely abroad. This is singular at a time when we are exporting gold. We should expect to see our money market harden, but nothing is according to expectation in a situation so abnormal as ours. As the National banks are unwilling to take a loss approaching $30,000,000 on their 2 per cents, they make them earn their board by using them as the basis of currency. Thus the country is provided with more currency than it can absorb, and it pours into New York faster than we export gold. If the currency were not redundant the country banks would use it at home; but although the loans are at a maximum they do not take up all the banknotes, and they are sent here to earn the allowance for deposits which our banks make at the same rate in good times and bad. This enables the country banks to keep up their loan rates at home and to make money here on their idle funds, sent away so that country borrowers may not enjoy the benefit of low interest. Wall Street, of course, finds a use for the idle funds, and the price list looks cheerful. It is to be hoped that the Monetary Commission is taking notes. They will be as useful as anything it remarked in its travels last year.

OREN ROOT'S SCHOOL.

The Metropolitan Street Railway Company of this city has resolved to remedy, if possible, the difficulty that all business and industrial organizations have met—that of obtaining well-educated young men willing to "begin at the bottom" in becoming familiar with its methods. The Harvard Business School, just completing its first year, is a response to this general demand. The Boston Transcript reports that the school is successful in winning the warm support of business men and in bringing its students into intimate contact with business operations. Its scheme of studies and methods of instruction seem workable. The earnest spirit of the professional school prevails among its eighty students, who are rapidly acquiring theoretical and practical knowledge of the essential principles in accounting, banking, railroading, manufacturing, or commercial undertakings. They are to learn the typical things. They will not waste precious years in work that discourages rather than stimulates original effort according to sound principles. In briefer ways, but more efficient than the old hit-or-miss methods of "experience," they will become the managers and planners and directors of industrious but less educated men.

Mr. ROOT's projected school of railroading should succeed. It will pick young men from various approved colleges and technical schools. It will pay them a stated salary while training them for three months in each of its departments of transportation, equipment, electrical power, and maintenance, and another year in some special field. The railways, steam railways as well as street railways, are now concerned with the problems of electric traction. The Metropolitan system is itself a pretty fair epitome of the universal urban and suburban railroading of the future. The graduates of the new school may become the leading men in their vocation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

An Appeal to the Governor. Within a day or two the Governor must take action upon the Hamn Automobile bill, unless it is his intention to let it die for want of a signature, and there is little probability that he intends to avoid reaching a decision on a measure of such very general interest and importance.

As we have repeatedly pointed out, the bill is not perfect. Its most serious, perhaps only serious, fault is the failure to base the awarding of licenses to chauffeurs, both amateur and professional, upon effective examinations as to character and competency, and to provide for the revocation of licenses in case of proved and repeated misconduct. The bill, however, is excellent, so far as it goes, and, even as it stands, it marks a decided advance in comparison with the present harassing situation, with its multiplicity of local ordinances and its arbitrary speed limits.

For one thing, there would be under the Hamn law a considerable approach to that uniformity of regulation throughout the States which is so much to be desired by all automobilists whose effort is to keep within the law. Other States in this part of the country have passed or have under advisement laws practically identical with this one, and it will help on the general movement for New York to give it prompt countenance.

As for the removal of the speed limits, an innovation which has excited not a few honest apprehensions, the resulting perils are mostly imaginary. The critics of the bill say that this would make interference with any speeder, no matter how reckless, impossible, unless he did actual damage to somebody's person or property. That is not true, and as a matter of fact, the removal of the present restrictions will be in effect the abolition of a near-right to run too fast, provided the rate legal in any territory be not exceeded. Under the new system six, four, two, or even one mile an hour might subject to arrest the man maintaining it, even though he had done no harm at all. There are places and times when one mile an hour is more dangerous than sixty miles an hour, in the open country and with a long stretch of road in plain sight, can be to anybody except those in the car—and they are supposed to take care of themselves.

With the law in operation any amendment it needs or must have will soon be revealed and can easily be made, but the existing situation is almost intolerable to the automobilists, and the daily record of accidents shows only too clearly that the public safety and arbitrary speed limits are not interchangeable terms.

Must Walk Faster Than This. With fifty-nine of his hundred days used up and only 2,350 of the transcontinental 4,300 miles yet covered, it is evident that EDWARD PAYSON WESTON will have to take long steps for a good many hours out of the twenty-four during the remaining forty-one days if he is to arrive at his destination in time to justify his high hopes and confident expectations.

To any one else than he there would be reason for despair on figuring out that as yet he has made only a little over forty-two miles a day, while for the remainder of his journey he must cover over forty-six miles a day in his chase after the setting sun. WESTON, however, is not a man to be easily discouraged, and the task which confronts him is not impossible—for him—in spite of the many years that burden his shoulders. Apparently he is in about as good physical condition as when he started, and even his present achievement is sufficiently marvelous to inspire caution in those who are inclined to prophesy his failure.

At first thought, the quality of the ground still to be covered would seem to be against him. It is, indeed, a rough country, with a good deal of it on end, but, after all, the Rocky Mountains in Summer do not provide for a pedestrian roads as bad as those to be found in most of the Eastern States during the Spring months, and his chief enemy for the rest of the journey will be the heat. That can be in large part avoided by night travel, a device to which WESTON has already resorted.

The explanation of WESTON's long-preserved agility is revealed in his daily dispatches. The man is old only in years, and retains the emotional vivacity and sensitiveness of youth—its temperament as well as its muscles. The attentions he receives from the people along his route stimulate him at least as much as does the "eggnog" which he so often mentions, and the particularity with which he gives the names of the men and women whose kindly hospitality he receives is significant of his prompt responsiveness to every impression. He is, of course, a person too idiosyncratic, too much what the doctors call a "somatic freak," to be an object of hopeful emulation to other old men, or to be, for that matter, much of a lesson for anybody.

Mr. Taft as a Diplomat. Confronted with the hard task of saying something that would please the only group of people in the country who believe that the Mecklenburg Declaration was written before, not after, the important document to which it bears [illegible] resemblance, [illegible] showed himself equal to the situation and awoke the applause of his anxious hearers. The North Carolinians seem to think that the President vindicated their pathetic faith in the Mecklenburg myth by accepting it, but when they come to read his speech over they are likely to have certain doubts on the subject—to see that all he did was to tell an excellent, though ancient, tale about the unwisdom of a thin-skulled man's venturing on the fair ground in Tipperary, and then to say that at Charlotte the visitor who cast suspicion on the Mecklenburg Declaration would be strangely out of place.

He would, indeed, especially on a festal day, when everybody was illustrating the occasional accuracy of the definition by which "faith" was described as "that quality of the human mind which enables a man to believe what he knows is not so."

THE THROUGH RATE.

In This Case It Exceeded Sum of Two Local Rates.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The leading editorial in your paper of today says:

> The Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, having charged a shipper the sum of two local rates instead of a smaller through rate, was fined $1,000 on each count. Mr. Wickersham expressed his approval and acceptance of this result because the fine is "adequate." The case was one which easily enough might have lent itself to another treatment.

This statement is untrue. The through rate between a certain point and Kansas City was greater, not less, than the sum of two local rates between the two points. Some shippers complained, and the agent gave them all the smaller rate, viz., the sum of the two locals. There was no overcharge and no discrimination, but the law was technically violated. Hence the authorities accepted the plea of guilty, and imposed the lowest possible fine.

I should be glad to know what other treatment the case might have lent itself to, except, possibly, the remission of the fine. The Attorney General did not "revise the pleadings," as the only plea was guilty, but merely approved the action of his subordinates on the ground that there was no discrimination, and no actual intent to violate the statute.

POLITICAL ROAST PIG.

It Might Be Acquired Without a Holocaust of Reform.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your recent news item about a local political fusion of the innumerable reform clubs, committees, leagues, and other tapestried and mahogany fungi "to organize good government forces for the coming campaign" surprises foreign observers whose ears have been dinned with our vain boasting about freedom and popular government. Why has it taken a century and a quarter to test whether we are a success or failure? Why have we not administrators of less capacity and fraud! Here is the answer: Our governmental plan is all right, but the people are all wrong in their neglecting political machinery through their overrefinement, self-indulgence, and decadence of patriotism. The people will not govern.

Our election machinery was immediately, after the dethronement of George III., provided by legal statute, but the nominating machinery has been left to mere voluntary spontaneity, out of which the party caucus, primary, and convention system has evolved as the boiled-down common sense of the American people. No more natural or practicable system can possibly be devised. Its only trouble is that the people at large neglect it so that it has fallen into the hands of one-tenth of the people called "the organization," and a managing machine consisting of self-seekers entailing the deplorable results that self-appointed orchid reformers would correct. We remember Charles Lamb's story about the Chinese boy who accidentally burned down his father's barn, but discovered and partook of the savory roast sacred pig, offering a taste to the Judge and jury, who thereupon acquitted him. Next, the whole community took to burning down barns to get roast pigs. This is an apt illustration of the whole uprising of political reformers who waste a prodigious amount of energy, time, and means when they might get the pig by doing only what the machine does in seizing upon the initial caucus.

ENGLAND'S NAVY.

A Britisher Explains the Motives That Sway Its American Critics.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I be permitted to trespass briefly on your space to make reply to your various articles and editorials upon the subject of what you erroneously term the "war scare" in England?

The disingenuousness of American criticism on this subject is very apparent. It arises, I take it, from two underlying ideas, the first being that the United States being now committed to the policy of a strong navy any increase in British naval expenditure will necessitate a corresponding, if smaller, increase in that of the United States, and, secondly, the probability that the need of Britain for a greater revenue to support her navy will shortly drive her to adopt a protective tariff, with damaging results to American trade.

I might commend to your notice the works of an eminent American naval authority, namely, Capt. Alfred T. Mahan, U. S. N., and especially his book, entitled "The Influence of Sea Power on History," wherein he clearly demonstrates that the loss by Britain of her American colonies was due to the British administration of the period having allowed her navy to fall below its proper strength.

The British people are determined to lose no more possessions through weakness at sea, though it is not revolution, but outside aggression they now have to fear. They are determined to maintain the two-power standard, even should they be compelled, in order to raise funds, to put a tax on imports from America, and thus hit the American in his tenderest spot—the pocket. A Sectional Judgment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Prof. Walter Clarke in his statement that absolute cessation of immigration is what is needed is, in my judgment and that of many others with whom I have talked, entirely right, and his statements can be substantiated in the minutest detail by any one who will frequent the section bounded by Eighth Street on the south, Twentieth Street on the north, and east from Broadway to Sixth Avenue.

MR. ROGERS'S GENIUS.

Doubts It, and Ascribes His Fortune to Corporate Brigandage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I desire to express my satisfaction in reading your editorial article, entitled "Mr. Rogers and Standard Oil," and will say it is just such straightforward, honest, and fearless utterances which have made THE TIMES what it is to-day, and endeared it to a vast army of readers.

I should like, however, to differ with you in some degree in your conclusions.

Every one is familiar with the facts respecting the organization and development of this (Mr. Rogers's) oil business, which, as you properly observe, "has been continuously under legislative and judicial investigation for almost forty years," and I think I may say no business has ever been conducted to such an astounding success as this has been with a more complete disregard of the laws of the country and the rights of others.

The genius, therefore, displayed in this and other business combinations of like character is the genius of the brigand with his demand to deliver up under penalty of your life.

His business record is perhaps the best evidence that no unusual power or aptitude existed in Mr. Rogers's make-up. His millions were made, as you say, in a specialized and protected business, which enjoyed such secret rebates for years that his companies could sell their product at cost, if necessary, and the return to them from the common carriers constituted an immense profit in itself.

Now, witness the result obtained when Mr. Rogers launches into outside operations, where he is obliged to meet the same conditions as others. Would any one venture to say there was remarkable genius displayed in the operations connected with the Amalgamated Copper Company or in the building of the Virginia Railway?

I think the majority of your readers would agree with me that, given the remarkable and unfair advantage the Standard Oil Company received during its first years of existence and the vast amount of capital accumulated thereby, no special or unusual qualities were required from its managers to insure the continuance of the enormous annual returns the organizers have since been enjoying. Its methods are plain, ordinary, systematic methods, and no different from those exemplified by thousands of manufacturing industries throughout this land. With the business once thoroughly organized and with unlimited capital available for its uses, the Standard Oil Company is prepared to withstand or control all competition and can perpetuate and enlarge itself indefinitely. Under conditions which exist in this country, as I see them, it is by no means certain that "the astonishing career of Mr. Rogers can never be repeated." With the railroad lines absolutely owned and dominated by the comparatively few people who receive the enormous incomes from the industrial combinations which they also own and dominate, who can say that there will not be many careers fully as astonishing?

No law has yet been perfected which effectively controls either the railroads or the industrial combinations. It does not, therefore, require a genius or an unusually smart business head, representing the owners of the railroads, to secure for his masters the net results they desire for their industrial interests, without fear of detection or punishment.

It goes without saying that Mr. Rogers in his private life was all that could be desired—honored, respected, and loved by those who had the good fortune to be associated with him—and, in fact, nothing could be said against Mr. Rockefeller or Mr. Archbold, who are the responsible officials of the most powerful combination in the world. They are law-abiding, good citizens, and good men. It is only the corporation and its acts which have in the past worked incalculable injury to the individual, and so to the country, and which is to-day the greatest menace to our National life.

BAD EXAMPLE FOR POOR GIRLS.

Correspondent Objects to Bacchanalian Dances for Charity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That is an excellent motto at the head of THE TIMES—"All the news that's fit to print"; it is a pity we cannot add "All the sights that are fit to see," but then we should have to blot out that pictorial page of May 16, "Society Women in Bacchanalia." Surely we have progressed backward to heathendom when our women of refinement and culture display themselves thus to the public in attitudes so unwomanly, immodest, and often ungraceful. They must forget that Diana and Minerva took no part in such dances, but always kept within "the limit of becoming mirth."

Yet this is for the benefit of the Trade School for Girls; poor girls, what an example for those whose position in life makes it doubly necessary for them to be self-restrained and careful in demeanor.

And now another charitable entertainment takes place, with more of these dances, one of the most attractive being that in which the man "tosses his partner high in the air" and catches her as she falls.

Last Sunday request was made from some of our pulpits that people should attend this entertainment; surely the particulars of the performance could not have been known; or if so, we can only say, O Charity, "how many crimes are committed in thy name"!

Proposed Tea Tax.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Although not a member of the National Tea and Coffee Association, I think its protest to Congress against a proposed tax on tea hits the nail on the head as to an honest explanation of the possible increase of price to the consumer.

Those who wish for a tax must be speculators who bought heavily with the expectation of a duty and a rise in the market.

But how about the consumer who is paying twenty-five to thirty-five cents a pound for his tea?

EXPERIENCE.

Keep ther mornin' paper, Neighbor, 'taint no use ter leave it here;
We ain't doin' advertisin' in no one on 'em this year.
Betsey'n me hev 'bout decided thet we won't commit ther sin
Of disgracin' ther old humsted with them city folks ag'in.

Last year wuz ther fust one, Neighbor. Somehow we had ketched ther craze;
Thought we'd make a leetle money in the long, hot Summer days.
All ther papers wuz a sayin' folks wuz flyin' frum ther heat,
Huntin' rooms an' decent cookin' in some farmhouse clean an' neat.

Waal, we tuk 'em, big an' leetle. 'Pears tew me I never see Sech a lot of hungry creeters. Some on 'em could eat fer three.
But ther cabbage didn't suit 'em, an' ther onions warn't their taste,
So we hed tew buy 'em vittals an' ther garden went tew waste.

Then they rummaged in the attic—opened every single chest;
An' ther ones thet hed ther east rooms 'lowed ther west rooms wuz ther best;
An' they laffed at all ther picters hangin' on ther parlor walls,
An' they nearly hed connipshuns 'bout ther rag mats in ther halls.

Then my Gran'dad's old four-poster struck 'em funny, so they sed,
Tho' I told 'em that my mother laid on it when she wuz dead;
An' ther feather beds wuz "musty" an' ther pillers wuz tew big,
An' they asked ef I wuz honest an' ef Betsey wore a wig.

They upset the humsted, Neighbor, with their dancin' an' their pranks,
An' we often heard 'em sayin' we wuz prim New England Yanks.
An' thar warn't a minit's comfort—nor a single minit's peace—
Till vacation time wuz over an' September brought release.

So jest keep ther paper, Neighbor. I ain't goin' tew read an Ad.

ASK AMERICA TO ACT TO LIMIT ARMAMENT

Mohonk Conference Declares Against the Great Increase in Military Expenditures.

BRYCE DEPLORES BURDENS

Wants a World Public Opinion to Prevent War—Bartholdt Asks Taft to Appeal to Monarchs.

MOHONK LAKE, N. Y., May 21.—In a platform adopted unanimously the Conference on International Arbitration on the final day of the meeting asked the American Government to press for a limitation of the world's armament. The platform was presented by Dean Kirchwey of Columbia University, who declared that an advanced position should be taken. The platform reads:

"The fifteenth annual Lake Mohonk Conference on International Arbitration, meeting on the tenth anniversary of the opening of the first Hague Conference, reviews with profound satisfaction the signal advance of the cause of international justice during the decade, a progress unexampled in any previous period in history. The memorable achievements of this period are at once an inspiration and an imperative call to renewed effort.

"We urge upon our Government, which has been so conspicuously and so honorably identified with the progressive policies of The Hague, prompt action toward perfecting the important measures there inaugurated and the complete development of the system of arbitration. We especially urge its early initiative in the establishment of the international court of arbitral justice.

"We further urge the negotiation of a general treaty of arbitration between all nations, and look forward with increasing hope to the day when treaties of arbitration shall provide for the reference to The Hague of all international differences not settled by regular diplomatic negotiation.

Plea for Disarmament.

"The clear logic of The Hague conventions prescribes the limitation and gradual reduction of the machinery of war by the nations parties to those conventions, corresponding to the development of the instrumentalities of law and justice for the settlement of international differences. The great armaments of the nations, whose intolerable burdens prompted the call to the first Hague Conference, have during the decade increased so portentously as to have now become, as recently declared by the British Foreign Secretary, a satire upon civilization. They fill the world with apprehension and alarm; they create an atmosphere unfavorable to the system of arbitration, and their drain upon the resources of the peoples has become so exhausting as to menace all national treasuries and disastrously check the social reforms and advances which the interests of humanity demand.

"It is the opinion of this conference that the time has arrived for carrying into effect the strongly expressed desire of the two peace conferences at The Hague that the Governments 'examine the possibility of an agreement as to the limitation of armed forces by land and sea, and of war budgets,' and address themselves to the serious study of this pressing question. Accordingly we ask our Government to consider whether the peculiar position which it occupies among the nations does not afford it a special opportunity to lead the way toward making these weighty declarations a basis of public and concerted action."

Dr. Andrew D. White, long President of Cornell University, presented a committee report showing that within four years more than 275 American colleges and universities had come to co-operate with the Mohonk Conference by providing occasions to bring before their student bodies the principal facts of the international peace movement by means of lectures, addresses, student programmes, debates, oratorical contests, and special exercises.

Wants Taft to Take the Lead.

In an address to-day Congressman Richard Bartholdt of Missouri said:

"If the President of the United States were to say to King Edward and Emperor William, 'Let us keep the peace, and in case of any trouble between either two of our three countries let us not draw the sword until we have had an investigation by an impartial third party, be it power, commission, or court'—if, I say, President Taft were to make a formal proposal of this nature, and those two great monarchs were to grasp the outstretched hand, what would be the result? It would signify the end of war. As far as I know the state of the public mind in the larger countries of Europe from personal contact with their representative men, no monarch could or would reject an American offer of any practical peace agreement."

Ambassador Bryce of Great Britain pleaded for a world-wide public opinion against war.

"At this moment," he said, "all the Governments in all the great military and naval States are (I venture to believe) honestly desirous of peace. Not one of them has any cause for war. Not one of them but would lose by war far more than it could gain. Yet it is apparently possible for those who desire, from whatever motives, to stir up suspicion and enmity to succeed in convincing each nation that the other has designs upon it.

"Every nation is conscious of its own rectitude of purpose and believes that its armaments are for its own safety and will not be used unjustly or aggressively. But each one is told that it must not credit with similar good intentions the other nation which is for the moment the object of its jealousy. Is not this one chief cause of the atmosphere of suspicion in the relations of the great powers and leads them to go on creating the enormous armaments and levying the enormous taxes under which their people stagger?

"Would not a better knowledge of each nation by the other nations do something to dispel these suspicions? Every nation must, of course, be prepared to repel all dangers at all likely to threaten it. But it should also try to ascertain whether the dangers it is told to provide against are real or illusory. Suspicion breeds suspicion; and nations have sometimes come to fear and dislike one another only because each was incessantly told that it was disliked by the other."

The Proposed Indian Colossus.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the persons interested in erecting a colossal Indian on Staten Island to keep Miss Liberty company would devote their energies to preventing the construction of the Passaic Valley sewer, which is planned to discharge in the middle of New York Harbor, their efforts would be of some use to mankind, and foreign visitors to this wonderful country could approach our shores without holding their noses and sailing up a cesspool. What a travesty on nature for man to build a lifeless wooden Indian standing in such surroundings when the real American Indian was accustomed to look upon streams in their pristine purity, and was so cleanly in his own personal habits.

New York, May 21, 1909. POCAHONTAS.

Middle Strip of Broadway Uptown.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Broadway is a fine, wide avenue from Fifty-ninth Street northward, and was laid out originally with a grass plot and shade trees in the middle. At present this grass plot has become the dumping place for gravel and paving stones, and is in a forlorn condition. What might be one of the most beautiful streets in the city is neglected and misused. The beauties of Berlin and Vienna are enhanced by the strips of grass and flower beds which ornament the streets, because the authorities have made the streets attractive with grass, flowers, and statuary. Those cities flourish. Travelers from the four quarters of the globe journey to see them.

MAURETANIA'S MAIL HERE IN RECORD TIME

1,700 Sacks Arrive at the Post Office at 3 A. M.—Her Passengers Also Ashore Early.

PLAN A THURSDAY LANDING

Henry C. Frick Comes Home an Optimist—Broker John H. Davis Approves New Exchange Rules.

In addition to clipping thirteen minutes off the westward record over the long course across the North Atlantic the Cunarder Mauretania came to her pier in remarkably fast time yesterday morning, and within an hour all of the baggage of her 272 saloon passengers had been examined by the customs force under Deputy Surveyor John M. Bishop. She made another record in the landing of her 1,700 sacks of mail. The Mauretania got to Quarantine at 11:10 o'clock Thursday night. Her mail reached the Post Office here about 3:30 A. M., and long before she left Quarantine most of it was speeding West.

Capt. John Pritchard was proud of the performance of his vessel in crossing in four days sixteen hours and fifty-three minutes. She left Quarantine at 6:30 A. M. and was alongside her pier landing her passengers at 7:40 o'clock. Her skipper is confident that she will yet arrive in time to come to her pier on a Thursday night.

The arrival in Quarantine late Thursday night is pleasing to the officials of the Cunard Line, for it demonstrates the need of dropping Queenstown as a westward port of call. The Mauretania was delayed at that port nearly six hours because of a delay in getting her mail on board. But for that lost time, the officials say, she would have come to her pier Thursday at nightfall and the landing of her mail would have been expedited by about ten hours.

The Mauretania's list of 272 saloon passengers included Henry C. Frick, John H. Davis, the banker; Col. Robert M. Thompson, P. A. B. Widener, and E. C. Benedict. Commodore Benedict's yacht Oneida met the Mauretania at Quarantine and followed her to her pier. After the baggage of the Commodore and his daughters, Mrs. Clifford Harmon and Mrs. Ramsey Turnbull, was examined they boarded the Oneida and went to Greenwich, Conn. They were met by Mr. Harmon.

Mr. Frick went abroad some weeks ago to bring his family home. "From the reports I have received during my four months' absence abroad I believe a steady improvement in business is indicated," Mr. Frick said. "The future looks bright."

He expressed no surprise when told that Steel common stock had touched its highest figure recently. He saw in it a restoration of confidence and signs of an encouraging outlook.

Mr. Widener refused to talk on financial affairs generally, or the Philadelphia traction situation particularly.

John H. Davis of the banking and brokerage house of John H. Davis & Co., went abroad nearly a month ago to visit his daughter, the Marchioness of Dufferin, who has been ill in her home, in the North of Ireland. Mr. Davis said that he approved to an extent the action of the Stock Exchange relative to the Consolidated Stock Exchange.

Accompanying Col. Thompson was his daughter, Mrs. S. H. P. Pell, and with them came Capt. H. B. Pelly, commanding the British battleship King Edward VII., and his wife. Capt. Pelly, who is making his first visit to this country, will represent his Government at the dedication ceremonies at Annapolis.

The news of the death of H. H. Rogers was received by wireless on board, and many were the expressions of sorrow heard among his friends. All the returning financiers commented on his life and work.

Garden Fete Nets $6,000.

The rain yesterday prevented the planned holdover of the Garden fête for Hope Farm at Lenox Library Field. The cold weather prevented the fête from being as successful financially as had been hoped, and only about $6,000 was cleared for the charity. But it was an artistic success and was well managed, the open-air restaurant and theatre particularly attracting attention.

Social Notes.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Wyatt Wise, daughter of Mrs. Frederick May Wise of Baltimore, and Josiah Macy, a son of Mrs. William H. Macy, second, will take place this afternoon in St. David's Church, Roland Park, Md. There will be a reception at 100 Roland Avenue, the residence of the bride's parents.

Henry Suydam Reynolds, son of Mrs. William M. Harlan, and Miss Ilse Georgine Heinmuller, daughter of Mrs. Robert J. Heinmuller, will be married this afternoon at the Buckingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, who were at the Montreal horse show, taking as their guests in their private car Miss Eleanor Sears of Boston and Maurice Roche, have returned to town.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Haight and Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Thebaud were among the New Yorkers who went up to the Montreal show.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sheldon (Miss Louise Gulliver) spent part of their honeymoon in Montreal, and attended the show.

Dr. George Meyers and Mrs. Meyers of 47 East Sixty-first Street will sail on May 25 on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, to make a prolonged stay in Berlin.

The youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Julien Stevens Ulman was christened on Wednesday afternoon at the Ulman residence, 24 East Eighty-first Street, by Bishop Greer. He was named Granville Oldfield Barclay Ulman, after his great-grandfather, Granville Oldfield of Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon Boardman, whose marriage took place last Wednesday at the St. Regis, are sailing for Europe to-day on the New York. They are to make their home in London.

The Rev. Herbert Shipman and Mrs. Shipman sail to-day with Mrs. Shipman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edson Bradley.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vogel of East Seventy-sixth Street have opened their country place at Deal. They will sail for Europe the end of June.

Mrs. Walter Brooks and Mrs. Edith Brooks are sailing to-day on the Baltic to be absent some months. Miss Eleanor Steele, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Steele, will accompany them. Mr. Brooks will sail in a few weeks to join his family.

MRS. TAFT CAN'T MEET GUESTS

Too Ill to Receive, So Her Sister Assists the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Mrs. Taft's indisposition rendered it impossible for her to receive the 600 guests invited to the White House this afternoon, the occasion being the third of the four Friday afternoons at home for which cards were issued early in the present month. The President, who returned to the White House this morning, received the company in the East Room, assisted by Mrs. Taft's sister, Mrs. Louis Moore of Cincinnati. Col. Spencer Cosby and Capt. A. W. Butt made the introductions. The Marine Band played in the large reception hall. Mrs. Knox, wife of the Secretary of State, and Mrs. Wickersham, wife of the Attorney General, did the honors in the dining room.

The last of these at-homes will be given next Friday afternoon, when it is hoped Mrs. Taft will have entirely recovered from her illness.

The President recently was chosen as a Trustee of the Hampton Institute at Hampton, Va., and had accepted an invitation to speak there on Sunday afternoon. He stated, however, that unless Mrs. Taft was able to make the trip with him he would postpone his visit. The President decided after reaching the White House that it would not be wise to undertake the trip at this time, and he telegraphed canceling the engagement. The President will visit Hampton probably before he leaves Washington for the Summer.

MISS LOCKE'S LUNCHEON.

Bridesmaids to be Her Guests at Sherry's Next Tuesday.

Miss Enid Locke, whose marriage to Lowry Gillett will take place on June 1 at the Locke residence in West Sixty-ninth Street, will give a luncheon to her bridesmaids next Tuesday at Sherry's. Her guests will be Mrs. Campbell Locke and the Misses Susan Ludlow Gould, Sara Cunningham, Valerie Worthington, Mary Sands, Dorothy Schieffelin, and Rosalie Gardiner Jones.

Mr. Gillett will give his bachelor dinner at the Engineers' Club on Saturday evening, May 29. His guests will be his best man, Roland Hill, and the ushers, who are to be Dr. Robert Pou, Francis Field, Ralph Peters Black, Tristan Locke, and the bride-elect's brother, Campbell Locke.

The wedding and reception will be small, only relatives and intimate friends being asked.

HUSBANDS MAY ARBITRATE.

Suggested Annex to Settle Disputes in Women's Clubs.

The end of the recent exciting meeting of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, which took place at the Hotel Astor on May 7, is not yet. It looks now as if in the near future there might be a masculine annex to the federation, silent partners, or a husbands' advisory board.

At the May meeting the President told the Honorary President that some of her statements were inaccurate. It was a question which had been parried back and forth from the time of the federation election in February. It was such a serious matter that the President, Mrs. de Rivera, called in a man lawyer to decide the matter, and his letter was read in open meeting.

That was a dangerous precedent. To defend the Honorary President, Mrs. William Cumming Story, whose statements had been questioned, five women sent an affidavit to the newspapers, saying that Mrs. Story had told the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Then they had their signatures witnessed by a Notary Public—another man.

Yesterday morning a printed circular regarding the affair was received by every club member in the federation, sent by its President, Mrs. de Rivera, in which a club husband, John S. Crosby, whose wife, Mrs. John S. Crosby, is one of the bones of contention in the dispute, gave his testimony.

Then Mrs. William Grant Brown was much displeased because she felt that in the printed circular she was made to support the President, Mrs. De Rivera, instead of her friend the Honorary President, Mrs. Story. William Grant Brown, husband of Mrs. Brown, then came to his wife's rescue. He had heard the matter when it was discussed over the telephone, he said. Mrs. Brown, though ill in bed, felt so bad over the circular letter in which she was quoted, which was shown to her yesterday morning, that she immediately put her feelings into words in a personal letter to Mrs. De Rivera, saying that she had been misrepresented and that she supported Mrs. Story with all her heart, or words to that effect.

The whole question hinges upon whether Mrs. John S. Crosby or Mrs. William Grant Brown should really have the place of Chairman of the Reception Committee in the Federation. The Brownites say that Mrs. de Rivera promised Mrs. Brown the head of any committee she might choose, then when she asked for the "Reception" Committee replied that it had already been conferred on Mrs. Crosby. The Crosbyites and Mrs. de Rivera say that it is absurd to suppose that she offered the Chairmanship of the same committee to two people on the same day and that she had asked Mrs. Brown to be a member of the "Programme" Committee.

That is where the matter stands, but no one knows where it will end.

It is thought that possibly by starting a Federation of Women's Clubs Annex of Silent Husbands who can arbitrate serious matters of this kind, troubles may be peaceably adjusted.

POTTER DEFIES BOSTON MAYOR

Playwright Says "Queen of the Moulin Rouge" Will Be Produced.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 21.—Paul M. Potter, the dramatist, declared to-night that come what may, a riot, arrest, or what not, his play, "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," which the Mayor forbade, will be produced next Wednesday evening at the Boston Theatre.

Mr Potter says that he has legal and other advice, and that his manager will produce the much-discussed play. He rather expects to spend Thursday in jail.

Eben Plympton in "The Debtors."

"The Debtors," a three-act comedy adapted by Margaret Mayo from the German of Von Shonthau, will have its first production in Providence, R. I., on May 31. The chief parts will be taken by Eben Plympton and Miss Kathleen Clifford. The play is to be produced under the management of J. M. Allison and Henry M. Ziegler.

STAIR-HAVLIN HOUSE FOR THE SHUBERTS

Lease of the Whitney Theatre in Detroit from E. D. Stair Sets Broadway Talking.

MAY BE CLOSER ALLIES

Melodrama Is Falling Off as a Drawing Card and Better Attractions Might Fill Popular Price Houses.

The Shuberts announced last night that they had completed arrangements with E. D. Stair of the theatrical firm of Stair & Havlin, by which they had obtained the lease of the Whitney Opera House in Detroit for ten years. Broadway on learning this quickly interpreted it as the likely forerunner of a more intimate alliance between the Shuberts and Stair & Havlin, who control the popular price theatres. There have long been reports that a number of the Stair & Havlin theatres, operated by that management as popular price houses, are eventually to become first-class houses, booked or directly managed by the Shuberts, and it was regarded last night as quite probable that this might happen, the failing popularity of melodramatic offerings in the last two years having been a serious problem for Stair & Havlin.

The Whitney Opera House is one of the established playhouses of Detroit. It will be entirely renovated and redecorated in the coming Summer, and will be opened as a leading theatre, with a prominent Shubert attraction early next September. Simultaneously with its opening under Shubert management the name of the theatre will be changed from the Whitney to the Garrick, to conform with the names of two other Shubert theatres in the West, one in Chicago and one in St. Louis, both of which bear that name.

The Whitney Opera House is one of the largest theatres in the West. Jefferson, Mansfield, and other prominent American stars have played there. The Shuberts, in taking possession, declare that they aim to restore its ancient glory.

The acquisition of this theatre is of importance to them because till now Detroit was the only prominent city between New York and Chicago in which they had neither a theatre of their own nor a booking arrangement with a local theatre. Their coast-to-coast chain of theatres is now said to be complete.

DEBUSSY OPERA IN LONDON.

Enthusiastic Reception Given to "Pelleas et Melisande."

LONDON, May 21.—Debussy's opera, "Pelléas et Mélisande," was produced for the first time in England at Covent Garden to-night and met with great success. At the conclusion there was a full ten minutes of continuous applause and numerous calls for the composer. M. Debussy, who was present superintending the production of his work, declined to appear before the curtain.

The opera was beautifully mounted. Signor Campanini conducted. Mme. Feart and M. Warnery appeared in the title rôles, and their performance in every respect was first-class.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Robert Mantell will begin a two years' world tour next September, when he will sail for Australia, appearing later in India, South Africa, and England. He will end his engagement at the Academy of Music this week.

Tuesday, May 25, is to be Masonic night at Daly's Theatre, when 300 members of Bethel Lodge will go to see "The Climax." Edward Locke, the author, is a member of the lodge.

The Shuberts and Frank Hennessy have engaged Georgia Caine for the title role of "The Motor Girl," the new musical comedy which will open under their management and later will have a New York Summer engagement.

SCHUMANN-HEINK IN CHORUS.

Prima Donna's Son Gets $18 a Week in Musical Comedy Company.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—Henry Schumann-Heink, son of Mme. Schumann-Heink, the grand opera prima donna, is in the chorus of Marie Dressler's "The Boy and the Girl," a musical comedy appearing here this week. It is his first step toward a career in drama, and possibly grand opera. He gets $18 a week.

Schumann-Heink is 22 years of age. Before he was an actor he was an engineer. Three years ago he came to Philadelphia and got work at Cramps. He stayed there a while and went to Boston "Tech."

He made his first appearance on the stage last Fall with the International Grand Opera Company in Chicago for eighteen weeks. Then he went with the "Broken Idol" company, and wound up with "The Boy and the Girl." He has six brothers, one of whom is now studying singing in Dresden, and two sisters.

EDWARD McENCROE DEAD.

New York Newspaper Man Succumbs to Diabetes at Home of Parents.

Word was received from Schenectady, N. Y., of the death yesterday of Edward McEncroe, a newspaper writer, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McEncroe, in that city. Death resulted from diabetes, from which he had suffered several years.

Mr. McEncroe was born in Schenectady on Nov. 13, 1865. He was graduated from the Union Classical Institute with the class of '84, and then spent two years in Union College. After two years of work as a reporter on The Schenectady Evening Star he came to New York to work as a reporter on The Sun, which newspaper he left in the Spring of 1902 to become editor of The Schenectady Evening Star.

He retained this for two years, returning to The Sun in the Summer of 1904, and there remaining until failing health compelled him to give up work last year. He is survived by his widow and one daughter, Elizabeth Carroll McEncroe, both of New York. The funeral will be held in Schenectady at 9:30 o'clock on Monday morning.

GEORGE W. STANHOPE DEAD.

Managed Barnum's Circus and Put on "Uncle Tom's Cabin" First.

George W. Stanhope, a theatrical manager of other years, who died on Wednesday at his home, 114 West 132d Street, was buried yesterday in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Stanhope was born in this city in 1837. In his days as a theatrical man he managed P. T. Barnum's circus, Fanny Davenport, John Brougham, John McCullough, and Oliver Doud Byron. He was associated for years with John W. Hamilton, a brother of "Tody" Hamilton, in the management of the old Mt. Morris Theatre in Harlem, and later in the management of the old Second Avenue Theatre. Mr. Stanhope and Harry Corson Croft put on the stage the first production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Mr. Stanhope is the third theatrical veteran to die recently, his death following closely on those of his old partner, John W. Hamilton, and John Mitchell, who was a son of Maggie Mitchell.

Mr. Stanhope leaves a widow, one son and one daughter.

Obituary Notes.

JAMES CARY, Jr., a salesman of Tiffany & Co. known for a knowledge of diamonds and jewels, died yesterday at his home, 74 Madison Avenue. Mr. Cary was born at Newburyport, Mass., and came to New York when he was 17 years of age. He had been with the jewelry firm of Starr & Marcus, afterward Theodore O. Starr, of 206 Fifth Avenue, for thirty-eight years. After this he was connected with Tiffany & Co., both in this country and abroad. A few months ago he had a stroke of paralysis. He leaves a wife, brother, and sister.

WALTER ALEXANDER, a lawyer, and head of the firm of Alexander, Watriss & Palk, 32 Nassau Street, died last night at his home, 133 East Fifty-fourth Street, of meningitis. He was 44 years old. Mr. Alexander was a graduate of Harvard, in the class of 1887. He was President of the Harvard Club, President of the Missouri Society, a governor of the University Club, a governor of the New York Bar Association, and a member of the Board of Education. He belonged to the Metropolitan Club, the Downtown Club, and the Garden City Golf Club. He was a native of St. Louis. He is survived by a widow, who was Miss Grace H. Connell, and two children.

WILLIAM B. RICE, a shoe manufacturer in New England, died at his home in Quincy, Mass., yesterday. He was 69 years old. He was senior member of the firm of Rice & Hutchins, and in 1892 served on the Council of Gov. Russell.

WILLIAM CHRISTIE HERRON, aged 66, noted peace advocate and philanthropist, died at his home in Cincinnati yesterday. He was formerly President of the Universal Peace Society of Cincinnati. When the Baroness von Suttner, advocate of peace, visited this country several years ago she made a pilgrimage to the old Herron home in recognition of the Cincinnatian's work.

CLARENCE HERBERT FREEMAN, ex-National checker champion, died at the Rhode Island Hospital, Providence, yesterday after a short illness. He was a native of Providence and attained a reputation as a checker player in 1884, when he defeated Wyllie, a famous Scotch player.

Prof. JEROME SCHNEIDER, for fifty years a member of the Tufts College Faculty, died yesterday in his home in Medford, Mass., aged 86 years. He was born in Basle, Switzerland, and was graduated from the university there, later being graduated from Berlin University as a doctor of philosophy. He came to America in 1854.

WILLIAM STEVENSON, who for many years was in the South American trade, died on Thursday in his home, 471 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn. He was 76 years old, and came to this country from England when he was a young man. He leaves a widow and four children.

Mrs. CORDELIA OGDEN, wife of Frederick Ogden, died on Thursday in her home, 30 West 128th Street, in her seventy-second year. She is survived, in addition to her husband, by a son, Frederick A. Ogden.

THOMAS SEARS YOUNG died yesterday at his home, 42 East Fifty-second Street, in his sixty-first year. He was graduated from Princeton in 1871, and was a member of the University Club and the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Clubs.

GEORGE HOWELL, a former Justice of the Peace of Montclair, N. J., died yesterday at his home in Pattenburg, N. J. He was 72 years old. Mr. Howell sank all the artesian wells that supplied Montclair with water up to the time the present water system was installed. He is survived by three sons and two daughters.

WILLIAM TUTTLE, a real estate man, died on Thursday at 37 Emery Street, Jersey City, the home of James T. Barnes, his brother-in-law. He was 53 years old. Mr. Tuttle was born at Hackettstown, N. J., the son of the late Rev. James N. Tuttle, a Methodist minister. For many years he was engaged in the wholesale hat trade in this city. Later Mr. Tuttle bought a large tract of land at Spring Lake Beach, on which he built a hotel, and spent considerable sums in improving the town. He is survived by a widow and one brother, the Rev. A. H. Tuttle of Summit, N. J.

Sister ST. JOHN BERCHMANS, who before taking the veil was Delia Sheehan, died on Thursday of tuberculosis in the Monastery of the Precious Blood, 212 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn. She was 31 years old.

WILLARD RALPH, son of the late Julian Ralph, the war correspondent, died on Thursday afternoon in the Kings County Hospital of pistol wounds, self-inflicted at Coney Island on Monday night.

EDWARD E. COYLE, for the last ten years a newspaper correspondent at Washington, died at the home of relatives in Baltimore yesterday, aged 35 years. He had been in poor health for some time and recently suffered an attack of pneumonia.

"Elizabeth Visits America"

Elinor Glyn

"Harry," Elizabeth's husband, taking offence at a flirtation she indulges in, goes off to Africa to shoot lions, while Elizabeth, now Marchioness of Valmond, visits America. The pretty Marchioness has a little fun here too, but in the end "Harry" comes over after her and they make it up. Mrs. Glyn kept her eyes open in the United States, and her new book is already making people talk.

ANOTHER FLUKE HIT BEATS THE YANKEES

Browns Win Game When Hartzell's Grounder Bounds Wildly Away from Laporte.

NEW YORKS IN HARD LUCK

Second Game of Series Lost on Badly Bounding Balls—Mother of Outfielder Engel Dead.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 21.—The Browns defeated New York in the third of the series of games here to-day 2 to 1 by a scratch hit that took a bad bound. The same fate that sent a little hit bounding over Keeler's head and lost New York yesterday's game was on the job again this afternoon, for Hartzell's scratch hit in the seventh, when the score was tied, would have been an easy out had the ball not taken a wild bound when Laporte was ready to grab it.

That the Yankees have lost two out of the three games played is not due to indifferent work or the fact that they have been outplayed, for they have not. To begin with, Stallings has his players well groomed. He also has them hustling. He has youngsters nicely tucked in with veterans, and all his veterans are spry. Among the men on duty to-day Stallings did not have a single slow man.

Manager McAleer made a radical change in his line-up for to-day's game. Hartzell led off at the bat, with Hoffman, Ferris, Griggs, and Patterson following in the order named. McAleese, who has been at the head of the batting order, is now in seventh place.

Outfielder Engel of the Yankees was called to Dayton, Ohio, this morning by telegraph on account of the death of his mother. Cree was switched from centre to left field, and Charlie Hemphill looked after the centre pasture.

The fourth inning gave each side a run. Thus the score remained until the last half of the seventh, when the Browns put over the winning tally. In the fourth Austin scratched a single down toward second base, and then stole second and third on the next two pitched balls. Blair tapped out a slow one, and Austin galloped home.

The Browns tied the score in their turn. Griggs drew a base on balls, Patterson singled to centre, and Griggs scored on Wallace's liner to right.

The winning run was made in the seventh. Stephens got to first on Austin's fumble. Pelty sacrificed, and Hartzell scratched a hit toward Laporte that took an unexpected bound, advancing Stephens to third, from where he tallied on Hoffman's short single to centre. The score:

Senators Downed Again.

CLEVELAND, May 21.—Cleveland defeated Washington to-day, 4 to 1. It was Falkenberg's first game of the year, and he was very effective with men on bases. Groome was invincible until the sixth, when Goode's triple started the scoring for Cleveland. Good base running scored two more in the eighth. Street was put out of the game by Umpire Kerin for disputing a decision. Score:

Our boys' clothing has turned one old notion upside down.

Mothers used to think that where much emphasis was laid on style, it was as well not to think too much of quality or price.

But our boys' clothing, with a style such as only a few most expensive tailors put into boys' clothes, maintains the substantial quality and reasonable prices of all the clothing we make.

Norfolk, Double-breasted, Sailor and Russian suits.

The care with which boys' "Star" negligeshirts and "Star" blouses are cut and made appeals especially to mothers who themselves can cut and sew.

Boys' straw hats.
Boys' raincoats.
Boys' motor dusters.

WARD LOSES GOLF MATCH TO YALE MAN

H. G. Legg Furnishes Surprise on Nassau Links by Defeating Westbrook Veteran.

HARD CONDITIONS FOR GAME

Herreshoff Still in Line for the First Tournament Trophy—Many Well Fought Contests.

Amid rain, high winds, and all-around miserable conditions, two match-play rounds for the cups offered in the open tournament of the Nassau Country Club were concluded yesterday. It was a strenuous day for the golfers, and, in fact, several of the cup qualifiers decided when it came time to start for the links for another hard day that they had enough golfing under the present wintry conditions and telephoned their regrets. E. D. Hooper, one of the leaders in the previous day's contest, was forced to withdraw because of illness. He was to have played Frederick Herreshoff in the first round, the latter, therefore, winning by default, and in the afternoon he defeated E. G. White of Yale.

John M. Ward did not survive the double round as successfully as his rival Herreshoff. In the morning, after a hard match with F. C. Jennings, Ward won by 2 up and 1 to play, the former playing the course in 79 and the latter in 80.

In the afternoon Ward played H. G. Legg of Yale, who is also the Minnesota State champion. Legg completely surprised the old-timers by getting a big lead on Ward. The latter made a game fight on the homeward journey, and honors were even on the fifteenth green. Legg, by admirable putting, won the next two and the match.

H. T. Haines, the Yale champion, after defeating the Dunwoodie golfer, A. T. Watson, in the morning, was put out in the afternoon by H. S. Hubbell of the home club in a well-fought match by 2 up and 1 to play. W. L. Hicks, one of the Nassau veterans, had the satisfaction of defeating two Englewood Club players, G. S. Ludlow and then E. M. Barnes, who had beaten Oswald Kirkby earlier in the day.

An additional cup was added to the prize list, for the defeated eight of the first sixteen, the victors in the first round being Kirkby, Ridder, Watson, and Jennings. The match-play round results:

Nassau Country Cup.—First Round—E. M. Barnes, Englewood, beat Oswald Kirkby, 2 up and 1 to play; Frederick Herreshoff, Westbrook, beat E. D. Hooper, Nassau, by default; R. T. Haines, Yale, beat A. J. Watson, Dunwoodie, 2 up and 1 to play; H. G. Legg, Yale, beat E. L. Scofield, Jr., Wee Burn, 5 up and 3 to play; H. S. Hubbell, Nassau, beat E. F. Hort, Dyker Meadow, 3 up and 2 to play; W. L. Hicks, Nassau, beat G. S. Ludlow, Englewood, 3 up and 2 to play; John M. Ward, Westbrook, beat F. C. Jennings, Nassau, 2 up and 1 to play; E. G. White, Yale, beat R. H. Ridder, Fox Hills, 4 up and 3 to play.

Second Round—Hubbell beat Haines, 2 up and 1 to play; Herreshoff beat White, 4 up and 3 to play; Hicks beat Barnes, 2 up and 1 to play; Legg beat Ward, 2 up and 1 to play.

Cup for Beaten Eight, First Set.—First Round.—Jennings beat Scofield, 7 up and 6 to play; Kirkby beat Ludlow, 5 up and 4 to play; Ridder beat Hooper, by default; Watson beat Hunt, 2 up.

North Country Club.—First Round—W. W. Pell, Dyker Meadow, beat G. W. Gammack, Nassau, 4 up and 3 to play; M. Malloy, Hartercombe, beat W. H. Warner, Nassau, by default; B. N. Busch, Nassau, beat J. H. Williams, Dyker Meadow, 5 up and 4 to play; W. W. Harris, Dunwoodie, beat H. S. Stearns, Oakland, 2 up and 1 to play; S. D. Bangs, Brooklawn, beat H. O. Parsons, Crescent A. C., 1 up; H. L. De Forest, Lakewood, beat H. A. Sherman, Apawamis, 2 up and 1 to play; H. W. Maxwell, Nassau, beat J. G. B. Lester, Royal Dublin, 1 up; James L. Taylor, Dyker Meadow, beat F. N. Doubleday, Nassau, 1 up.

Second Round—Pell beat Malloy by default; Busch beat Harris, 2 up and 1 to play; Maxwell beat Taylor by default; Bowers beat De Forest, 5 up and 4 to play.

Red Spring Cup.—First Round—P. R. Jennings, Garden City, beat W. H. Nichols, Jr., Yale, by default; L. P. Rider, Nassau, beat C. R. Dean, Flushing, 3 up and 2 to play; E. D. Miller, Dyker Meadow, beat L. A. Agnew, Wykagyl, 8 up and 7 to play; W. P. Pickett, Crescent A. C., beat J. C. Taylor, Dyker Meadow, by default; C. S. Carter, Nassau, beat G. W. Beckel, Crescent A. C., 3 up and 1 to play; E. H. Griffiths, Crescent A. C., beat H. R. Lounsberry, Jr., Bedford, 1 up; T. W. Satterthwaite, Nassau, beat T. Robertson, Midland, 4 up and 3 to play; G. W. Nickel, Yale, beat S. W. Trawick, Nassau, by default.

Williams Golfers Defeated.

The Williams College golf team visited the Apawamis Golf Club links on Thursday and played a team match with five contestants on a side. The home team outclassed the collegians, although each side won three matches, McMurtrie's heavy defeat of Jackson contributing materially to the defeat of the visitors, who lost by 10 points to 5. The teams:

Written Exclusively for THE NEW YORK TIMES
By EDWARD PAYSON WESTON.
Special to The New York Times.

KIT CARSON, Col., May 21.—Heavy rain prevented me from getting an early start to-day. I wanted to make a long walk but had to be content with starting at 6:20 A. M. Colorado is sparsely settled along the Union Pacific Railway. The towns are very small, and accommodations are not of the best. I have walked fifteen miles without meeting a person, an occasional rabbit, many prairie dogs, and coyotes being the only "live ones" to greet me.

Arriving at Kit Carson at 12:55 I had dinner in a section house. These parts are devoted almost entirely to cattle and sheep grazing. The rain of the last two days has had a wonderful effect on the grass and crops, consequently everybody is industrious and cheerful. I will arrive at Aroya at 8 P. M., and may possibly go further. The distance walked to-day was forty-five miles.

Want Race for Yacht Seneca.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 21.—There is a possibility that the yacht Seneca of the Rochester Yacht Club, thought to be the fastest boat in her class on the great lakes, will yet race against a representative craft of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, although the Canada's Cup races are off. The Rochester Club has sent a telegram to the Royal Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto to the effect that if the Canadians wish they will race for the Fisher Cup in Class P, and if the Canadians will waive the usual ten months' notice the Rochester club will immediately challenge for a race in 1909.

Big Sporting Day for Middies.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 21.—Princeton field and track men and the Syracuse crew are in Annapolis prepared to compete against the midshipmen to-morrow in the final event of the local season in those sports. The other events of the big final day of the Spring season at the Naval Academy are the baseball game against Georgetown and the rifle match, the team of the Seventy-first New York Regiment being the midshipmen's opponents.

Troy High School Wins Meet.

TROY, N. Y., May 21.—The interscholastic athletic meet held here to-day under the auspices of the Troy High School and participated in by ten schools from New York State and Massachusetts, was won by the Troy High School, with 28 points. Adams (Mass.) High School and Schenectady High School tied for second place, at 16 points. Cambridge (N. Y.) High School was third, with 15 points.

Papke-Ketchel Match July 5?

SAN FRANCISCO, May 21.—Billy Papke has agreed to all of Jimmy Coffroth's terms for a bout with Stanley Ketchel, and says that the battle may be fought at the Colma arena on July 5. Although Battling Nelson is still training for his contest with Hyland, the Battler has shown no signs of changing his plans about delaying his match with McFarland, set for July 5. As a result the Papke-Ketchel go may be substituted on the latter day.

THIRTY CREWS IN REGATTA.

New York Leads in Entries for Schuylkill Races To-day.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 21.—More than thirty crews are here to-night for the seventh annual regatta of the American Rowing Association, which is to be held on the Schuylkill River tomorrow afternoon. The Cornell eight reached the city late last night, but the Harvard, Georgetown, and the New York and Baltimore oarsmen got in during the day. In spite of a rain, which fell constantly throughout the day, practically all of the visiting crews were out on the river to try the course.

The crew which attracts the most attention is the Harvard junior eight, which is entered in two races. The Crimson oarsmen will row against Cornell and Pennsylvania in the race for junior eights and then they will try conclusions with the Malta Boat Club of this city in the eight-oared shell race for the Stewards' Cup. In order that the college eights may have a chance to row in more than one race, the junior college event has been put first on the programme and the race for first eights last.

New York leads in the number of entries with ten starters in the various races. There will be an intercity race in the octopede event between Philadelphia and New York. The Crescent B. C. will represent Philadelphia and the Metropolitan B. C. New York.

The interscholastic eight-oared event will witness a three-cornered fight between Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington.

For the first time in years Yale has not sent a crew. The Elis were unable to obtain permission from their Faculty for the trip. Two Yale students are rowing in the pair-oared sculls as representatives of the Dunham R. C. of New Haven.

Taft's Son a Tennis Victor.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERBURY, Conn., May 21.—In a tennis match between the Alumni Association and Faculty of Taft's School this afternoon, Sidney B. Morton and L. B. McIntosh played Hildreth Benner of New York and "Bob" Taft of Yale, son of the President, the latter team winning two out of three games by scores of 6—2, 3—6, and 6—4.

DARTMOUTH MEN LEAD.

Thirteen Qualify in New England Intercollegiate Trials.

BOSTON, May 21.—The all-around superiority of the Dartmouth track team and the individual work of Horrax of Williams were the features of the preliminary events, which opened on Technology Field to-day, the twenty-third annual championship meeting of the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

As the wearers of the green from New Hampshire qualified thirteen men in nine of the eleven events to-day, the chances of Dartmouth winning another championship appear good.

Good judges of the preliminary events to-day anticipated that with Dartmouth far in the lead, there would be an interesting fight to-morrow between Williams and Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Bowdoin for second place, with Amherst, Brown, Wesleyan, and Maine contesting for fifth place. Tufts, Trinity, and Vermont also qualified men to-day, but Holy Cross, the new comer into the association, failed to get a place, although represented in several events.

The number of men qualified by the different colleges in the eleven events to-day were as follows: Dartmouth, 13; Williams, 11; Technology, 11; Bowdoin, 9; Amherst, 7; Wesleyan, 5; Maine, 4; Brown, 4; Tufts, 2; Vermont, 1, and Trinity, 1.

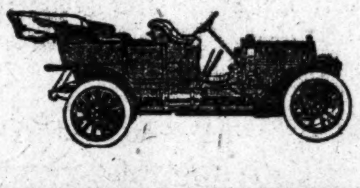
Inter-class Tennis at Harvard.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 21.—Final matches in the Harvard interclass tennis tournament were played at Soldiers' Field to-day. In the 1909 class N. W. Niles, intercollegiate champion and Captain of the Harvard tennis team, defeated S. W. Kenyon, 6—2, 6—1. E. L. Beard, a member of the Harvard tennis team, defeated F. R. Kirkland, 6—2, 9—7, in the 1910 class. C. S. Cutting defeated L. D. Frinnell in the 1912 class, 6—1, 6—2.

The match between A. Sweetser and H. N. Nickerson, in the 1911 class, will be played to-morrow, completing the interclass tournament. Play for the college championship will begin Monday next, Niles playing Beard, and Cutting opposing the winner of the Sweetser-Nickerson match.

Another Draw in Chess Match.

The sixteenth game of the chess match between Frank J. Marshall and J. R. Capablanca, which was played at the Brooklyn Chess Club yesterday afternoon, a Petroff's defense, adopted by the former, ended after fifty-five moves in a draw, making the record to date, Capablanca, 7; Marshall, 1; drawn, 8.



Compare the Chalmers-Detroit Forty, at $2,750 with any $4,000 or $5,000 Car.

Our "Forty" can make 60 miles an hour—would you drive any $5,000 car as fast as that? Our "Forty," and a stock demonstrator at that, in hard and constant use since last August, won in its class at the Fort George Hill Climb the other day. It defeated higher powered and higher priced cars, driven by experts. Would you ever drive a $5,000 car up hill as fast as that? Our "Forty" has given perfect service and constant service to two hundred and fifty owners right around you in this territory—we have invited every one of them to come to us in case of trouble, and not one of them has had to come to this day. Can any $5,000 car give more than perfect service?

By paying $5,000 for a seven passenger car you can buy more size, but not more value. Our "Forty" is the Standard American five passenger car. It is being bought by the wealthiest men in this country—men who can afford to pay any price for what they want—because the seven passenger cars are too big, too unwieldy—because our "Forty" is the most usuable, most sensible size. Our "Forty" costs far less to keep than the big seven passenger $5,000 car. Not only are its tire bills very much less, but the experience of these 250 owners right around you, is that it costs practically nothing for repairs. Our "Forty" has been proven to be by far the best car for their use—it is by far the best car for your use.

Furthermore, you have our assurance that the car you buy from us will give you perfect service and perfect satisfaction. We will see that it does.

Automobiles

The final test of the value of an automobile is the verdict of its owners. Mr. John F. O'Rourke, the man who built the Pennsylvania R. R. tunnel, owns a STUDEBAKER car. We quote in part from a recent letter:

> "My STUDEBAKER has been in constant service throughout the past year. I have never yet stopped on the road for any mechanical trouble, and have repeatedly passed higher power and higher priced foreign cars.
>
> "Your Make and Break ignition system is absolutely unequalled. The STUDEBAKER spring suspension and riding qualities surpass any automobile I ever rode in."

We have similar letters from other prominent men, many of whom are expert motorists who have owned various makes of high-priced cars in the past. They now claim their STUDEBAKER surpasses them all—they ought to know. Come in, examine the car and YOU will understand why.

USED CAR DEPARTMENT

We offer several used STUDEBAKERS that have been taken in trade for our customers who have bought new STUDEBAKERS. These automobiles have been thoroughly overhauled mechanically, and are in good condition. We offer these at attractive prices.

A high-grade used car that we rebuild in our own shops is a better investment than a cheap new car.

Estimate Board Asks Corporation Counsel for a Way to Settle N. Y. Central Dispute.

SUBWAY WANTS A NEW YARD

City Also Asked to Buy Inwood Hill as a Hudson Memorial—Hearing Soon on Cent-a-Drink Stands.

The Board of Estimate took up the Eleventh Avenue track question yesterday, voting to request Corporation Counsel Pendleton for an opinion as to the legality of the occupancy of the thoroughfare by the New York Central, and, if any substantial doubt of this exists as to what measures should be taken by the city to settle the matter. The resolution asking for the opinion was presented by Controller Metz, and requests Mr. Pendleton to hand in his opinion at the board's next meeting.

The city authorities and the Public Service Commission have been squabbling over the matter since the Mayor vetoed the Eleventh Avenue bill passed by the Legislature at the last session. Chairman Willcox of the commission has declared that the city should now proceed with the condemnation proceedings authorized under the Saxe law.

Corporation Counsel Pendleton replied that the city could not do this until there has been some bona fide attempt to come to an agreement with the road, and suggested that the Public Service Commission, as successor to the Rapid Transit Commission, take up this matter, the latter having failed to do so satisfactorily.

Ex-Senator Saxe contended at the public hearing on the Eleventh Avenue, held by the Mayor, that the legality of the law, which was introduced by him, has never been properly tested, and he is supported by many people. The Board of Estimate now wishes to have some definite decision on the matter, in order to determine whether or not the condemnation authorized by the Saxe law is still available.

John E. Parsons, representing the Hudson-Fulton Celebration Commission, appeared before the board, and urged the granting of an appropriation for the preservation of Inwood Hill at the extreme northerly end of Manhattan Island, in the form of a park.

"Much of this ground is to-day just as Hendrick Hudson found it," said he. "It contains many Indian relics, and the old fort is still there. The transformation of this ground into a park would be a most fitting memorial to the 300th anniversary of Hudson's landing. It would provide room for the extension of Riverside Drive, a site for the Hudson Memorial, and an approach to the Hudson-Fulton Bridge."

The Controller declared that he believes the project could be carried out by the expenditure of not more than $1,000,000. The matter was referred to a committee.

At the request of Mayor McClellan, May 28 was set as a date for a public hearing on the permit granted to the Cent-a-Drink Company to install its automatic drinking fountains under the elevated railway stairs. Since this permit was approved by the board there have been many objections raised to it, particularly by the Newsdealers' Association, who assert that its members will be deprived of some of the most valuable newsstands in the city.

Counsel for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company appeared to advocate the setting aside of a space 1,000x800 feet west of Broadway, between 236th and 242d Streets, for a reservoir yard for subway cars. Chief Engineer Lewis of the board recommended that the matter be laid over until the road submits definite plans, and a committee was appointed to consider the request.

A petition for the establishment of a playground on a vacant lot at Columbus Avenue and Ninety-ninth Street was referred to a committee. The Women's Municipal League is supporting this request and offers to equip the playground and maintain it for a year.

High School Baseball Games.

Two games in the Public Schools Athletic League baseball championships will be played this afternoon at American League Park. The first contest, that between Morris and Commerce, will decide the question as to which school will represent Manhattan and Bronx against the champions of the Borough of Brooklyn in the final games for the championship of the city. Neither school has been defeated. The second game will be between De Witt Clinton and Curtis.

MORE SHOW HORSES SAIL.

C. W. Watson's Famous Heavy Harness Animals for London Show.

C. W. Watson's stable of heavy harness horses were shipped on the Atlantic Transport liner Minnehaha yesterday and will sail this morning for London, where they will compete in the great International Horse Show at the Olympia, beginning June 5. In the string are ten high steppers that are certain to command the admiration of the British horsemen. Five of the animals are trotting bred and five are hackneys. Among the latter are Kitty Grey, formerly Atwick Nell; Ringing Bells, formerly Lady Ophir, and Moonshine, formerly Nunnery, all imported mares bred in England. Norina and Chatterbox, full sisters, bred by E. D. Jordan at the Plymouth Hackney stud in Massachusetts, complete the list of hackneys.

The trotting-bred horses are Lord Baltimore, My Maryland, My Maryland II., Lady Baltimore, and Virginia. From the ten horses Mr. Watson can make up two park fours that will be hard to equal, and he can send into the ring three or four tandems and a half dozen pairs of the highest class. Frank Winterbottom, who has managed the Watson stable for three years, will have charge of the entire outfit.

Mrs. C. W. Watson, who is one of the most expert drivers in America, will drive in all the ladies' classes, and Mr. Watson will handle the ribbons over his favorites in classes for amateur drivers. Frank Winterbottom will drive them in the other classes.

NEW JERSEY ENDURANCE RUN.

Will Start This Morning from Newark —High-Class Cars Entered.

The annual run of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club will take place to-day, starting from the clubhouse at 64 Park Place, Newark, early this morning. The list of entries is not large, but it includes a high-class list of cars and drivers.

There are four entries in Class A, as follows:

Buick runabout, 18 horse power, entered by J. J. C. Humbert; De Dietrich runabout, 20 horse power, by Robertson S. Ward; Buick runabout, 18 horse power, by W. E. Hopping; Ford runabout, 20 horse power, by Dr. Emil Mautner.

In Class B there are five cars, as follows:

Maxwell touring car, 28 horse power, entered by H. A. Bonnell; Maxwell roadster, 28 horse power, by Morris R. Sherrerd; Cadillac touring car, 30 horse power, by A. B. Ward; Maxwell roadster, 28 horse power, by Andrew Heuschkel; Chalmers-Detroit roadster, 30 horse power, by W. L. Ferguson.

In Class C there are seven cars, as follows:

Locomobile baby tonneau, 40 horse power, entered by F. A. Croselmire; Oldsmobile runabout, 35 horse power, by William H. Cornell; Marmon touring car, 45 horse power, by Charles E. Callard; Craig-Toledo roadster, 45 horse power, by Dr. R. G. P. Dieffenbach; Jackson Model E tourabout, 45 horse power, by Frank L. Kraemer; Marmon touring car, 45 horse power, by W. Olive Crosby; Haynes runabout, 50 horse power, by W. E. Shuttleworth.

It was announced yesterday by the firm of Wyckoff, Church & Partridge that twenty-five Stearns cars have been placed at the disposal of the Free Industrial School for Crippled Children, in West Fifty-seventh Street, for the annual run to Coney Island. It has been the custom of the company to take the children of this institution for an outing every year. The run will start Monday morning. A stop will be made at the Crescent Athletic Club, Bay Ridge, where luncheon will be had. Frederick Thompson, proprietor of Luna Park, will give the children free admission to all of his show places.

A meeting was held at the Hotel Astor yesterday for the purpose of completing plans for the formation of an Army Motor Corps. It is the purpose of those behind the movement to create a corps for the transportation of military troops by motor cars.

ODDS NOT BARRED, SAYS JOCKEY CLUB

Counsel for Racing Governors Assert That Betting Prices Are Within Law.

TURF PATRONS YIELD RIGHTS

Track Visitors Have No Need to be Furtive in Exercising Legal Privileges, Says Racing Official.

In the opinion of the counsel for The Jockey Club racegoers at Belmont Park so far this season have denied themselves some of their legal rights in the desire to keep within the prohibitions of the law. The right which they most consistently have ignored is that to quote or write on their racing cards the odds current in the betting. Such written records of betting prices, the lawyers for The Jockey Club and racing associations assert, are not prohibited by the anti-bookmaking law, and it is the right of any one who so desires to write the odds and exhibit them freely as a matter of general interest.

The written memoranda of getting prices that are current, the lawyers say, cannot be construed as being any part of the prohibited practice of bookmaking unless accompanied by the use of other paraphernalia and acts which would constitute bookmaking under the definition of the law.

In an explanation of the opinion on the matter of betting reached by The Jockey Club counsel a prominent member of The Jockey Club yesterday said:

"It is proving to be a harder matter than we anticipated to convince the public that their rights will not be invaded as they were last season. Under the law, as it has been interpreted by the highest courts, the right of the individual to bet is established. The law prohibits bookmaking, and The Jockey Club and racing associations are doing all they can to see that the law is enforced, and no act which is in violation of the law will be permitted on the race tracks, but that will not in any way restrict the liberty of patrons of racing who may desire to make wagers from betting as freely and openly as they please. It is a fact, however, due to reckless abuse of authority last year, that many visitors to the race tracks still are timid and furtive, and go about making their harmless wagers as if they feared raids and arrest. There is absolutely no ground for this timidity, for betting under the restrictions which eliminate bookmaking is entirely within the law, and the racing associations stand ready to protect patrons in the exercise of their privileges and liberty under the law."

Elementary Schools' Championships.

The elementary schools novice championship of the Public Schools Athletic League will be decided this afternoon at Curtis Field, Staten Island. The entry list includes the names of 908 athletes of the public schools who have never won a race. Owing to the recent ruling of the Board of Education, the boys who are numbered among the novices will be admitted to the grand stand free of charge.

WELSH WINS FAST FIGHT.

Englishman Outpoints Jack Goodman at the Fairmont A. C.

Freddie Welsh of England last night added another victory to his already long list of victories when he defeated Jack Goodman of New York at the Fairmont Athletic Club after ten of the fastest rounds witnessed in the club ring this season. While Welsh did not prove himself a second Jim Driscoll, he was fast and clever enough to stamp him as one of the best men of his weight in the world.

The contest was scientific, and the rapid exchanges, fast footwork, and the clever exhibition of the boxing game in its finest points repeatedly brought the big crowd of spectators to their feet.

Goodman made an excellent showing in the first round, but Welsh, evidently sizing his man up, cut loose in the second round, and from this point to the end of the contest held his opponent safe.

The Britisher was clever and experienced little difficulty in avoiding the rushes and wild swings of the New York man. The undoing of Goodman began in the fifth round, when Welsh measured his man with right and catching him on the jaw brought him to his knees. Again in the sixth Welsh staggered Goodman with a hard right smash in the face. Then Goodman, tired and realizing his only hope was a chance-effected blow, swung wild repeatedly, but Welsh dodged the swings easily and met Goodman's rushes with stiff jolts and hard straight punches.

In the opening bout Harry Winters, by aggressive work defeated Kid Ghetto. The referee stopped the second contest after Al Lewis had shown decided class over Eddie McMahon. Young Ketchel shaded Jimmy Dunn in a clever contest. Chick Murray outclassed Donny Mack, and the men were sent to their corners in the second round. The semi-windup brought together fighting Kennedy and Billy Ross, middleweights. Kennedy forced the fighting and was entitled to the decision.

Seasick Wins for Vanderbilt.

PARIS, May 21.—W. K. Vanderbilt's Seasick came in first in the Prix Consul race to-day. Nash Turner's Villegiature ran in this race, but did not get a place. Mr. Thorne's Alby came in second in the Prix Saldichoury. H. P. Duryea's Defiance was among the starters in this event.

NEW HIGH PRICE FOR WHEAT

Advance on Grain Markets in Face of Good Reports in Growing Crops—Banks Gain Cash.

Transactions on the Stock Exchange yesterday fell some 300,000 shares under Thursday's business, and the movement of prices was correspondingly restricted. In the absence of anything in a news way of sufficient importance to call for appraisement the market seemed to come to a dead centre, although where securities moved at all they moved forward. Steel stocks were once more the feature of the trading, Steel common in particular rising to a new high price from which, however, it later receded a trifle. Among the matters claiming more or less attention were the sharp rise in wheat prices on the Chicago Board of Trade, where May wheat touched 131¼, the highest quotation yet attained. Curiously enough, while this was going on one of the best informed of the commercial publications, The Modern Miller, reported on the condition of the growing wheat in these words: "Weather conditions have favored the Winter wheat crops. General rains have fallen throughout the recent dry districts of the Southwest, and warmer temperatures forwarded the growth in practically all sections. Improvement is noted in both early and late sown crops. Cutting is expected to start in Texas next week." It is apparent, therefore, that the situation on the grain markets has very little to do with the prospects of the crops now in the ground. The improving demand for copper and the better prices obtaining were reflected in the announcement of an increase of $1 per share in the quarterly dividend of the Calumet & Hecla Company, while the business which is at last coming to the equipment companies, in a modest way, was typified by the Northern Pacific's order for new locomotives, announced during the day. On the Cotton Exchange a rather sharp break in prices seemed to indicate the necessity for something new in the way of excitement to stimulate that market, Texas having at last been visisted by rather general rains, although these have been by no means so heavy as could be wished.

Preliminary estimates of the currency movements of the week indicate gains by the local banks from interior points at the rate of practically $1,000,000 a day, but these have been so far offset by the gold engagements of the week as to leave the net increase almost nominal. What to-day's loan account will show is, of course, impossible to foretell, but the diminished demand for accommodation from Stock Exchange sources seems to point toward a reduction rather than an increase in this item.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—The local market was bare of interest except for considerable activity in United States Steel and Cambria Steel shares. The advance of the common stock of the first-named above 60 stimulated buying of Cambria Steel, and it rose a fraction above 39, making the highest price recorded since February. The market closed steady.

THE COFFEE MARKET.

Coffee was moderately active yesterday and somewhat unsettled with the close steady, net 5 points higher to 5 points lower. Sales were reported of 24,250 bags, including switches from May to later months.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 5 points. Shipments of about 7,500 bags from Havre to New York were followed by increased offerings of May. Owing to holidays there were no cables from the primary markets. Havre closed unchanged to ¼ higher.

Spot coffee was quiet, 7⅞@8c for Rio No. 7. The range of contract prices follows:

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Prices on Curb Tend Toward Lower Levels, but Changes Are Nominal.

STANDARD OIL SELLS OFF

Loses 11 Points on Small Sales, Closing at the Low Level—Mining Stocks Irregular.

The net changes in the prices of outside securities yesterday were, so far as the mining list was concerned, in small fractions, mostly in the direction of lower prices, but the trading was so insignificant that the differences from the previous day were inconsequential. A rise of ⅛ in La Rose Consolidated carried it to a new high record for the year at 7 7-16, and Inspiration Copper achieved a like distinction at 7 15-16. Nevada Consolidated lost a half for the day, while United Copper gained ⅛. Standard Oil fell 11, to 670. Chicago Subway was strong, advancing 1¼. In the bond list Western Pacific 5s and Kansas City Southern 5s displayed continued firmness.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT—New high records were made on May yesterday and later positions were also very strong. Berlin came 4c and Budapest 5⅛c higher, while Liverpool closed ⅝c up. The domestic markets all started out firm, but rapidly sold off on splendid weather reports in both Winter and Spring wheat belts. The turn came toward midday on the arrival of the foreign markets. All interior points received but 228,000 bushels, compared with 360,000 bushels a year ago. Cash wheat in New York closed as follows: No. 2 red sold $1.45, in elevator, and $1.45 nominal, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.37¼, and No. 2 hard Winter, $1.38¾, free on board, afloat.

CORN—While the cash article and the May contract were depressed at times yesterday by increased country offerings the July delivery, after moderate early weakness, advanced practically a cent a bushel. No. 2 corn in New York was quoted 84½c, elevator, and 81½c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 84½c, and No. 2 yellow, 82½c, free on board, afloat.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Declines on Good Crop News—Closes 8 to 11 Points Net Lower.

Cotton was very nervous yesterday, with the close steady at a net decline of 8@11 points. The market opened barely steady at a decline of 5@12 points, in response to lower cables and the appearance of further rains in the Southwest. At the decline a prominent bull, who had sold on the bulge of Thursday, entered the market as a large buyer and rallied prices temporarily. The market eased off during the last hour, when scattered offerings were heavier.

The weekly total crop movement figures of the New York Cotton Exchange follow: Port receipts, 9,475,315 bales, against 7,909,826 last year; overland to mills and Canada, 1,177,930 bales, against 693,714 last year; Southern mill takings, 1,985,000 bales, against 1,886,000 last year; stocks at interior towns in excess of Sept. 1, 211,620 bales, against 206,991 last year; brought into sight thus far for season, 12,849,874 bales against 10,096,531 last year. The total crop movement is for 263 days this season, against 265 days last season.

The range of contract prices follows:

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and 5 points lower, at 11.75c for middling upland and 12c for middling Gulf. Sales nil; delivered on contract, 4,100 bales.

Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: Norfolk firm, unchanged, at 11⅛c; sales, 132 bales. Augusta steady, unchanged, at 11@11 1-16c; sales, 817 bales. New Orleans steady, unchanged, at 10¾c; sales, 2,000 bales. Memphis firm, unchanged, at 10¾c; sales, 2,150 bales. Houston steady, ½c lower, at 10¾c; sales, 88 bales.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Selling for Consolidated Account?

In explanation of some of the selling yesterday and on the previous afternoon rumors were current that the new rule adopted by the Stock Exchange prohibiting dealings between members of that organization and the Consolidated Exchange had resulted in the closing out of a good many contracts outstanding between members of the two boards. While it was assumed that Stock Exchange members would not lose any time in severing any such relations which might have existed, there were many brokers who thought that the amount of such liquidation was greatly exaggerated. Wall Street, however, is never satisfied unless it finds a reason for everything, and if a substantial one is not forthcoming any other kind of reason is readily accepted as filling the bill. In any event, the ordinary swings in such a narrow market as yesterday's are of such small consequence in the long run as to make it immaterial whether the right explanation happens to be hit upon to account for them, or a wrong one.

Strength of Steel Shares.

Speculative interest again chiefly converged in United States Steel common, which made another new high record at 60¼. Some complaint was heard, however, over the failure of the strength and great activity of this issue to arouse a similar amount of enthusiasm toward the rest of the market. In former times one of the easiest ways of influencing the whole list was to advance the price of Steel issues on the theory that being so widely held by the public, an upward movement in them would stimulate a good deal of outside buying of other shares. Usually, the operation was attended with more or less success. Yesterday, however, some of the room traders professed to be suspicious of the action of Steel common, which probably merely signified that they were again becoming bearishly disposed toward the general market. Stocks of the independent steel companies were also strong, which tended to confirm the impression that all of these issues were simply being bought on a better trade outlook.

Rise in Hill Stocks.

The Hill stocks, which for some time had been dormant, came to the front yesterday with a particularly sharp advance in Northern Pacific. This at one time extended to nearly two points, while Great Northern gained about half as much. Comparisons were drawn between these two issues, both of which pay 7 per cent. dividends, and are selling around $146, with St. Paul, which pays the same rate, but has been selling four or five points higher. The advance in the price of the Hill shares was regarded accordingly by most traders as logical enough, inasmuch as it was asserted that their quotations had been out of line with many of the other active standard railroad shares. At the current rates for money it was figured that Great Northern and Northern Pacific offered good inducements in a speculative way, and at the same time yielded a fairly good return as an investment. The suddenness with which they were taken up suggested the revival of pool operations.

Mexican Railways Active.

National Railways of Mexico second preferred acted in a manner calculated to please greatly those interested in it. This is the stock for which the old Mexican Central shares were exchanged, and which it is generally supposed will attract a larger speculative following than any other of the issues of the merged company. There were few more active shares on the whole list than that was yesterday, and the price advanced 1¼ per cent., to 26¼, the highest figure at which the new stock has sold. Some months ago a 100,000-share pool was formed in Mexican Central, but apparently never did any great amount of work in the old stock. Some thought that perhaps it was just beginning to get busy in the new issue. Ordinarily more or less encouragement is desirable in a stock market way to attract attention to the issues of any corporation in the early stages of its existence.

Kansas City Southern's Status.

For some months a very firm impression has existed in the minds of many brokers that the Kansas City Southern is destined to wind up in the Harriman camp sooner or later, and yesterday's election of L. F. Loree to the Chairmanship of the board rather strengthened the idea. The stock, however, responded only moderately to the news. It advanced to 47⅛, but subsequently receded fractionally, on light trading. One day several weeks ago, when the first definite reports of the acquisition of the property by the Harriman interests appeared, the stock ran up about 4 points from around 43 to 47, so that it is now practically no higher than it was when the stories first gained currency. Meanwhile the stock has been allowed to become much less active than before. There are some who entertain the belief that accumulation for the Harriman party was under way, and was one of the primary causes for the advance in the stock from around 39 to 47 within a comparatively short time earlier in the year.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

Commenting on general trade conditions as reported by its correspondents throughout the country, Dun's Review says:

> Almost every development is favorable, and the gains made in spite of the tariff disturbance are a fair indication of what may be expected when that is out of the way. The domestic agricultural conditions are excellent, and yet the prices of farm products continue to advance. The area of improvement in iron and steel is rapidly widening, and a notable event of the week is the restoration of wages by the independent producers.
>
> The reports of the railroads are of steadily increasing business, and the latest earnings show a gain of 14.0 per cent. over last year, the decrease as compared with 1907 being 12.8 per cent. Nothing discloses the expansion of trade from the recent narrowing depression more signally than the bank clearings, which outside of New York are 19.4 per cent. greater than last year and 16.8 per cent. better than in 1906, the record in New York showing gains of 19.4 and 16.7 per cent., respectively.
>
> The dry goods market probably reveals the effect of the hesitation due to pending tariff legislation as much as any other, but both cotton and woolen goods are in the main firm. The foreign commerce report at New York for the latest week makes gains in both exports and imports, the former being largely in excess of both 1908 and 1907, while imports, much heavier than in 1908, are nearly equal to the corresponding week in 1907. The total foreign commerce was $10,070,227 larger than in 1908 and $7,002,780 larger than in 1907.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Howard Elliott, President of the Northern Pacific, returns to the West to-day.

The National Bank of Commerce has engaged $250,000 gold for shipment to Argentina to-day.

The National Bank of Commerce withdrew from the Sub-Treasury yesterday $250,000 in gold coin for shipment to Argentina.

The New York Coffee Exchange will be closed on Saturday, May 29, as well as on Monday, May 31. There will also be a holiday in the sugar trade on those days.

The Western Pacific bond syndicate which some time ago disposed of the last of the $50,000,000 issue of Western Pacific first mortgage bonds has been closed, and profits of about 3 per cent. distributed to the syndicate members.

The Stock Exchange firm of Harris & Fuller, 45 Broadway, will open a branch office on Monday in the Hotel Gotham, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, in the offices formerly occupied by [illegible] under the management of [illegible]

BROKERS DIFFER ON EXCHANGE RULES

Some Regular Members Say Governors Can't Cut Off Business with the Little Board.

WILL GO ON IN SECRET

E. C. Benedict, Just Back from Europe, a Critic of Big Board, Which, He Says, Hampers Members.

Stock Exchange houses are not all in agreement with the policy of the Governing Committee of the Exchange in adopting the resolutions which have cut off Exchange members from all business relations with brokers on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. A number of the old line houses which for years have had amicable relations with members of the rival board, accepting business from them which could not be advantageously executed on the smaller board, see themselves out off from a field of what they regard as legitimate profits.

These houses have been doing business for the brokers on the "Little Board" for full commissions, and they feel that the new rule will only have the effect of driving all of their business into surreptitious channels, for they hold that the new rule will be impossible of enforcement.

As one broker, who has been in the Street for a generation, expressed it yesterday, "It has been the 'goats' on the Stock Exchange and the 'goats' on the 'Little Board' who have made all of the trouble. The effect of the new ruling is to hit those who have hitherto abided by the rules of the Exchange and throw all of the business to the 'goats,' for there is no doubt that some way will be found to get around the new rule. For instance, there is nothing to prevent a third party acting as a go-between for brokers of the two Exchanges, and such subterfuges would be practically impossible of detection."

In connection with the question which has arisen of the attitude of the Stock Exchange toward denying the ticker privileges to Consolidated Exchange houses it was recalled yesterday that although the lower courts have decided that the quotations made on the Stock Exchange are its property, and as such the Exchange has the right to restrict their dissemination, the case has never been passed upon by the higher courts, and an injunction obtained b ythe Consolidated Exchange against the removal of its floor tickers which give brokers on the Little Board almost immediate knowledge of prices made on the big Exchange is still in force.

One member of the Stock Exchange openly criticised the Exchange authorities yesterday. Commodore E. C. Benedict, who has been a member of the Exchange since 1863, heard about the resolutions for the first time yesterday when he returned on the Mauretania from a six months' absence in Europe. In every city of the globe which he has visited, he said, the Exchanges assist their members in carrying on their business, and in this respect the New York Stock Exchange fails in its duty, throwing obstacles in the way of its members so that the institution does not fully fill the demand it was intended to meet.

"Outside Exchanges spend plenty of money and seem to cater more actively for the business they control, and in doing this," he said, "in my opinion, they are entitled to all of the business they can get."

The Consolidated Exchange did business yesterday in the usual volume.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Bottles Containing Ink Are Held Not to be Dutiable as "Unusual" Coverings.

It was decided yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals that the customs authorities are not authorized to add the value of bottles to the value of the ink when imported in their usual coverings. The Collector's classification was based upon Section 19, which provides in substance that whenever imported merchandise is subjected to an ad valorem duty the duty shall be assessed upon the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise at the time of exportation, "including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks, and coverings of any kind."

The legality of the Collector's action turns upon the question whether these stone bottles are "coverings" of the ink contained therein. On this point the court says: "In the United States vs. Nickols this court certified the following question to the Supreme Court: 'Should the value of the bottles filled with ad valorem goods be added to the dutiable value of their contents under Section 19 of the Customs Administrative act to make up the dutiable value of the imported merchandise?'

"The question was answered in the negative, and, as the facts are in all essential particulars identical, we feel ourselves bound by the decision. The decision of the Circuit Court is reversed."

Judges Lacombe, Coxe, and Noyes of the same court upheld yesterday the action of the Collector of the Port in levying duty on coverings for fish paste and pate de foie gras. The test case stands in the name of Austin Nichols & Co. The court holds that the coverings are properly dutiable.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 219 failures in the United States during the week, against 224 for the previous week and 284, 165, 170, and 179 for the correspondnig weeks of 1908 to 1905. The Middle States had 67, New England 32, Southern 61, Western 38, Northwestern 16, Far Western 14, and Territories 1. Canada had 25, against 30 for the preceding week. About 90 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had capital of $5,000 or less, and 6 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

THE FOREIGN MARKETS.

American Securities Open Low on London Exchange, but Improve Later.

LONDON, May 21.—Money was in good demand and fair supply on the market to-day and discounts were firm.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was comparatively quiet, with a reactionary tendency in Kaffirs at midday, but these securities showed renewed strength at the close. Gilt-edged shares finished easy under the lead of consols on lack of support. Operators paid more attention to the new issues. Foreigners were good and Japanese bonds were a strong feature.

American securities opened lower in sympathy with Wall Street and the absence of increased dividends on Southern Pacific and Union Pacific shares. But they improved over parity around noon, and with New York supporting in the afternoon, especially Southern Pacific and United States Steel, prices hardened further and closed firm.

Silver steady at 24¼d per ounce.

Money, ¾@1 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market, for short bills, 1⅜@1½ per cent.

PARIS, May 21.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm.

Closing—Three per cent. rentes, 97f 75c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 16½c for checks.

BERLIN, May 21.—Trading on the Boerse to-day was dull and prices were weaker. American shares were lower.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 21.—North Butte was the feature in the Boston market to-day, opening at 60, and making a fractional advance from that figure, then selling off sharply until the low point of 55½ was reached. As compared with the weakness in this issue, the strength in the United States Smelting stocks was noticeable. The common advanced a point to 50 on sales of nearly 7,000 shares, while the preferred sold up to 49⅝.

SMALL LOSSES IN A BAD YEAR.

Pennsylvania's Net West of Pittsburg Decreased Less Than a Million.

The annual report of the Pennsylvania Company, the holding company for the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg and Erie, made public yesterday, showed gross earnings for 1908 of $51,337,432, a decrease of $11,913,636. The net income for the year amounted to $9,080,010, a decrease of $816,476. An indication of the amount of traffic handled by the system and of the commodities, the traffic in which was not decreased by reason of the business depression, is afforded by this passage from the report:

> Bituminous coal was the principal item of traffic during the year, 44,509,920 tons having been handled. The companies in the system also carried 7,411,815 tons of coke, 6,856,637 tons of ores, 6,424,796 tons of stone, sand, and like articles; 3,134,777 tons of grain, 4,629,157 tons of bar and sheet metal, 3,464,189 tons of cement, brick, and lime, 2,044,786 tons of iron, 1,323,838 tons of live stock, and 1,043,479 tons of fruits and vegetables. Items showing an increase in tonnage for the year were hay, tobacco, cotton, live stock, wool, hides and leather, and sugar. All other items showed a loss.

President James McCrea says in his statement to the stockholders that had the same rates of fare and the same rates for carrying the mails prevailed as in the year 1906, there would have been an approximate increase from these two sources alone of about a half million dollars. On the other hand the company was put to considerable additional expense in complying with Federal and State enactments restricting the hours of labor of operators and trainmen and prescribing the number of men in train crews, and with the requirements of State and Inter-State commissions.

LOREE IN SIELCKEN'S PLACE.

Elected Chairman of the Directors of The Kansas City Southern.

L. F. Loree was elected Chairman of the Directors of the Kansas City Southern Railway yesterday, succeeding Hermann Sielcken. Mr. Loree has for several years been Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Kansas City Southern, and he will retain this position besides assuming the Chairmanship of the board.

Mr. Sielcken will remain a member of the board and of the Executive Committee, his retirement from the Chairmanship of the board being in pursuance, it was made known, of an understanding had some time ago, when Mr. Sielcken, because of his other large interests, expressed a desire to be relieved of the duties attaching to the Chairmanship.

This was the only change made at yesterday's meeting, which was held for the purpose of organizing the board for the coming year following the annual election of Directors held last week.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 21.—Trading on the local Exchange was narrow, but with prices showing slight improvement as a rule. Swift shares reflected some selling pressure in the late trading, while Biscuit common and Boxboard preferred were fractionally higher. Kansas City Railway preferred sold off a point and Quaker Oats 2 points.

H. E. HUNTINGTON RETIRES.

C. P. Huntington's Nephew Is 60 and Will Devote Himself to Farming.

H. E. Huntington, a nephew of the late Collis P. Huntington, one of the pioneers of the Pacific Coast, having reached the age of 60, has determined to give up active participation in the direction of the many corporations with which he is connected, and in many of which he has very large stock interests. He has turned over the active work to his lieutenants, including C. E. Graham, who will look after his affairs in the East, while others will represent him in the West.

Mr. Huntington means to spend most of his time hereafter in California, making his home near Los Angeles, where he will give more time than in the past to farming and fruit growing, in which he is interested. He does not mean, however, it was said yesterday, to give up his directorships in the corporations with which he is closely identified or in which he is largely interested as a stockholder.

Mr. Huntington is a Director of the Southern Pacific and of many other railroads, electric railway enterprises, and other corporations, as well as a Director in several financial institutions.

Calumet & Hecla Dividend Declared.

BOSTON, May 21.—A quarterly dividend of $6 a share, compared with one of $5 a share three months ago, was declared today by the Directors of the Calumet and Hecla Mining Company.

WARNING
Stockholders and Bondholders
DOMINION COPPER CO.

The "Reorganization Committee" announced its plan of reorganizing the company early in February; shortly after that Dominion Copper bonds and stock were quoted in the open market at around the lowest prices on record—about 38 bid for the bonds and 3 cents for the stock.

When the Protective Committee was formed there was an immediate improvement in the market situation and prices for the stock and bonds hardened. Yesterday, Friday, the stock closed at 12½ cents bid per share and the bonds at 62 bid.

There was a selling movement when the Reorganization Committee plan appeared; there is a buying movement since the Protective Committee plan appeared. This would indicate that the Protective Committee's plan is meeting with much favor among the stock and bondholders.

Joseph Milbank Buys, for Improvement, Big Fourth Avenue Plot at 25th Street—Francis Burton Harrison's Purchase.

Homer Foot, Jr., of Horace S. Ely & Co. has sold for Maria S. Simpson the building 334 to 342 Fourth Avenue and 56 and 58 East Twenty-fifth Street, covering a plot 98.9 by 106.8, at the southwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street. Horace S. Ely & Co. have also sold for Charles Gardner 54 East Twenty-fifth Street, adjoining the foregoing. The Simpson plot, exclusive of the Gardner property, has been in the market for some time at about $525,000.

The purchaser of both these properties is Joseph Milbank, who is already a large real estate owner. This is the first venture, however, in the Fourth Avenue district, and it is understood that he has had plans prepared by Architects George B. Post & Sons for the improvement of the property with a large mercantile building, to be ready for occupancy May 1, 1910. It was also stated yesterday that the Andrew J. Robinson Company will have the building contract.

It is significant that so shrewd and careful an investor as Mr. Milbank, who is recognized as a pioneer in Forty-second Street real estate investments, has selected Fourth Avenue as his field of present operation, and it also indicates that property in this section is regarded as possessing substantial present and future strength.

The present movement in Fourth Avenue property can be traced to Dodd, Mead & Co.'s purchase last January, through Ely & Co., of the northeast corner of Thirtieth Street, where they are erecting a new building for their own use.

Francis Burton Harrison Buys.

Congressman Francis Burton Harrison is the buyer of the nine-story building at the southeast corner of Broadway and Fifty-seventh Street, sold recently by the United States Realty and Improvement Company. The structure, which is nearing completion, is to be occupied by A. T. Demarest & Co. under a twenty-one years' lease at an annual net rental of $37,900. It is reported that Congressman Harrison pays $750,000 for the property. This is his second large investment purchase of real estate, the other property being Aeolian Hall on Fifth Avenue, near Thirty-fourth Street, which he purchased five or six years ago.

Buying on Claremont Avenue.

Max Marx has sold to Thomas J. Colton 191 Claremont Avenue, a six-story elevator apartment house on plot 75 by 91, taking in part payment Mr. Colton's residence at Ocean Avenue and Adam Street, Elberon, N. J., adjoining the residence of George M. Pullman.

The State Realty and Mortgage Company has sold the plot, 78 by 100, on the west side of Claremont Avenue, 308 feet north of 116th Street, to a builder, who will erect a ten-story apartment house.

Plans have been filed for a new twelve-story apartment house, to be built for Joseph Paterno, on a plot, 107 by 181.3, at the junction of Claremont Avenue, Riverside Drive, and 116th Street. Architects Schwartz & Gross estimate the cost at $500,000.

A twelve-story apartment house is to be built from plans filed yesterday by Neville & Bagge at the corner of Broadway and Ninetieth Street by the A. C. & H. M. Hall Realty Company at a cost of $550,000.

The Yorktown Realty Company has secured for the State Realty and Mortgage Company a building loan of $160,000 on the property, 95.11 by 125, at the northwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue and Cathedral Parkway, (110th Street.)

New Building for 7th Avenue.

Renwick, Aspinwall & Tucker, as architects for the Provident Loan Society, have filed plans for the two-story banking building to be erected by the society on Seventh Avenue, just south of Forty-ninth Street. The building will have a frontage of 45.7 feet and a depth of 51 feet. It will cost $40,000.

The Bernheimer estate has sold 316 West Fifty-eighth Street, a four-story stone-front dwelling, on lot 20 by 100.5.

Lexington Avenue Purchase.

Renwick C. Hurry & Co. have sold 361 Lexington Avenue, a four-story brownstone dwelling, on lot 19.9 by 85. The same brokers recently sold 359 Lexington Avenue, adjoining this property on the south.

Bernard Gesing has sold the two five-story tenements 348 and 350 East Eighty-seventh Street, on plot 50 by 100.8, to F. Cordes and F. J. Baumann.

Leases in Mercantile Buildings.

M. & L. Hess have leased for Louis Stern to Alfred Baer & Co. the sixth loft in the Borgfeldt Building at Wooster, West Third and Fourth Streets; for M. Cohen & Brothers, to Louis Goldstein & Co., the eighth loft in the building 19 to 23 West Eighteenth Street, running through to 22 to 28 West Nineteenth Street, and for George D. Wick to Rischel Brothers 10,000 square feet in the building 33 to 39 East Twenty-first Street.

William J. Roome & Co. have leased the third loft in 33 East Thirty-second Street to the Meerschaum Company of America.

Van Vliet & Place have leased for five years the dwelling 279 West Fourth Street to Dr. E. Wehmeyer, and the dwelling 37 West Eleventh Street for the Flagg estate.

Quarters for Auto Association.

Albert B. Ashforth has leased the store at 220 West Forty-seventh Street to the Automobile Co-operation Association for a term of years.

Benjamin R. Lummis has leased for a client, for a long term of years, the stable at 118 East Sixty-sixth Street. The building is to be used as a public garage after extensive alterations.

Harvey N. Bloomer has leased for the Hotel Winthrop Company the store 202 West 125th Street, to Caeser's Men's Furnishing Company; also, the adjoining store, 204 West 125th Street, to the Schulte Cigar Company.

Deals in Hunt's Point Section.

The Henry Morgenthau Company and the George F. Johnson's Sons Company have sold, through Samuel Cowen, the northwest corner of Gilbert Place and Faile Street, 175 by 100, to the Broad Realty Company, which began yesterday the erection of six two-family houses on the property.

The George F. Johnson's Sons Company has also sold to Lachman & Goldsmith the plot on the west side of Hunt's Point Avenue, at Whitlock Avenue, extending to the New Haven Railroad tracks. The plot, which has frontages of 124 feet on Whitlock Avenue and 155 feet on Hunt's Point Avenue, is opposite the new Hunt's Point Station and near the property owned by the American Bank Note Company.

Brooklyn Properties Change Hands.

Alfred E. Toussaint has sold for the Cannabis Manufacturing Company the northeast corner of Siegel and White Streets, Brooklyn, a plot 126 by 470 and irregular, with a frontage on Bogart Street.

M. J. Levinson has sold a lot, 20 by 100, on Lincoln Road, 180 feet west of Brooklyn Avenue, Flatbush, to S. Hoeberman, who will erect a three-story brick building. K. A. Kierst was the broker in the transaction.

The McLeer Electric and Manufacturing Company has taken a lease of 6,765 square feet of floor space on the third floor of Building 2, Bush Terminal, at the foot of Thirty-sixth Street, South Brooklyn.

Sale of Staten Island Residence.

Frank Poel has sold, through Cornelius G. Kolff, to Dr. Carl Rach his residence on the corner of Smith Terrace and Richmond Road, Stapleton, S. I., opposite the residence of Mrs. Eva Bechtel. The property has a frontage of 175 feet on Smith Terrace and 225 feet on the Richmond Road. Mr. Kolff has moved his offices to the Hamburg-American Building, 45 Broadway.

New Jersey Acreage Deal.

Power & Steers have sold to J. W. E. Clark the Reitze property consisting of forty-three acres near Woodcliff Lake, New Jersey, and a short distance from the country estate of Senator Randolph Perkins.

If You Live in a Flat
has cost you from $2,500 to $5,000 during the past 5 years. Your accommodations were cramped, poorly lighted and poorly ventilated.
We are able to show you how, with a small effort on your part, you will be able to live rent free during the next 5 years in an 8 or 10 room detached house in a fine residential park with sewers and paved streets, convenient to schools, churches, stores, &c., and only 15 minutes by train or 35 minutes by trolley from the business heart of the city.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

UNITED WOOLEN BY-PRODUCTS COMPANY.—Judge Hough of the United States District Court has appointed E. R. Finch receiver in bankruptcy for the United Woolen By-Products Company of 35 Vestry Street, with a bond of $3,000.

MINUSE-NUGENT COMPANY.—Schedules in the bankruptcy of the Minuse-Nugent Company, manufacturer of marine lamps at 114 South Street, show liabilities of $4,579 and nominal assets of $4,246, consisting of stock, $200; machinery, $3,200; accounts, $841, and cash, $5.

NIEHOUS BROTHERS.—Judge Hough of the United States District Court has appointed Walter C. Low receiver in bankruptcy for Niehous Brothers, clothing manufacturers, 154 Essex Street. It is stated that on May 17 all the stock disappeared, and a City Marshal removed about $1,000 worth of goods.

JOSEPHSON & FRIDMAN.—Scheuer Brothers of 447 Broadway said yesterday that the report that Josephson & Fridman, against whom bankruptcy proceedings have been begun, were indebted to them to the amount of $3,824 was incorrect. The total amount due them from Josephson & Fridman was but $5 said the Scheuer Brothers.

MORRIS ANGRIST.—Morris Angrist, cloak manufacturer of 35 Market Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $4,012 and nominal assets of $2,159 in accounts, most of which were due to the firm of Rosenbloom & Angrist in 1904 and were assigned to a man for collection, who did not turn over the proceeds, Mr. Angus says, to him.

U. S. CHANGEABLE SIGN COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the U. S. Changeable Sign Company of 8 West Twenty-ninth Street, show liabilities of $9,754 and nominal assets of $9,285, consisting of stock, $6,480; fixtures, $342; accounts, $2,828; notes, $119, and cash, $16. Among the creditors are Frank Presbrey Company, $2,808; Frank Presbrey, $1,817; Charles Presbrey, $330, and S. H. Martel, Jr., $1,064.

NATHAN SCHEYER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Nathan Scheyer, wholesale dealer in pictures and frames at 72 Murray Street, by these creditors: Reliance Picture Frame Company, $446; Charles Friedman, $150, and Samuel Neuman, $80. It was alleged that he was insolvent and admitted in writing his inability to pay his debts. He began business in January, 1901, and went through bankruptcy in 1904. W. B. Allen was appointed receiver. Liabilities are $3,000.

DR. JOSEPH HENNINGER.—Dr. Joseph Henninger of 110 East Eighty-seventh Street has filed a petition in bankruptcy to get rid of a judgment for alienation of affections and some other debts mostly contracted in Chicago in 1907 and 1908. The judgment was obtained on Dec. 29 by Walter O'Meliah of Chicago for $10,000 and costs. His total liabilities are $16,929 and nominal assets $1,562, a note, the whereabouts of the maker being unknown. Mrs. Joseph Henninger is a creditor for $6,000, money loaned. He owes $505 to three doctors, one of them being Dr. Leopold Plodner of Vienna, Austria, $402.

FRANK R. CARTER.—Frank R. Carter, salesman in an addressing business at 31 Park Row, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $9,386 and nominal assets consisting of 100 shares of stock of the American Wire Cloth Company of Glen Rock, Penn., pledged and of no market value, and a claim for $373 in litigation. The largest creditor is John W. Wagner of Kansas City, $3,000, loans.

OTTO UHLMANN.—Otto Uhlmann, hairdresser, 41 West Thirty-sixth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $3,119 and assets of $1,320, consisting of stock, $150; fixtures, $900; accounts, $266, and cash, $4. Among those alleged to be indebted to him are Mrs. Edward Gould of Ardsley, $12, and Mrs. A. P. Heinze, 220 Madison Avenue, $1.

JACOBS & ROSEN COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Jacobs & Rosen Company, dealer in cloaks, suits, millinery, &c., at 46 West Fourteenth Street, with branch stores on West Twenty-third Street and on Fulton Street, Brooklyn, by Myers & Goldsmith, attorney for these creditors: East River National Bank, $1,700; H. A. Caesar & Co., $53, and J. R. Palmenberg's Sons, $16. It was alleged that the company was insolvent, made preferential payments, $2,500, and transferred merchandise and accounts, $2,500. Judge Hough appointed Jesse Watson receiver and authorized him to continue business ten days. The company was incorporated Dec. 27, 1905, with capital stock, $30,000; Leon Rosen, President; Joseph Jacobs, Treasurer. Bradstreet's took away its rating a month ago. The company used the trade style of Hannon's at the store, 46 West Fourteenth Street, and Maison Neuville, at the Brooklyn store. Samuel J. Goldsmith said that the trouble was due to spending too much money lately in improvements and dull business on account of the weather. The liabilities are $50,000 and assets $15,000 to $25,000.

Frazin & Oppenheim Settlement.

Judge Hough has directed Payson Merrill and Joseph H. Wichert, receivers in bankruptcy of Frazin & Oppenheim, dealers in shoes and cloaks on Sixth Avenue and various other places, to deposit $100,000 of the funds in their possession in the Trust Company of America to the credit of the Judges of the United States District Court on account of the composition recently agreed to by more than a majority of the creditors. The cash payments on the composition are 15 cents on July 15, 10 cents on Aug. 15, and 10 cents on Dec. 31. The balance of the composition is 40 per cent. in trust certificates for stock in a new corporation.

Judgments.

These judgments for amounts more than $100 were filed yesterday, the first name being that of the debtor:

Abrams, Michael—M. Dorf, $320.
Ashlvon, Belle L.—Navarre Hotel and Importation Co., $223.
Allen, Carmen—City of N. Y., $264.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, THIRD JUDICIAL District.—ASHOKAN RESERVOIR, Section No. 17, Ulster County.—Notice of application for the appointment of Commissioners of Appraisal.

Public notice is hereby given that it is the intention of the Corporation Counsel of the City of New York to make application to the Supreme Court of the State of New York for the appointment of Commissioners of Appraisal under Chapter 724 of the Laws of 1905, as amended.

Such application will be made to the Supreme Court at a Special Term thereof to be held in and for the Third Judicial District, at the City Hall in the City of Albany, Albany County, N. Y., on the 22d day of May, 1909, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard. The object of such application is to obtain an order of the court appointing three disinterested and competent freeholders, one of whom shall reside in the County of New York, and at least one of whom shall reside in the county where the real estate hereinafter described is situated, to act as Commissioners of Appraisal under said act and discharge all the duties conferred by the said act and the acts amendatory thereof, upon such Commissioners of Appraisal, for the purpose of providing an additional supply of pure and wholesome water for the City of New York.

The real estate sought to be taken or affected is situated in the Town of Hurley, County of Ulster, and State of New York.

The following is a description of the real estate to be acquired in fee, together with a reference to the date and place of filing the map.

All those certain pieces or parcels of real estate situated in the Town of Hurley, County of Ulster and State of New York, shown on a map entitled "Reservoir Department. Section No. 17. Board of Water Supply of The City of New York. Map of real estate situated in the Town of Hurley, County of Ulster and State of New York, to be acquired by The City of New York under the provisions of Chapter 724 of the Laws of 1905, as amended, for the construction of Ashokan Reservoir and appurtenances, in the vicinity of West Hurley dike," which map was filed in the office of the County Clerk of the County of Ulster, at Kingston, New York, on the 4th day of March, 1909, which parcels are bounded and described as follows:

NORTHERLY PORTION.

Beginning at the southwest corner of parcel No. 812, in the northerly line of the property of the Ulster and Delaware R. R. Company, said point being also in the southerly line of the northerly portion of real estate section 16, Reservoir Department (the map of which section was filed in the office of the County Clerk of the County of Ulster, at Kingston, N. RECEIVERS' NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT, WESTCHESTER COUNTY.—In the matter of the Application of the Directors of the National Gramophone Corporation of New York for a voluntary dissolution.—To the creditors and stockholders of the National Gramophone Corporation of New York, and to all claimants and to all other persons interested in the affairs of the said corporation: Please take notice that the undersigned, as Permanent Receiver of the National Gramophone Corporation of New York, filed in the office of the Clerk of the County of Westchester, at White Plains, New York, on April 17, 1909, a full and accurate Account of all his proceedings as such Receiver from the date of his appointment as such Receiver to said date of filing, under oath, with the vouchers and documents in support thereof, and that said Account will be rendered and presented to the Supreme Court of the State of New York, at a Special Term thereof, to be held at the Westchester County Court House, at White Plains, New York, on June 5, 1909, at 10 A. M., or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, and a motion will then and there be made that said Account be allowed and be decreed to be binding, final, and conclusive, upon all the creditors and stockholders of said corporation and upon all persons who may have claims against the said corporation or against said Receiver and upon all the persons having or claiming any open or subsisting engagement with said corporation or with said Receiver, and for an Order that said Receiver be authorized and directed to pay a final dividend, and upon proof of the payment thereof and of such other payments as the Court may order, that said Eugene V. Daly, such Receiver, be discharged as Receiver, and from all liability in connection therewith, and that his bonds as Temporary Receiver and Permanent Receiver, heretofore filed in said clerk's office, be vacated and cancelled, and the surety on said bonds discharged, and that an application will be made for such other and further relief as to the Court may seem proper. The said account shows the claims of the creditors which have been filed and the Receiver's disposition thereof. Dated May 12, 1909. Eugene V. Daly, Permanent Receiver of the National Gramophone Corporation of New York. Owens & Gray, Counsel for the Receiver, 189 Montague Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

SIMPLE FUNERAL FOR H. H. ROGERS

A Brief Eulogy by His Friend, the Rev. Dr. Collyer—All Standard Oil Plants Idle an Hour.

FAIRHAVEN BURIAL TO-DAY

The Body to Lie in State in His Boyhood Home—Associates and Leaders in Finance Among the Mourners.

The funeral of Henry H. Rogers was held yesterday at 10 A. M. in the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street. It was attended by many men prominent in financial circles and in other walks of life. All the offices and works of the Standard Oil Company throughout the country were closed during the hour's services, while the great fleet of oil vessels controlled by the company carried flags at half-mast. Many employes of the New York offices were at the services, which were of the simplest, as it was known Mr. Rogers would have wished. The burial will be at his old home, Fairhaven, Mass., which he loved so well, after the body has lain in state during the morning. A special train bearing the body and chief mourners arrived there last night.

A considerable throng of people had gathered about the church, but they were kept in order by a squad of ten patrolmen and five mounted men from the traffic squad, in charge of Deputy Commissioner Bugher. There was no crowding or other hindrance to the progress of the mourners and friends as they left the carriages and entered the church.

The church was filled. The front of the nave was reserved for the family, pall bearers, and specially invited business associates of Mr. Rogers. Many elaborate floral emblems were banked in the rear of the pulpit platform. There was a bower of palms over the chairs of the clergy and a sort of reredos of hanging vines back of this.

The service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Robert Collyer, the pastor-emeritus of the church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes, the present pastor. The music was by the Mendelssohn Quartet and included the hymns "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Abide with Me." The "Dead March from Saul" was played on the organ as the coffin was being borne up the aisle.

The pall bearers were Mark Twain, an old personal friend of Mr. Rogers; Elbert H. Gary, George W. Perkins, James A. Moffett, John D. Archbold, Charles A. Peabody, A. G. Paine, William Rockefeller, E. H. Harriman, Edward C. T. Bedford, James M. Kech, Melville E. Stone, Gen. James Jourdan, John D. Ryan, Dr. C. C. Rice, and Raymond Dupuy. The members of the family present were the widow, Henry H. Rogers, Jr., the only son; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. Urban H. Broughton, and Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Coe, sons-in-law and daughters, and nine grandchildren of Mr. Rogers.

Dr. Collyer's Tribute to His Friend.

Dr. Collyer, who had for many years been the pastor and close personal friend of Mr. Rogers, made the only address, a brief one, in which he touchingly referred to his dead friend. He said:

"Henry Rogers was one of the truest men that I ever met in my life—a man full of desire to be doing things, a man full of desire to be doing good things. I think I am sensitive to words of double meaning, cross words, words which we used to call in our boyhood 'bad words.' Since the sad news of two days ago I've been searching through my memory to find whether I had ever heard Henry Rogers say one hard word, one pained word, one unworthy word, and I stand now in this place holy to me and tell you that never in my memory did I hear him utter such a word. He was what the Holy Book calls 'A man of clean lips.'"

Continuing the preacher spoke of the "beauty of the home life of Mr. Rogers, and referred to the old days when Mr. Rogers as a young man in the oil region would "leave the smoke and grime of toil in the evening time and climb the hill to his little cottage, where often in the Winter season he would see a light in the window awaiting him.

"Henry said to me once," said the venerable preacher, his voice betraying his emotion: "'I think the memory of that light in the window and mother and babe awaiting me at home is the sweetest one of my life.'"

As years passed by, after Mr. Rogers had come to New York, he used to be absent from church every second week, the preacher said, and for this he had taken him gently to task, only to learn that absence was caused by visits to "home and mother."

"'Why, do you know,' he said to me," continued Dr. Collyer, "'she uses me as a boy. And I am only a boy to her, and that's the best part of it.' He was a mother's boy, Henry was, and that mother, whom I knew, was a fine woman. She had to care for her boy. There was none other and she raised Henry herself, but he soon began to care for her."

Dr. Collyer said that as a boy Mr. Rogers had been anxious to do his work well, and had been ever eager to step forward and find his way.

"Thus," he continued, "Henry Rogers came forward. He grew up. He began to be a power. He was strong and true and upright and gentlemanly, as far as I could find him. Occasionally I had to see him about something I wanted. I remember the first time. How simply he agreed to my request, and then, when I was parting with him, urged me to 'Come again.' What grand things he did, our Henry!"

Dr. Collyer said that the Collyer Foundation for the School of Training Unitarian Candidates for the Ministry had been established by Mr. Rogers, who had insisted upon first giving the money to him, Dr. Collyer, that its source might not become generally known.

"However," he said, "I insisted on Henry Rogers's name appearing on the books, as I did not wish to sail under false colors."

The Procession to the Train.

The funeral procession after leaving the church moved up Park Avenue direct to the Grand Central Station, where a special train of four cars was in waiting on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad tracks. Accompanying the mourners to Fairhaven were Mark Twain, Dr. Collyer, John D. Ryan, Melville E. Stone, James M. Beck, John D. Archbold, Edward T. Bedford, and William Rockefeller.

Among those at the service were ex-Mayor Hugh J. Grant, Senator Patrick H. McCarren, A. L. Norrie, Robert Reid, Alfred R. Conkling, Major Leigh, J. A. Wright, D. B. Pratt, Clarence Vose, Dr. James A. Parker, Joseph Eastman, William Shillber, Col. C. H. Allen, Anthony Brady, Andrew Freedman, Nathan Straus, George F. Baker, Frederick D. Underwood, Percy A. Rockefeller, 16 members of the Lotos Club, and 100 officers and Directors of the Standard Oil Company.

The Rev. Harvey Graeme Furbay, manager of the Industrial Christian Alliance, in Bleecker Street, told last night how for years H. H. Rogers had contributed $250 annually to help out the alliance. According to Dr. Furbay, Mr. Rogers always insisted that the gift be kept secret. Dr. Furbay was led to make the announcement by reading that Dr. Collyer's funeral sermon said that, though it was not generally known, Mr. Rogers had given to many charities. He wished to show that among these charities was at least one of a humble nature. The Alliance aims to take in men driven to the last ditch for lack of work, and to let them earn their board and lodging till they can get work.

NORFOLK, Va., May 21.—All trains have been ordered stopped and operations suspended on the Virginian Railway during the last funeral rites at Fairhaven, Mass., to-morrow, over the body of Henry H. Rogers, builder and owner of that system.

The flags of all transportation companies terminating at Norfolk were at half-mast to-day in respect to the memory of Mr. Rogers.

CHICAGO, May 21.—Between 9 and 10 o'clock this forenoon, while the funeral of Henry H. Rogers was being held at New York, the vast machinery of the Standard Oil Company in this city and at Whiting, Ind., ceased to move. Thousands of employes ceased work for the hour. Tank wagons, acting under instructions, promptly at 9 o'clock halted wherever they happened to be and did not move on until the hour had passed.

FUNERAL AT FAIRHAVEN TO-DAY.

The Body, Which Arrived There Last Night, to Lie in State for Three Hours.

FAIR HAVEN, Mass., May 21.—The body of Henry H. Rogers lies in his Fairhaven Summer home to-night. To-morrow the final funeral services will be held in the beautiful Unitarian Memorial Church, a gift of Mr. Rogers in memory of his mother. The body will lie in state from 10 A. M. to 1 P. M., during which time the townspeople, including the school children, will be permitted to view the body. Dr. Collier will conduct the services at 2:30 P. M. The interment will be in the Rogers mausoleum.

Brought from New York by special train in which were members of the family and business friends, the body arrived at the North Station of the New Haven Road in New Bedford at an early hour this evening and was conveyed immediately to the Rogers residence in Fair Haven. Flags are displayed at half mast all over the town, and the public buildings, which were gifts from Mr. Rogers, were draped in sombre black.

A large number of people crowded the platform of the railroad station at New Bedford when the special, consisting of two baggage cars and three Pullman coaches, pulled in. Mrs. Rogers, the widow, was one of the first to leave the train, and pass through the crowd to the street entrance. There she entered an automobile, and, with members of her family, was taken to the Rogers Summer home. Two other automobiles and ten carriages conveyed the rest of the party, some to the Rogers residence and others to the Tabitha Inn.

The immediate family party included Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Benjamin, Miss Beatrice Benjamin, Roger Benjamin, Mr. and Mrs. Urban H. Broughton and two children, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Coe and children, William and Robert; Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Jr., and Rufus A. Rogers, a brother.

Among the business associates and personal friends who came on the special train were Col. A. G. Payne, James M. Beck, John D. Ryan, Raymond Dupuy, Dr. C. C. Rice, the family physician; William Rockefeller, the Rev. Robert Collyer, D. D., and Miss Kate I. Harrison, private secretary to Mr. Rogers.

DOG HELPS SAVE PARSON.

Drags the Rev. E. T. Ferry Into Shallow Water When Canoe Upsets.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—While canoeing on the Delaware River at Trenton to-day, the Rev. Asa Ferry, pastor of Bethany Presbyterian Temple, Fifty-fourth and Spruce Streets, this city, and his brother, the Rev. Ebenezer T. Ferry of Morrisville, Penn., were thrown into the water when their craft upset. They were saved from drowning by the Morrisville minister's dog Bob.

Both men are good swimmers, but while making their way to shore the Rev. Ebenezer T. Ferry was seized with cramps. His brother became exhausted in his efforts to get him ashore. The dog swam to his master, seized his coat collar, and helped to drag him to shallow water.

INDICT NEW YORK COAL MEN.

Eight Accused of Conspiracy to Defraud Government of Coal Lands.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., May 21.—A Federal Grand Jury to-day returned thirteen indictments charging conspiracy to defraud the Government of thousands of acres of valuable coal lands in Big Horn County, now controlled by the Gebo Coal Company. The defendants are Samuel W. Gebo, George W. Dally, Wilberforce Scully, John Nelson, John B. Wight, Rufus J. Ireland, Thomas McDonald, and Frank T. Wells, New York coal operators.

The land, which is in the Owl Creek District of Big Horn County, was filed on three years ago. The entries have been under investigation for a year. Witnesses were brought to Wyoming from New York to testify.

A MERGER IN SETTLEMENTS.

Three Brooklyn Organizations to Unite in a New House.

Three important Brooklyn social settlements, the Asacog House, the Italian Settlement, and the Maxwell House, all within a few blocks of each other, will consolidate as the Neighborhood Guild and erect a new home. This merger of Brooklyn settlements came about through a man interested in all forms of social work, who called a meeting of the various boards of control and suggested a combination of efforts.

STOP SUNDAY SHOWS AT CONEY ISLAND

Bingham Says He Has Told the Police to See That the Law Is Strictly Enforced To-morrow.

CONFERS WITH THE MAYOR

McClellan Says His Position Is a Natural Outgrowth of His Stand Against Moving Picture Shows.

From present indications Coney Island will experience the "tightest" Sunday in its history to-morrow. Police Commissioner Bingham announced yesterday that he had made a tour of the Island to familiarize himself with conditions there, and that he has issued orders to the police to see that the Sunday law is strictly enforced to-morrow. He also said that a large force of plain-clothes men will be sent to the Island to assist the uniformed police, and that they will pay particular attention to the Bowery.

Gen. Bingham had a short talk with the Mayor at the latter's office again yesterday afternoon on the matter. All he would say when he left was that the "law is the law and it must be obeyed." The Mayor went into the matter again in detail and explained his position as a natural outgrowth of the stand taken by him in regard to moving picture shows. Last Fall he started a crusade against these establishments, which had sprung up all over the city, many of them in unsanitary and unsafe buildings, and conducted under undesirable conditions. He instructed the Chief of the Bureau of Licenses to issue only six-day licenses to these places in the future.

The matter was immediately taken to the courts by the moving picture people and several decisions were obtained. In all of these "common shows" were treated generally. The moving picture exhibitions come under this head, together with all the smaller amusements at Coney Island—ferris wheels, roller coasters, shooting galleries, and ball and cane games.

"The decisions obtained were rather conflicting," said the Mayor yesterday, "but they all generalized on the question of common shows. Justice Thomas declared that I could not authorize a violation of the Sunday law as laid down in the Penal Code by granting seven-day licenses to common shows. Justice Carr declared that I could not restrict the licenses of common shows to six days, but that the Sunday law must be enforced just the same."

The Mayor declared that he has instructed the Chief of the Bureau of Licenses to issue only six-day licenses to the proprietors of common shows, as their present permits expire. These men have operated in the past under yearly licenses without reference to the number of days in the week that they could remain open. The majority of the Coney Island licenses will not expire until late in June.

The Mayor laughed when he was told of Frederic Thompson's having labeled all the attractions in Luna Park with some kind of an educational or religious name, but intimated that the law will be enforced with reference to the character of the exhibition rather than the name attached to it.

The Mayor was asked what would be done if, after repeated arrests, the Police Magistrates continue to discharge the prisoners taken, and he replied: "The District Attorney can always take the cases to the Grand Jury."

The Mayor intimated that the policy which he has adopted with reference to Coney Island will be followed out at all the other beach resorts and amusement parks in the city.

Several more injunctions were served upon the Mayor through the Corporation Counsel yesterday. This is the only remedy of the amusement proprietors until the matter can be decided by the courts.

More than 500 business men of Coney Island attended the mass meeting under the auspices of the Thirty-first Ward Board of Trade which was held in Stauch's Assembly Rooms in the Bowery, Coney Island, last night to discuss the Coney Island situation as relates to Sunday closing. Owen F. Finnerty, President of the association, announced that he had visisted Mayor McClellan yesterday. The Mayor said, according to Mr. Finnerty:

"You get your cops." The continuance of policemen on the Bowery has been desired greatly by property holders along the thoroughfare, and Mr. Finnerty's news was received with satisfaction.

The meeting appointed a committee of twenty-five residents and business men to call upon the Mayor this morning and ask that he withhold further action until a test case could be carried to Albany and a decision obtained.

REYNOLDS SAYS HE'LL FIGHT.

Dreamland's Owner Declares "Blue Law" Enforcement Ridiculous.

Ex-Senator Reynolds, principal owner of Dreamland, Coney Island, who came back from Europe yesterday on the Mauretania, declared after an interview with his representatives, who boarded the steamer down the bay, that he intended to fight the "Blue Laws" to a finish. It was ridiculous, he said.

"What will the Mayor and the Police Commissioner do next?" he said. "Sunday is the one day when the poor man can take his family out for an outing, and it is an outrage to attempt to shut up the places where such people can enjoy themselves. I shall do all in my power to prevent the enforcement of the old Blue laws that have made our ancestors a mark of ridicule. In this attempt at curtailing the innocent enjoyment of the people I know I will have the moral support of every fair-minded man and woman."

MOVING-PICTURE MAN LOSES.

Court Refuses to Continue an Injunction Against Sunday Interference.

The application made by Nicola Seraphine, a moving picture exhibitor, for the continuance of an injunction restraining the city from interfering with his Sunday performances was denied by Supreme Court Justice Gildersleeve yesterday. Seraphine also asked the court to declare null and void the provision in his license which sets forth that "in consideration of receiving this license the undersigned licensee stipulates and agrees that he will not open or operate his moving picture show on Sundays." This was also denied.

NEGRO NOT EQUAL TO WHITE.

Suffers Less Humiliation in False Arrest, Court Holds.

A negro's humiliation following his arrest is not as great as a white man's and the damages he is entitled to for false arrest should not be put at as high a figure as a white man's, according to Justice Dugro. The Justice's opinion is filed in the case of George W. Griffin, a negro porter on a Pullman car, against Daniel M. Brady, and by a vote of three to two the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday approved the trial Justice's conclusions.

Griffin said in his complaint that on Jan. 25, 1906, at Montreal, Can., Brady, who is a brother of "Diamond Jim" Brady, and President of the Brady Brass Company, maliciously caused his arrest on the charge of having stolen a card case containing $20, several railroad passes, and valuable papers, but that next day, when the case was investigated by a Magistrate, he was discharged. Thereupon he brought suit against Brady for $10,000.

The jury awarded Griffin $2,500, whereupon Justice Dugro told Griffin's lawyers that he would set the verdict aside unless their client would consent to a reduction of the amount of damages to $300. When the negro's counsel refused, Justice Dugro replied that no such verdict would ever stand in any court for the plaintiff. Referring to Griffin, he added:

"He was a porter, and while he is just as good as the President of the United States, and if he is imprisoned wrongfully he should be paid for it, it would be a bad argument to say that he is just as good in many senses. He would not be hurt just as much if put in prison as every other man would be. That depends on a man's standing, what his circumstances are, and, if he is a colored man, the fact that he is a colored man is to be considered.

"In one sense a colored man is just as good as a white man, for the law says he is, but he has not the same amount of injury under all circumstances that a white man would have. Maybe in a colored community down South, where the white man was held in great disfavor, he might be more injured, but after all that is not this sort of a community. In this sort of a community I dare say the amount of evil that would flow to the colored man from a charge like this would not be as great as it probably would be to a white man."

Justice Dugro added that he was confident that the porter would have been delighted to take $2,500 for the arrest and lying in jail for two hours, but that he had kept his job and that it was not shown that his employers had lost confidence in him because of the arrest.

Presiding Justice Patterson and Justice Clark of the Supreme Court dissented from the decision of the majority of the court.

CHARGES AUTO SWINDLE.

Auto Agent Has Kull of New Rochelle Arrested.

A. L. Kull of 42 Castle Place, New Rochelle, was locked up in Police Headquarters last night, charged with the larceny of $600 from Irving Barber of Washington, D. C.

Some time last Fall Mr. Barber got into correspondence with Mr. Kull regarding the agency of an automobile company. Barber charged in his application for a warrant, which was issued by Judge Crane in the West Fifty-fourth Street Court yesterday afternoon, that Kull represented himself as the general selling agent of the Gyroscope Automobile Manufacturing Company of Detroit, and proposed that he should take the agency of the Gyro car for the District of Columbia and Virginia.

The proposal, according to a story told to the court, was that Mr. Barber was to put up $600, for which he would receive two cars for demonstrating purposes. These cars, Mr. Barber says, he never received, and that frequent letters to Mr. Kull in regard to them have not been answered.

$50,000 Fire in Lynn, Mass.

LYNN, Mass., May 21.—A fire which is thought to have been of incendiary origin destroyed two four-story wooden business buildings on Central Avenue to-day, causing a loss estimated at $50,000. A policeman discovered the fire on the top floor of one of the structures, and at the same time saw a man dart out of the building and disappear. The flames spread to and destroyed the adjoining building. Both buildings were owned by John Woodberry of Brooklyn, Secretary of the Metropolitan Park Commission.

CITY BREVITIES.

The portrait of H. H. Rogers reproduced in Thursday's TIMES was by Aime Dupont.

The British Schools and Universities Club will celebrate the anniversary of the late Queen Victoria's birthday by a dinner at Delmonico's. The speakers will include Ambassador Bryce, President John H. Finley of City College, and the Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

The Carded Wool Manufacturers' Association was organized yesterday afternoon at the Murray Hill Hotel, with Edward Moir of Marcellus, N. Y., President, to urge upon the Senate Tariff Committee the advisability of equalizing the duties on raw wool imports by having the rates fixed upon values instead of on weights.

Argument was heard and decision reserved yesterday by the Appellate Division on the appeal refusing to the committee of St. John's Chapel in Varick Street, an injunction restraining Trinity Corporation from closing St. John's Chapel.

THE PALATINE.

(In the "Dark Ages.")

By WILLA SIBERT CATHER.

HAVE you been with the King to Rome,
Brother, big brother?"
"I've been there and I've come Home.
Back to your play, little brother."

"Oh, how high is Caesar's house,
Brother, big brother?"
GOATS about the doorways browse;
Night-hawks nest in the burnt roof-tree,
Home of the wild bird and home of the bee.
A thousand chambers of marble lie
Wide to the sun and the wind and the sky.
Poppies we find amongst our wheat
Grow on Caesar's banquet seat.
Cattle crop and neatherds drowse
On the floors of Caesar's house."

"But what has become of Caesar's gold,
Brother, big brother?"
THE times are bad and the world is old—
Who knows the where of the Caesars' gold?
Night comes black on the Caesars' hill;
The wells are deep and the tales are ill.
Fire-flies gleam in the damp and mold,
All that is left of the Caesars' gold.
Back to your play, little brother."

"What has become of the Caesars' men,
Brother, big brother?"
DOGS in the kennel and wolf in the den
Howl for the fate of the Caesars' men.
Slain in Asia, slain in Gaul,
By Dacian border and Persian wall;
Rhineland orchard and Danube fen
Fatten their roots on Caesar's men."

"Why is the world so sad and wide,
Brother, big brother?"
SAXON boys by their fields that bide
Need not know if the world is wide.
Climb no mountain but Shire-end Hill,
Cross no water but goes to mill;
Ox in the stable and cow in the byre,
Smell of the wood smoke and sleep by the fire;
Sun-up in seed-time—a likely lad
Hurts not his head that the world is sad.
Back to your play, little brother."

TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

JULIUS AND WILHELM.

In writing of the work of Jules Verne Dr. Max Popp, a German essayist and critic, has the temerity to say that "the great novelist has become so completely ours that with entire justification we may call him Julius Verne, just as if he were a German by birth." "After this," writes an English reviewer of Dr. Popp's book, "we fear it is but a short step to 'Wilhelm' Shakespeare."

THE DIAMOND NECKLACE.

From Paris comes the interesting announcement that the authorities at the Bibliothèque Nationale are actively engaged in collecting all the "pieces judiciaires" of famous cases such as that of the Diamond Necklace, which has figured so prominently in works of fiction and alleged historical novels, as well as in genuine histories. When the work of collection is completed the material will be embodied in a catalogue, expected to extend to seven volumes, which will be compiled under the direction of M. Marchal, the Keeper of the Printed Book Department. The publication, it is announced, will greatly facilitate the research work of students.

MEREDITH, INCOMPARABLE NOVELIST.

Mr. Forbes Lindsay of this city, writing to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS, directs attention to the following extract from Oscar Wilde's "The Soul of Man Under Socialism," referring to the work of the late George Meredith, which has a peculiar interest at the present time: "A true artist takes no notice whatever of the public. The public are to him non-existent. He has no poppied or honeyed cakes with which to give the monster sleep or sustenance. He leaves that to the popular novelist. One incomparable novelist we have now in England, Mr. George Meredith. There are better artists in France, but France has no one whose view of life is so varied, so large, so imaginatively true. There are tellers of stories in Russia who have a more vivid sense of what pain in fiction may be. But to him belongs philosophy in fiction. His people not merely live, but they live in thought. One can see them from myriad points of view. They are suggestive. There is soul in them and around them. They are interpretative and symbolic. And he who made them, those wonderful quickly moving figures, made them for his own pleasure, and has never asked the public what they wanted, has never cared to know what they wanted, has never allowed the public to dictate to him or influence him in any way, but has gone on intensifying his own personality, and producing his own individual work. At first none came to him. That did not matter. Then the few came to him. That did not change him. The many have come now. He is still the same. He is an incomparable artist."

SIR ROBERT REDGAUNTLET.

In spite of the general lack of accurate knowledge of the Waverley Novels it was a mildly surprised world which learned from some recent American papers that Mr. Francis Grierson, the author of "The Valley of Shadows," was descended from Guy Mannering. The truth seems to be that among his ancestors was Sir Robert Grierson of Lagg, the original of the character of Sir Robert Redgauntlet, Wandering Willie's hero, who returned from the place of torment to sign a receipt and save a former debtor from paying twice over. The real Sir Robert was a persecutor of the righteous, and the point of the story lay not in his punctiliousness but in the certainty as to his eternal abode.

GIFFORD'S PRAISE OF SCOTT.

In The London Quarterly's autobiography, the first part of which appears in the centenary number, April, 1909, is a Scott anecdote, with some details added to the version hitherto accepted. It has been known that among the articles contributed to The Quarterly by Scott was one of which the subject was "Tales of My Grandfather," and that at a certain point, its "cool but not unfriendly criticism, mingled with a certain amount of discreet commendation," changed to a "tone not, indeed, of extravagant, but of warm eulogy," and it has always been supposed that Gifford, unwilling that The Quarterly should seem tepid in its praise of Scott, "edited" the article. The original manuscript shows that he adopted a stronger measure, and cutting off the last sentence, added his own words—of warm eulogy.

WHITMAN'S NINETIETH ANNIVERSARY.

The ninetieth anniversary of the birth of Walt Whitman, which occurs on May 31, will be commemorated in this city and elsewhere in this country and Europe by the members of the Walt Whitman Fellowship Society. In this city the Fellowship will hold its sixteenth annual convention in the afternoon, winding up the celebration with a dinner in the evening at the Hotel Brevoort, Fifth Avenue and Eighth Street. Arrangements have been made for addresses, readings, and music in the afternoon, and for informal speeches in the evening, in all of which Whitman and his life's work will furnish the theme. The Whitman Fellowship was formed as a National organization by friends and admirers of the poet shortly after his death in 1892. It has local Fellowship societies in Boston, Chicago, and various Western, Southern, and Canadian cities, and also in London and other European cities.

BOSTON'S GREAT FIRE.

"Before the fire" means hoary antiquity in Chicago, but it has always been supposed that Boston, to which both fire and "phoenixing," as the tongue of the time had it, came a year later, regarded the disaster as a recent occurrence. Now, however, Mr. Harold Murdock, who wrote "Earl Percy's Dinner Table," has devised "Letters Written by a Gentleman in Boston to His Friend in Paris Describing the Great Fire," a title in the eighteenth century manner, except as to its "Gentleman in Boston," a twentieth century phrase. Bostonians were invariably "of," not in, Boston in the nineteenth century. The unique incident of this fire was the reappearance of the long lines of shouting men dragging the comparatively new steam fire engine by ropes, "pink-eye" having prostrated nearly all the horses in the city, and made it necessary to return to the ways of the old hand-drawn engines. The most characteristic word of the time was the declaration that "no outside assistance" was needed, a remark not taken in good part by warm-hearted Chicago or generous New York, or even by stately Philadelphia. Whatsoever else Mr. Murdock's "Gentleman in Boston" sent his friend in Paris, he probably did not favor him with the newspaper verses on "no outside assistance," published in other cities.

WITCHES AND THEIR CRAFT

Oliver Madox Hueffer, in a Whimsical Book, Enters Upon an Ingenious Inquiry Into an Ancient Profession With Some Account of Persecutions of Its Votaries.

PROTOTYPE OF THE SUFFRAGETTE.

Werewolves, Cats, and Sorcerers Considered by an Author Who Asserts that the First Woman Was the First Witch.

ASSERTING boldly that the first woman was the first witch, and lamenting the discredit into which an ancient profession has fallen merely because the modern world prefers to believe in the Dynamo rather than in the Devil, the ingenious author of a volume* combining some erudition with much whimsical entertainment entitled "The Book of Witches," attacks with infinite zest what is perhaps the most fascinating combination of subjects in the wide world.

Oliver Madox Hueffer, the ingenious author in question, even goes so far as to preach a revival of the Black Art, and declares that "in days such as ours when the whole problem of the rights and wrongs of women is among the most urgent and immediate with which we have to deal, it were as anachronistic as unnatural that woman should allow the high purpose, the splendid endurance, the noble steadfastness in inquiry, of a whole great section of her sex—including some of the most deservedly famous women that ever lived—should allow all this not only to be forgotten but to be absolutely discredited and denied. Persecuted by man-made laws as she has ever been, and as eternally in revolt against them, there could be no more appropriate or deserving figure to be chosen as the Patroness of the great fight for freedom than the much-libeled, much-martyrized, long-enduring, eternally misunderstood Witch." In short, as the first woman was the first witch, so the first witch was the first suffragette.

Our author, with a happy mingling of poetic feeling and antiquarian penetration, discovers the process by which Woman became Witch. While primordial man pursued the edible beast afield woman sat in the monogamic cave and listened to the cry of her first born—when the cry ceased not, went forth and tried upon the little one the efficacy of sundry herbs growing lush in the cave's back yard—became thus, after due percentage of failure, Medicine Woman. Man, returning in the evening, marveled at the woman's power to still the cries of the child, profited by her herbs himself what time he had gorged upon bear's meat. Then, perceiving her to have power over the ills of the flesh, when the storm demon was loosed and the lightnings played, when the drought came or the flood broke, the man appealed to the woman for magic to tame these also.

"Such faith," says our ingenious author, "is tempting." The woman might be persuaded thereby that she really had influence with the storm demon, and if she were not—"there is a very pleasant sense of power in gulling the overgrown baby who is so ready to be gulled." The bold and unscrupulous female undertakes the task—and becomes Witch full-fledged.

The more timid cave woman—she who is the ancestress of the patient housewife, not of the suffragette—claims no control over the demon, but conceiving of him as a "man like her own, though uglier and wickeder and stronger," she does undertake to use her skill in flattering and propitiating the bugbear as she might an angry man. She becomes Priestess. Later, the author hints, man having reduced his own department of hunting to a science and asquired leisure for observation, robs the woman of her monopoly in both departments—nay, assumes to himself all the higher privileges and powers alike of the Priesthood and of witchcraft—elevated into the science of Sorcery.

Thus it was that the witch came to be a mere servant of the Devil—not his master. For while recorded history shows that the sorcerer who bartered his soul to the Prince of Darkness for the joy of living, exacted full payment of the Fiend and often managed to cheat him in the end, the witch usually got no tangible benefit from the connection beyond the power to annoy her neighbors.

Mr. Hueffer proceeds to describe a witches' Sabbath General presided over by the Devil in the speaking likeness of a goat and participated in by many crones, wizards, and greater and lesser demons, to say nothing of "a younger witch, fair and well born, Sidonia by name, of a noble house in Mecklenburg, a tall, pale girl with hair of the color of ripe wheat and gray-blue eyes." Sidonia is "held in high esteem by Satan, both for her beauty and for the number of well-born youths she has delivered into his hands." Doubtless she is a coquette.

*THE BOOK OF WITCHES. By Oliver Madox Hueffer. 8vo. New York: John McBride Company. $1.50.

Using some discretion as to the details of the entertainment at this Sabbath, yet supplying enough to give the picture life and the Babylonish scarlet color of Sin, the author passes on to the Black, or Devil's, Mass—likewise described, with discretion—and so to an excursion into the lives and achievements of those greater sorcerers who are the legitimate ancestors of the scientists of to-day—among whom, also, if they had lived some centuries earlier, before the Dynamo replaced the Devil in men's imaginations, Mr. Edison and Mr. Marconi would have held, says the author, high rank. Such were Abou Mousah Djafar, surnamed the Wise, and Albertus Magnus and Friar Roger, the Admirable Doctor. A connecting link—according to Mr. Hueffer—is the learned Dr. Dee, friend and gossip of Queen Elizabeth.

From Dr. Dee we pass naturally and easily to the subject of lycanthropy and the natural history of werewolves. Werewolves lead—by way of cats, black, white, and gray—back to the Witch, who, as everybody knows, frequently changed places with her cat.

Mr. Hueffer pays domiciliary visits to the witches of Egypt, of Judea, of Babylon, of Greece, and Rome, and observes upon the manner in which, upon the advent of Christianity in Western Europe, the ancient gods, indeed, declined into the state of demons and gradually lost their power while the village witch held her own till the famous witch bull of Pope Innocent VIII. handed her over to persecution, growing ever fiercer till the seventeenth century, and much exalted her position at the same time that it rendered the calling of an old and ugly woman the most dangerous in Christendom.

Following upon Innocent's bull the Inquisitor Sprenger, to whose tender mercies witches were by the terms of that document committed, issued his "Malleus Malificarum," or "Witches' Hammer," wherein the marks of witchery are most minutely set forth, and the whole blame for the existence of the Black Art placed squarely "upon the notorious frailty of women." The Inquisitor declares with authority that the very word "Femina" is derived from "fe" and "minus"—because women have less faith than have men. Records of witch killings follow—500 persons executed in Geneva in 1515 as Protestant witches, more than 1,000 put to death at Como in 1524—and so on down through the witch burnings in England and in Scotland, to the notorious Salem Witchcraft—the favorite weapon of the citizens of the less virtuous sections of the United States when the New Englander assumes the sword of Righteousness and the pen of Judgment to chastise the rest of the country for such of their cherished manners and customs as involve those sins and follies which are not to his personal taste.

Mr. Hueffer thoughtfully provides the reader belonging to a commercial age and controlled entirely—as any political economist can tell him—by motives of profit and loss and the law of supply and demand, with itemized accounts of the jail charges for the keeping of one New England witch—Sarah Osborn by name, "from the 7th March to the 10th May, when she died"—£1 3s. 5d. Then, with a delicacy of consideration for the Puritan's feelings which is equaled only by the malice toward the natives of Scotland therein betrayed, he selects the burning of a "batch of witches" in Fifeshire in 1633 as the text for reflections to the effect that the careful Scot would have burned more of the ill-favored women of his native country but for the economical impulse toward toleration furnished by the cost of the bonfire.

The items in the Fife burnings were as follows: "For ten loads of coal to burn them, £3 6s. 8d; for tar barrel, 14s.; for towes, 6s.; for harden to be jumps to them, 3s. 10d.; for making of them, 8d., or a grand total of £4 11s. 2d., no small sum seen with thrifty eyes."

THE RENAISSANCE UNDER NEW LIGHT

Water-marks and Other Emblems of the Period of Intellectual Revival Considered in an Interesting Volume.

It is not, perhaps, a very brilliant beam that Mr. Bayley's researches threw upon the Renaissance in this book;* but he has illuminated some rather obscure corners that seem to have escaped other students of the period. The emblems that he discusses and pictures very fully are water marks in paper and printers' designs as used in tail pieces and typographical decorations of the printed page. These, assuredly, do not seem to be very promising sources for light upon the causes and the progress of the great intellectual rebirth; but under Mr. Bayley's microscopic examination and eloquent interpretation—an interpretation that covers a wide range of the significance of symbolism, religious and philosophical—some curious and interesting results are obtained. Whether these results will sustain the far-reaching deductions that he draws from them or not may be much open to question; but they are not without suggestion.

What he would like to show is that the civilization of Provence, in the Dark Ages, far ahead of that of the rest of Europe, was the real precursor of the Renaissance; that the Albigenses and Waldenses, objects of Papal persecution from the thirteenth century and originally dwellers in Provence, where they were the first papermakers, were the heralds of a new and liberal thought and aspiration opposed to ecclesiastical corruption; that these were destined to have their fruition in the Renaissance and the Reformation, and that they and other thinkers of like sort circulated and spread their beliefs by the water marks in the paper of which they were the makers, just as the other sects of heretics, Lollards, Hussites, and such, secretly communicated with each other. Mr. Bayley draws the Troubadours, the Minnesingers, and the Mastersingers into the circle. Later the printers were of the same free masonry, and their decorative borders and typographical oranments served the same purpose as the water marks. These craftsmen were "adepts at symbolism" and wove their traditions and aspirations into their work; they "flashed signals of hope and encouragement to their fellow-exiles in far distant countries, serving at the same time as an incentive to faith and godliness." Nay, more, these signals were the means of communication of a secret league against the Papacy.

Whether or not this somewhat fantastic idea of a closely organized league signaling through Europe by means of water-marked paper and printer's borders has any better foundation than an enthusiast's imagination, Mr. Bayley has brought out many interesting facts regarding these emblems. They have been collected and studied before, but he is the first who has made it seem likely that they were indeed something more than "trade marks." He takes up and examines closely a large number of these designs, reproducing them in the text with very lavish illustration, and interpreting them with a vast amount of erudition gathered from mediaeval lore on symbolism. There are religious emblems, as the globe and cross, the unicorn, the stag, the Jacob's ladder, the Tau; emblems of the Deity, as the serpent, the "Solomon's knot," the lamb, the bunch of grapes, the dove; emblems of persecution and preaching, as the pincers, the axe, the key, the bull's head. Romaunt emblems that are found in paper marks, Mr. Bayley considers, show the close relation between the Troubadours and the Albigenses in their crusade against the abuses of the Roman Church. Such emblems are the "mystic lady," the horn of Roland, the rose, the grail and the castle connected with it. Other designs are drawn from the Kabbalah.

Mr. Bayley's researches lead him into a discussion of the significance of alchemy. The alchemists, he maintains, are not to be dismissed as charlatans and impostors, as dupes and knaves, though their mannerisms in their writings are "exasperating to a degree." They, too, were fighting the fight against Rome, and their elixirs and philosophers' stones were but allegories to conceal their philosophical ideas. Mr. Bayley is unsparing in his denunciation of the Roman Church, (though his words about Lutheranism are scarcely kinder,) and his views on this subject are the underpinning of the whole structure of his book.

It may be doubted whether the main thesis of the book will be taken very seriously by those who study the Renaissance. In fact, Mr. Bayley is not free from the suspicion of being obsessed by an "idée fixe." Nevertheless his book has claim to serious consideration in some ways. It will interest, and it certainly is very handsomely made.

*A NEW LIGHT ON THE RENAISSANCE. Displayed in Contemporary Emblems. By Harold Bayley. 8vo. Pp. viii.-270. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $4.

A QUEER DICTIONARY.

Dr. SAMUEL JOHNSON, in his dictionary, as is very well known, defined a lexicographer as "A writer of dictionaries, a harmless drudge that busies himself in tracing the origin and debating the significance of words." In our day and generation, Johnson's dictionary is best known for its definitions, which range all the way from the burlesque to the brutal, as, for instance, "Oats: Food for horses in England, and for men in Scotland"; "Pensioner: A slave of State, hired by a stipend to obey his master," and "Patron: One who countenances, supports, or protects; commonly, a wretch who supports with insolence and is paid with flattery."

William Henry Baker, who is the author and publisher of "A Dictionary of Men's Wear," has, in a general way, adopted Dr. Johnson's plan in defining the words which he has incorporated in his book. In the author's opinion the publication fills a long-felt want, but the chances are that whatever distinction it achieves will be due to its recognition as a queer book, rather than a useful work of reference. Turning over its pages one comes upon such definitions as these:

ADVERTISEMENT.—A statement of business fact, customarily with one or more loopholes.

ARCTICS.—Warm-lined waterproof overshoes, usually with rubber soles and cloth tops, fastening with one or more buckles.

BAG AND BAGGAGE.—All one's movable lares and penates.

BASEBALL.—A periodical deterrent of attention to business * * * afflicting the boss quite as seriously as the office boy, who is especially subject to all influences of this sort.

CARROT TOP.—Red-haired.

CAT.—A night-prowling animal whose hide, after its ninth death, becomes sealskin, &c.

DEEP MOURNING.—Lustreless black outer garments with crêpe and no social intercourse or amusements.

FIRE.—The interposition of Providence to (some) shopkeepers.

LIFE PRESERVER.—A cork-filled belt, ring, or jacket, worn, if obtainable, after accidents at sea.

OL' CLO'S MAN.—A stoop-shouldered individual in a long frock coat, low billycock hat, wearing luxuriant whiskers and unclean finger nails.

PAPER COLLAR.—A shirt collar made of paper stamped into a resemblance of linen, formerly used in enormous quantities, (the consumption prior to 1883 being estimated at 70,000,000 annually,) but now comparatively unknown.

RECEIPT.—The most complacent part of a charge account.

SNOWSHOE.—A sort of mammoth tennis racket affording easy means of suicide.

TOILET SOAP.—Soap with its constituent greases disguised by high perfumes.

WIDOWER'S WEEDS.—Equivocal manifestations of uxorial grief.

From lid to lid one runs across definitions of words such as the foregoing.

OMAR TAKES TO BRIDGE.

That indefatigable laborer in the vineyard of humor made to order, Miss Carolyn Wells, marks the recurrent foolish April season by offering to the friends and enemies of an amiable aleatory pastime "The Rubaiyat of Bridge," (Harpers.) FitzGerald's Omar has served the more or less base uses of the parodist so often that the old mock Persian from Vagabondia must be heartily ashamed of himself—where in his particular quarter section of the Elysian fields he sits beneath his bough with vine leaves in his hair.

And if the familiar quatrains, in suffering the torture of another transformation, in putting on the language of bridge and having injected into them the venerable jests which whist players have been exchanging these many years, have lost their savor, perhaps the industrious Miss Wells is not too harshly to be reproached on that account. It remains that "The Rubaiyat of Bridge" is a dreary sort of funny book.

It is, however, very nicely got up and the illustrations by May Wilson Preston—perhaps because of their very slight relation to the text—may serve to tempt the reader to the smile the jaded Persian denies him.

THE EARLY STORY OF TWO COLONIES

Achievements of the Dutch in New York and of the Pilgrims in New England Told Anew.

THE two books, "The Story of New Netherland," (Houghton Mifflin Company, $1.25,) by William Elliot Griffis, and "Our Plymouth Forefathers," (Dana, Estes & Co., $1.50,) by Charles Stedman Hanks, together give a fairly complete picture of the beginnings of the northern part of our Nation. Read in conjunction they make an interesting contrast, all the more interesting because of some of its similarities between the genesis of New York and that of New England.

In "The Story of New Netherland" Mr. Griffis endeavors to show the falsity of many popular conceptions about the Dutch colonists and to correct some erratic notions still extant concerning them and their speech. As preparation for the writing of the book he has studied local records throughout the region wherein the Dutch colonists dwelt, the books and papers preserved in the State library and in "the deacons' chest" in Schenectady, and made research among the archives of the Netherlands. But even more important than this study, which gave him access to original sources, he counts his intimate acquaintances with the descendants of the colonists, whose families are rich in traditions, heirlooms, and documents.

He begins at the very root of his story and first traces the conditions and motives which sent Heinrich Hudson voyaging along the Atlantic coast, and then follows the events, with their causes, in European history, which culminated in the planting of the first colony on Manhattan. The civil, social, and economic development of the region over which the Dutch ruled is set forth with much homely, interesting detail. There are keen analysis of the characters and accounts of the administrations of the most famous of the Governors. Several chapters are devoted to the social life of the time, the observance of Sunday, the schools, the amusements of the young people, while one interesting section tells in detail their struggle for religious liberty. The chief fault to be found with the book is that the author has not treated with sufficient completeness the social and economic life of the manors. Copious illustrations show many phases of Dutch life in America.

Charles Stedman Hanks was a Boston lawyer who was an authority upon golf, camp life, and other things besides the law. He was also an enthusiastic historical student, and "Our Plymouth Forefathers" is a result of the researches which with him were one sort of recreation. He begins his story with an outline of the religious dissensions in England from the time of Henry VIII., following them and their growing influence down to the departure of the Pilgrims for Holland. A chapter is devoted to their life in that country, and then their journey across the ocean and the establishment of the new colony are told in detail. The attention which Mr. Hanks devotes to the business side of the enterprise and the shrewd common sense which the colonists displayed in developing and making the most of their resources gives to the book a special interest. He also brings out strongly the features of their social, civil, and religious life, making of the history of the colony a frame into which to set the picture of their daily living. He treats quite fully also their relations with the Indians. The final chapter endeavors to give a view of the men and women of Plymouth as apparently they regarded themselves, as instruments of God's will engaged under His guidance in fulfilling some great but mysterious destiny.

FROM MISSISSIPPI.

That popular comedy, "A Gentleman from Mississippi" has been novelized, which is not to be wondered at, seeing that novelization has come to be an inevitability in the case of every play that scores a Broadway success. In this instance the play makes a book, without much literary merit, which sticks pretty close to the story that is acted on the stage. The story is amusing, but it is a tissue of absurdities, and it runs a long way off from the political life of our National capital, with which it is exclusively concerned. Those who draw from it their conceptions of governmental doings in Washington will greatly underestimate the honesty of the American Congress and form exaggerated notions as to the prevalence of corruption among the members of the two houses. The book is published by the J. S. Ogilvie Publishing Company.

SELECTED VERSE OF MRS. GARRISON

Appealing Poems Which Lay Hold of the Heart Make Their Appearance in "The Joy o' Life."

BY HILDEGARDE HAWTHORNE.

SOMETHING as free and lovely, as near to nature as the growth of flowers, lives in this little volume* of song, called after the first poem in the book, "The Joy o' Life," and representing such of Theodosia Garrison's work as she cares to dignify by this permanent form. The selection she has made is certainly most fortunate; for if she has omitted some one would gladly welcome, she has included none that has not its measure of beauty. There is, moreover, not a shred of affectation or of forced feeling in any line of this verse. It all rings true, a virtue all too rare in modern verse. Pure and effortless as a linnet's song is the flow of these poems, and we feel in them the joy of singing for its own sake.

Every reader of the magazines is familiar with Mrs. Garrison's work, for hardly a month passes that finds her silent. Yet one is scarcely prepared for the extreme pleasure to be found in her book, nor for its high level of excellence. Curious and contrived rhymes and measures are not to be found here. The form is always simple, but it is none the less various. And it is in particular the exquisite ease of this singer's expression that enchants the ear. Language appears to translate itself to music at her hands by a process beyond her control; it simply happens—and there it is to delight you. The lilt of such lines as those of the initial poem, for instance, lingers without effort in the memory:

Oh, the Joy o' Life she calls me from the valley,
Oh, the Joy o' Life she hails me from the height,
And her voice is like the thrill of the thrush when noon is still,
And her laughter is the lilting of delight.
I follow through the sunshine and the moonshine—
(Oh, I have seen the waving of her hand!)
In the paths that know the fleet, flying touches of her feet
At the music of her mocking of command.
My friend—I left him fasting at my threshold—
My sweetheart is another man's to wife,
For it's fare ye well my own, and it's laugh and turn alone,
When a man has heard the voice of Joy o' Life.

It is by no means music and flowing line alone that one is given in this book. These poems lay hold of your heart, they sing of those experiences which come to us all. Happiness and sorrow, failure and longing, peace, despair, fantasy, and laughter, all have their word here. Mrs. Garrison's fancy is always delicate and it plays forever through her work. Take, for example, "The Guests of Sleep" where the comers to the Inn o' Dreams are welcomed:

And old men drink of youth,
And sad men of delight,
And weary men drink deep again
The pulsing wine of might.

And poets drink of song,
But best, and oh, most sweet,
Above that brim where poppies swim
The lips of lovers meet.

Or take such a line as

But when the gray dawn climbs its windy stair.

for the mark of the true poet.

Not a page but has its human touch, its appeal to something in us all:

My Heart's Possessed hath stilled me
From all unrest malign;
Yea, eased the hope that thrilled me
With too keen pain and fine.
Yet, oh, my Heart, my Heart's Desire,
My ungained dream divine
That never turned the while I yearned
Nor closed her hand in mine.

Or, in another mood,

Long since I wounded him I love the best
And all that night my pillow knew no rest;
And in the morning I arose, and lo!
The wound I gave him showed on mine own breast!
Ah, then I knew how terrible the blow.

And again the minor note that forever sounds beside the strong current of life:

We who have failed, remember this of us—
Oh, you, whose hands have grasped the luminous
And lovely thing that is your soul's desired,
Though once we fell and blundered on the way,
Though now we turn shamed faces from the day,
Remember this—that once we, too, aspired.

Such poems as "The Little Christian," "Eve's Return," and others bespeak a faith in ultimate good, a sweet understanding of the light that looks dark, which it is well to find. To the angels wondering over Eve and the miscarriage of what they thought her punishment comes the answer:

Wiser than ye is she who guessed
My meaning over long;
Love cast her forth from Paradise—
Now when hath love wrought wrong?

* * * * * * *

And suddenly the courts of Heaven
Thrilled with adoring song.

Toward the end of the volume there are some Irish ballads that breathe the charm and the haunting cadence of Erin's voice:

It's not myself I'm grieving for, it's not that I'm complaining,
(He's a good man, is Michael, and I've never felt his frown,)
But there's sorrow beating on me like a long day's raining
For the little wrinkled face of her I left in Kerrydown.

Mrs. Garrison has included several sonnets, perhaps the most successful being "A Dream of Thessaly":

Oh, Summer, that my sad eyes may not see,
I yearn for you within the city gate;
Through heat and dust and din I, desolate,
Long for your miracles of bloom and tree,
Your soft, slow winds and wide sea's mystery.
Ah, me, to be a pagan girl elate,
Free limbed, loose haired, with dreaming eyes, await,
Deep in the purple woods of Thessaly,
To hear a rustle through the river weeds
And sudden note of laughter, shrill and gay,
And, through the rift of sunshine, look on this:
The great god Pan with hand upon the reeds,
Wet lilies in his long hair's disarray,
And lips up-pursed to catch a naiad's kiss.

One might go on quoting endlessly, for after all poetry is not something to be written about; it is to be read itself and exists only so, like the perfume of a rose. We will make an end with these lines from "The Wanderlust," particularly apt now that the world is turning green and gold again:

Oh, the voice came again when the grain was in the growing—
A-crying and a-crying, it followed where I went,
"Oh, lad, the Summer trails are clear,
Oh, lad, be up and going—
Through the far way, the green way, the way of all content."

*THE JOY O' LIFE AND OTHER POEMS. By Theodosia Garrison. 12mo. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. $1.

MYSTERIOUS WAYS.

IT SEEMS rather a pity that Anne Warner, one of our cleverest humorists, does not follow the natural bent of her talent, instead of writing mediocre novels with a "problem" flavor. "In a Mysterious Way" (Little, Brown & Co., $1.50) may indeed have some serious message of deep import, but Mrs. French has not succeeded in presenting a story sufficiently clear and coherent to make plain just what the message may have been. It is a little difficult for the average reader to keep up interest, through some 300 pages, in a heroine with a vague love affair with a still more vague man, who is spoken of as having a "mission in life," "work to do," and other entirely estimable, but unexplained qualities. One understands that Alva, the heroine, has a noble soul and dauntless courage, but one never quite grasps what all the trouble is really about.

In the minor characters, Mrs. French comes into her own. Mrs. Ray, who is postmistress, seamstress, farmer, grocer, and gossip-in-general to the small town, is a real creation, full of life and rich humor. A parrot, which does not appear in person, furnishes another comic relief, and the villagers are characterized with that sure sensing of the absurd in which Anne Warner excels. The illustrations are by J. V. McFall.

STORIES BY O. HENRY.

A NEW series of stories by O. Henry, called "Roads of Destiny," (Doubleday, Page & Co., $1.50,) consists of tales reprinted from various magazines of the past few years. For the most part the stories deal with adventures in Central America and in the Southwest, only a few being concerned with the four million which Mr. Porter understands so thoroughly. The tale which gives the title to the volume is a rather weird conception. A young poet of olden times starts out on the broad highway to seek his fortune. In the first supposititious essay he takes the turning to the right, in the second he follows the road to the left, and in the third he retraces his steps to his native village. But the end in each case is the same—he cannot escape his destiny. It is a little romance of fatality.

The stories are marked by that humor and keen characterization which we have come to expect from this industrious writer. There are enough thrills in the more serious tales to furnish material for several novels to more thrifty writers. It is an excellent volume for Summer reading, though not, on the whole, quite so worthy of serious praise as the former collections of Mr. Porter's work.

THE MAN WITHOUT A SHADOW

Recovering from a broken head, the hero of this story starts out, in spite of lack of money and the evil designs of ruthless enemies, on a courageous quest for his own lost personality. In his search he finds a beautiful woman, with whom he falls in love and who loves him and believes herself to be his wife.

"'The Man Without A Shadow' forgets his past life, but the reader of this delightful story does more than that—he forgets past, present, and future—everything, in fact, but the words before him, and he just can't read fast enough, so anxious is he to know what is going to happen next."—Mobile Register.

The Negro Problem
Abraham Lincoln's Solution
By William P. Pickett
500 pages 8*vo.* $2.50 net

Mr. Pickett states and elaborates Lincoln's proposed disposition of the negro question by assisted emigration following emancipation. The author, after reviewing the history of the problem and discussing the present situation of the negro population, boldly argues that the nation's treatment of the black man since the close of the Civil War has been founded upon a mistaken policy. He points out the inadequacy of the currently advocated solutions of the problem and asserts that we must return to Lincoln's simple and efficacious remedy for the national evils resulting from the negro's presence. The work is exhaustive upon the subject and is likely to attract widespread attention.

A SENATE PAGE OF OTHER DAYS

Christian F. Eckloff Writes Some Interesting Recollections of Experiences in Washington in Ante-Bellum Days

CHRISTIAN F. ECKLOFF'S "Memoirs of a Senate Page," (Broadway Publishing Company, $1.20,) dates back to years just prior to the outbreak of the civil war, when Sumner, Wade, Douglas, Hamlin, Houston, John P. Hale, Breckinridge, Toombs, and Jefferson Davis were members of the Senate and were debating the great questions upon which the North and South were at variance.

When Mr. Eckloff entered upon his duties as page the Senate was located in the hall now used by the United States Supreme Court. Jesse D. Bright was President pro tem. of the Senate, having been elected to that post soon after the death of Vice President King. The principal officials of the Senate were Asbury Dickens of North Carolina, Secretary; James M. Jamison of Virginia, Postmaster; Richard Sutton, Official Reporter, and Col. Deming R. McNair of Kentucky, Sergeant-at-Arms. The Senators generally were clad in black broadcloth, and most of them wore silk hats, although some of the Southerners and Westerners were often seen in what were known as black Kossuth hats. A majority of the Senators used quill pens, and dried their sheets by sanding them.

Snuff-taking was quite prevalent, and Seward, Foot, Collamer, Cass, Evans, and Butler, Mr. Eckloff says, were so much addicted to it that they could not speak well without frequently dipping into their boxes. There were always two well-filled snuffboxes on the President's desk, and several of the pages carried snuff in order to be able to respond to Senatorial demands for it.

For artificial heat the Senate relied upon grate fires of hickory wood and upon Franklin stoves. The hall was not always warm enough to be comfortable, and on cold days Senators were apt to leave their seats and back up to the grate fires, or, if they stayed at their desks, to wrap themselves from head to foot in their woolen shawls. The Senate restaurant was a little room known as the "Hole in the Wall," into which no outsider was admitted without a Senatorial escort. There was no telegraph office in the Capitol, the nearest office being in the basement of the National Hotel, at Pennsylvania Avenue and Sixth Street.

There were about twelve pages and they had an organization of their own, with a full set of officers. "The President of our organization," Mr. Eckloff remarks, "was Arthur P. Gorman. He as a boy exhibited those sterling qualities which developed the man and the distinguished Senator. His temperament was very even and kindly, always considerate of the feelings of others; a youth of very few words, except on rare occasions."

In those days the Senators had no secretaries, and after adjournment each day most of them remained in the hall to attend to their correspondence. Their letters were turned over to the pages to be sealed and mailed. Occasionally when the boys got hilarious they would put a good deal more wax on the Senatorial letters than was becoming to them.

The Senate in Mr. Eckloff's time was perhaps a bit more dignified than it is to-day. He recalls that one afternoon after adjournment Senator Wilson, afterward Vice President Wilson, sent him to rebuke an Illinois Representative who had sat down in the Senate hall with his feet on a desk. Mr. Wilson's message was that the position the Representative had taken was not a proper one for any one to assume in the Senate chamber. "You're more dignified over here than we are in the House," laughingly commented the Representative as he lowered his feet to the floor.

But there was one Senator who refused to be dignified—Senator Houston of Texas. "Day after day," says Mr. Eckloff, "during spare moments, he sat there in his seat carving hearts out of soft pine wood. They were pieces about the size of the hand. When he had completed one of these works of art he would summon a page, and, pointing toward some fair spectator in the gallery, would say: 'Give this to that lady up there, with Gen. Sam Houston's compliments.'" Mr. Eckloff remembers Houston as one of the gentlest and kindest of men.

Of Jefferson Davis Mr. Eckloff writes: "Austere in manner, with the bearing of a soldier and the tread of an Indian brave on the warpath, he was a figure commanding attention on the Senate floor. He seemed always to be absorbed in things above the common level, not much of a talker nor easily drawn out. Approachable only by his associates in the Senate, I always considered him a very cold man."

Toombs impressed the page Eckloff as being a very forcible speaker. "He was like a lion both in appearance and in actions, fearless, bold, powerfully built, and with a voice of thunder. He reminded me always of Edwin Forrest in the character of Jack Cade, the bondman of Kent."

Benjamin F. Wade was another Senator of whom Mr. Eckloff retains pleasing recollections. "I remember," he says, "what a fine appearance he made as President pro tempore of the Senate. He never wore a finger ring or breast pin. He cared nothing for adornment. Dressed always in plain black clothes, with standing collar of the old style, immaculate in every detail, he was the picture of the true American statesman."

Mr. Eckloff has something interesting to say about most of the men who were leaders in the Senate in his day, and in a number of cases he has directly connected his recollections of Senators with summaries of great debates in which they participated.

THE XXIII. CENTURY.

WE ARE indebted to John Ira Brant for a conception of what the world may be like in the early part of the twenty-third century! He presents this conception in a small volume bearing the title, "The New Regime, A. D. 2202," (Cochrane Publishing Company, $1.)

Whoever is able to convince himself the world's conditions will be practically those described in Mr. Brant's dream will be able to believe that in less than 300 years poverty, hunger, and dirt will have been abolished, that all manner of vice will have been discarded, that peace will have been permanently established all over the globe, that ideal relations will have been arranged between the rich and the poor, and that in all essential respects wrongdoing and wrong thinking will have been so thoroughly eradicated that all the peoples of the earth will be dwelling paradisically, everybody well dressed, well fed, well honored, and beautifully content.

The whole world, according to Mr. Brant's scheme, would be under one federal government, the seat of which would be on the northern coast of France, and the relations of this government to the governments of the nations would be like that existing between our Federal Government and the Governments of the several States. Industrially, the world would be under such regulation that there would be no losses through overproduction or excessive competition. In respect to science, most admirable provisions would be made, every facility being furnished for research and invention. Railroads would be operated with a perfection the Harrimans, Hills, and Goulds of our day have not even dreamed of, and passengers would travel on them absolutely free of expense. Free ocean travel also would be a feature of Mr. Brant's world; whole families would go about in beautiful ships and see as much of foreign ports as they might care to look at.

A lot of other idealities are included in Mr. Brant's scheme of reformation, but we doubt that any of them will seem half so attractive to the American reader as the provision for free travel at home and abroad, to which we have just referred. Unlimited travel at nothing a mile is a very appealing prospect; some may urge it would be unwise to let our minds dwell upon this prospect lest contemplation of it fill us with envy of our posterity.

LOVE AND WAR IN MOROCCO

IN THE WAKE OF THE GREEN BANNER," (Charles Scribner's Sons, $1.50,) by Eugene Paul Metour, is noteworthy because of the intensity of its local coloring. Only a man who has known Morocco intimately and loved the kaleidoscope of its many-nationed life could have written it. The pages are filled with a motley crowd of characters—an American painter, French officers, a Circassian girl, Arabs, Moslem tribesmen, Spaniards, negroes, and each of them is portrayed with his own personal and national individuality made salient against that of the others. The story is concerned with an uprising of the Moslem tribes against the French, and there are scenes of battle and scenes in camp and still other scenes in the town before the attack breaks out. All are set forth with that faithful attention to detail that makes the book as a whole so vivid a picture of the country and the life with which it deals. Sometimes, indeed, a little less attention to detail and a little more swiftness and vividness of movement would have given the same result without the little touch of tedium that, as it is, sometimes mars the pages. A love story runs through the excitement of skirmishes and camps, the heroine being a somewhat enigmatical young woman who is the daughter of the French General and the cousin of the American painter. Contrasted with her is a passionate and naive young Circassian. Best in character drawing of all the many people in the book is a Corsican Captain of prodigious valor and equal passion for glory, who wins the love of the French girl.

MRS. GLYN'S IDEAS OF AMERICANS

The Novelist's Visit a Year Ago Furnishes "Elizabeth" with Many Characteristic Adventures and Observations.

MRS. ELINOR GLYN has made a book about her recent visit to the United States of America following upon the splutter and splash among the talkative and unsophisticated which was caused by the spectacular plunge of her lady of the famous tiger skin into public notice. To be sure, readers trained in the French school of scandal found it a dull "Three Weeks," for all the black and gold glamour of the tiger skin and the regal splendor of the lady from Eastern Europe, with her taking ways. But "Three Weeks" obtained a certain vogue, and it gained for Mrs. Glyn, among other things, acquaintance with a large number of a hard-working and deserving class of artisans—the New York newspaper reporters.

It is of them she remarks in the present volume ("Elizabeth Visits America," Duffield & Co.) that they "were perfectly polite, but asked direct questions," adding that they were, "all but two, of the same type—very prominent foreheads, deep-set eyes, white faces, origin south of France or Corsican mixed with Jew to look at, with the astounding American acuteness added, and all had the expression of a good terrier after a rat, the most intense concentration." It is clear that Mrs. Glyn enjoyed her meetings with these reporters—though she is rather spiteful toward what she calls "the female ones."

In the book itself Mrs. Glyn goes back to her earlier and more entertaining manner—the mixture of assumed simplicity and demure audacity which furnished the charm of "The Visits of Elizabeth," "The Reflections of Ambrosine," "The Vicissitudes of Evangeline," and the rest. Resuming her Elizabethan disguise, (Elizabeth has had a little tiff with her Marquess; he has gone off to Africa to shoot lions and recover his temper, while she has left her "sweet angels of children, Hurstbridge and Ermyntrude," in the care of her mamma,) our lively author goes out to seek new adventures and to see America. Americans in general she finds—in one word—dears, though they speak a foreign language and are rather in the cub stage, while the smart set in New York and the pork-prosperous in Chicago are distinctly unprepossessing. The men, to be sure, are "of quite another sex to English or French—I mean you feel more as if you were out with kind Aunts or Grandmothers or benevolent Uncles than just men. They don't try to make the least love to you or say things with two meanings, and they are perfectly brotherly and serious, unless they are telling you anecdotes with American humor—and that is not subtle. It is something that makes you laugh the moment you hear it, you have not to think a scrap."

The men in Philadelphia, however, are different—quite human enough to flirt with, in fact—and Elizabeth meets one bronzed young Westerner who falls head over heels in love with her before he finds out that she is married and a Marchioness, and afterward behaves in the most thrillingly chivalrous manner. He is not only all of a man, but the finest of nature's noblemen. For a time you are not sure whether the Marquess may not return from his lions to find his Marchioness provided with an American divorce—but this is an Elizabeth-Ambrosine-Evangeline book. Of course, nothing really the least out of the way happens—it is only talked about.

Elizabeth not only sees New York, Newport, Long Island, Philadelphia—she goes West to Chicago and then quite across the continent to San Francisco and up into the most lovely Bret Harte mining camp—travels in a private car and meets a perfect darling of an enormously rich Senator. There is not much of a story, but the episodes and the observations are highly interesting, both for the truth that is in them—there is a good deal—and the lack of it—there is much of that also. In short, Mrs. Glyn not only used her eyes and her imagination to her own great entertainment during her grand tour of the United States of America, but she has used her pen and her wits very cleverly in telling the Americans what she thinks it will amuse them most to have her say about them. Even when she is cruel she takes care to flatter the pet foibles of all but the grossly-pork-prosperous and the smart set already mentioned.

For instance, she finds that the women—whatever else may be said about them—dress beautifully, and as to the men—though, to be sure, she compares them insultingly with grandmothers, and even aunts, "because they are so safe you could go off to Australia alone with one of them"—yet the worst of the sting is drawn even here. For she begins at once to bubble about "chivalry." The American men are harmless, indeed, but it is because they are splendid, high-souled creatures, not because they are, in the eloquent phrase of our childhood, "'fraid cats."

Mrs. Glyn takes pains to find all that is really American simply delightful—even a hold-up in a miners' hotel, where a gang of desperadoes stick the women of the party up against the wall in their nightclothes while they rob their rooms, is presented rather as a pleasant diversion than otherwise. If one of the ruffians just misses shooting the vivacious Elizabeth, Marchioness of Valmond, it is quite worth while, since it gives Elizabeth a chance to be saved by a bullet of her nature's nobleman, ending the ruffian's evil career on the spot.

It is only New York and Chicago—which are not American, as everybody knows—that come in for genuinely hearty condemnation. For the feverish New York money hunter and the "thick" Chicagoan, as social beings, she has very harsh and cutting words. But the most of these even are put in the mouth of some nice American, who, while he possesses all the virtues of his nation, makes no attempt to ape the fine perfections of the European.

RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

IN a little book entitled "Railway Mail Service," (A. C. McClurg & Co.,) Clark E. Carr impressively sets forth the improvement that has taken place in the handling of mail in this country in the last half century. He does it by contrasting the methods and achievements of the Postal Service of 1861, when he was appointed Postmaster at Galesburg, Ill., with the operations of the service in these days of rapid transportation and quick and accurate delivery.

We all know fairly well what excellent work is done by the Railway Mail Service now that it has been thoroughly organized, but there's many a man living today who can remember when nobody who mailed a letter expected it to be delivered promptly or even felt confident that it ever would be delivered. Mr. Carr illustrates the postal inefficiency that prevailed in many parts of the country by telling how a Chicago politician, usually known as "Hoss" Eddy, mishandled the mails while he served as a postal agent on the Burlington Railroad.

Up to the time of his appointment Mr. Carr had had no postal experience, and when he got to work he made so many mistakes that the mails were awry all along the line. One day at Altona, Ill., Eddy saw a fine team of horses in front of the railway station and jumped off his car to look at it. The train moved on without him, and he, seeming to realize that he had committed an unpardonable offense, resigned by telegraph. In later years, when he had become rich, Eddy delighted to tell of his career as mail agent. Mr. Carr heard him tell the story once like this:

> Mine was the fairest distribution ever made. As the mail came into the car I piled all upon the big table, and when the locomotive whistled for a station I looked out of the window to see how big a town we were going into and then poked into a mail bag what I thought was that town's share and put it off. For instance, Riverside is small, and I gave them about half a peck; Downer's Grove larger, and I gave them a peck; Hinsdale about the same; and when I looked out and saw Aurora, big as it is, I gave them a full bushel. Its the fairest way ever discovered, for each town got its share. Still they grumbled and began putting the mail back on me. Finally when they found I knew my rights and had political backing they went and gave their mail to the agent on the train opposite to me and I got rid of it. Its so hard to make people appreciate their blessings. They're grumbling yet.

Mr. Eddy's postal work was not quite as bad as he represented it to be, but it was shockingly bad, and no doubt scores of other men holding posts similar to his were just about as inefficient as he was.

For bringing the service up to its present state of efficiency Mr. Carr gives credit to three men—George B. Armstrong, George S. Bangs, and James E. White. His book is in the main an appreciation of the good work of these men.

Second Edition

As a character study it is absorbing. Its hero and Miss Sally show the blend of Southern charm and crude power, the unconscious strength of a long-established poise set against an energy undisciplined by traditions.

As a love story it is appealing and tender; and its picture of the two groping through what each finds so hard to understand into a new comprehension by the patience of love is deeply genuine.

The thinker will always feel underneath the interesting story the fascinating idea of the new race growing from just such blends. It will rule the centre of the nation. Will it make for greatness, or will it follow the rule of the "half-breed"?

VITAL PROBLEMS OF SOCIALISM

Aims of the Socialists and Various Phases of the Subject Considered in Books Old and New.*

NO longer is there any excuse for the question: What does Socialism intend to do? What is the principle on which all Socialists agree? Not only are Socialist books being sold at almost the cost of production, for the sake of propaganda, but they are such small books as to be almost booklets, and so simply and clearly written as to defy misunderstanding. It is easy and cheap to procure an opinion.

Three more such little books have been issued by Charles H. Kerr & Co., two of them reprints of books old enough to be Socialist classics. The first, the history of socialism, by Ernest Belford Bax and William Morris, appearing under the title "Socialism: Its Growth and Outcome," gains new charm from the personalities of its authors, for Bax was the inspirer of G. Bernard Shaw, and Morris was already familiar as poet and handicraft artist. From him we get, what is so much needed to-day, the artist's attitude toward Socialism. For although each sentence is jointly written, it is not hard to distinguish Bax's assertion that Socialism shall succeed civilization as civilization succeeded barbarism, and to hear Morris add that not until Socialism makes all architecture municipal can we hope to have beautiful cities.

Enrico Ferri, in a second little volume, translated from the Italian by Robert Rives La Monte, tells with precision of style and convincing argument how Darwinism and all biological sciences accord with Socialism.

The third book, "Vital Problems in Social Evolution," by Arthur M. Lewis, is also clear and thought-inducing, but perhaps more repelling than the other two in its flagrant pose of materialism and iconoclasm. For here is the chief trouble with these Socialists: They are so afraid of being called dreamers and visionaries that instead of proving, as they might, how "one man with a dream at pleasure shall go forth and conquer a crown," they hide their own idealism and high purpose under a cover of assumed materialism, of mock selfishness, and hunger-philosophy. They insist, too, upon attacking modern religion and the family, whereas these institutions, which might be changed for the better by Socialism, have nothing to do with the cause.

John Spargo has written a small book on "The Spiritual Significance of Modern Socialism," which is an antidote for these foibles of his fellow-workers. "In spite of all our much-vaunted progress," he says, "if we except the strivings of the Socialists, the spiritual note is almost wholly lacking in our National life." Socialism is not only unopposed to religion, it is almost a religion in itself. The social, or ethical, part of all great religions is embodied in its ideal of brotherhood. And although it may be opposed to churchianity, it cannot be opposed to Christianity, or any other individual interpretation of divine unity. He answers those who fear that Socialism might destroy individuality or genius, and those who fear that care for the welfare of children and the unborn might undermine the family. Democracy means equality of rights; Socialism means more, equality of opportunity. And only possession by all, of the means of life and work can give to each the opportunity for self-fulfillment.

It is a new fight against slavery, an intellectual warfare. Whether or not Socialism is practical is hardly the question, but whether or not our present social system is endurable. One [illegible] whether a thing that has never been tried is practical or not. All these Socialists are the least convincing when they forecast the solution of problems that have not yet arisen, and write better when their Utopias are left out. The Socialist opportunist is the man who is winning, especially when he does not call himself a Socialist. He is proving by practice what is practical.

Arnold Toynbee—founder of the first neighborhood settlement in London—was one of these unlabeled Socialists. What might be called a memorial volume, with a reminiscence by Lord Milne, has just been reissued in a cheap form. It is a series of lectures on the industrial revolution in England, reported by students. More interesting, however, than the information it contains is the sweet, uplifting, forceful personality of Toynbee, an apostle of social good, who died too young. Lord Milne, unable to find a comprehensive definition of Socialism, hesitates—as most men would—to label Toynbee's convictions. He calls him "the apostle, not of a scheme but of a spirit." But those who read cannot hesitate. Not only does Toynbee say that the object of co-operation "is to make the workman his own employer," but he upholds throughout the Socialist ideal of independence and equal possibilities for all.

Modern Socialism is truly a spirit rather than a scheme, a vision of life, as Spargo says, for workman and poet, for economist, artist, and prophet.

> This is the vision that the prophet saw—
> The Comrade Kingdom builded in their dream.

THE BRITISH TAR.

IN his latest work, "The British Tar in Fact and Fiction," (Harper & Brothers,) Commander Charles Napier Robinson of the Royal Navy has compiled the best record that there is extant of the genesis of English seamanship and of the rise of the British Navy during the days of the Tudors, the Stuarts, and the Guelphs. The poetry, pathos, and humor of the sailor's life is finely portrayed. The author not only gives the picturesque side of sea life, which is so often reflected in fiction and on the stage, but also gives the darker side; the grievances and the dangers, contrasting the one with the other, the real with the ideal, placing in parallel columns, as it were, the descriptions handed down of the seamen in the various periods of English history.

The subject is rich in literature, and the author has made free and apt use of the vast amount of material contained in the descriptive writings of Defoe, Smollett, Marryat, and the many others whose writings were contemporaneous with the men and scenes which their pens portrayed. From these and from numerous other sources the author happily deduces the typical tar of the various periods, and with consummate skill portrays his qualities and his environments.

The volume is notable for the numerous fine illustrations with which it is embellished, these consisting of more than a hundred reproductions of old prints, engravings, and wood cuts. These reproductions depict the character, costumes, and customs of the sailor afloat and ashore; costumes and customs as described by the historians, the poets, the novelists, and the playwrights of the several eras. Although, as Commander Robinson points out, there exists many paintings, engravings, and prints depicting sailors afloat and ashore, these have seldom been used to illustrate works dealing with the achievements of the seamen or the development of the service. This volume is a notable exception.

One section of it, a very interesting one by the way, is given over to the ballads and poetry of the sea. Another, no less attractive, deals with naval history in verse and song.

"POLLY WINFORD."

Nothing particular happens in "Polly Winford," by Eyre Hussey, (Longmans, Green & Co., $1.50,) yet one follows the chapters with a steady if quiet interest. Polly herself is a nice girl, a colonial suddenly transferred to a small English village, where she lives under an assumed name in order to judge for herself, unhandicapped by her great fortune, just the lay of the land. She is perhaps too wonderfully clever, capable, wise, and cultured, but you like her, and her snubbings of the rector's narrow-minded wife, her championship of the downtrodden Tommy, her stir and energy. There is a deal of fox hunting and straight riding, and many sketches of the country people and pictures of English scenery and customs. There is also a lot of rapping of English prejudices and some pretty shrewd characterization. The book will harm nobody, and there is no reason why it should not pleasantly entertain a great many.

VARIOUS STUDIES IN CHRISTIANITY

Prof. Bowne of Boston University Enters the Arena as a Disputant in Defense of Modern Thought.

THE Theological School of Boston University has long been a storm centre of theological controversy in the Methodist Church, owing to the constant attacks made on the teaching of Prof. Mitchell. It is interesting now to see that the defense for theological freedom and a fresh statement of theological truth is taken up by Prof. Bowne of the academic department of the same university. Prof. Bowne is well known as a philosopher, and his contributions to metaphysics and to psychology are of great value. He now enters the arena as a theological disputant in defense of modern thought.

The two essays of most general interest in this striking collection* are the first, on "The Christian Revelation," and the last, on "The Church and the Truth." The first essay is admirable in content and brilliant in form. It is a defense of the historical concept of revelation versus the concept of the infallibility of Scripture. He shows clearly enough that the concept of infallibility has failed, and yet that its failure has left a greater conception of the Bible as the record of revelation in and through "a great historical movement." "Christianity does not affirm an infallible Bible, but a self-revealing God. It holds that God was in the historical movement out of which the Bible came." That such a belief should demand a Bible free from all error is a "closet theology." The latter is a favorite phrase of Prof. Bowne. His constant endeavor is to make theology an interpreter of life, and not a mechanical, academic theory twisting facts to suit itself.

The last essay on "The Church and the Truth" is an outspoken demand for loyalty to truth and a defense of constantly growing and enlarging interpretation of truth. The honest acceptance of creeds the author compares with the honest acceptance of the Constitution. "We have one great political party inclining toward the stricter interpretation and another great political party inclining toward the Federal interpretation. It would be in the highest degree absurd for members of these parties to twit those of the opposite party with being traitors or perjurers. The fact and its necessity are perfectly recognized by intelligent people. Similarly with creeds, a fixed creed in a changing world must admit of being interpreted in accordance with the new conditions under which it is applied or the new facts which emerge; otherwise it could not endure from one generation to another. This, again, is understood by intelligent persons, and they know that the creed is to admit of the various interpretations as a condition of being a creed at all." These principles he defends with scholarship and with vigor. Altogether, these two essays may be strongly recommended to all persons interested in or perhaps troubled by the present conditions of theological controversy.

The rest of the book contains also much of value. The essay on "Incarnation and Atonement" is especially notable for its criticism of standard theories of the atonement. The essay on "The Christian Life" concerns conditions in the Methodist Church more exclusively than do the other essays. It is a searching analysis of the nature of religious experience, of the "witness of the Spirit." It maintains that the genuinely Christian life can be and is lived by many who are unconscious of any inward mystical experience.

Altogether Prof. Bowne has written an admirable book. It will be of interest to see how it is received by those who have so vigorously denounced the work of Prof. Mitchell.

JASPER DOUTHIT'S STORY.

"Jasper Douthit's Story" (Boston: American Unitarian Association) is the autobiography of a pioneer Unitarian minister who sought to institute certain moral reforms and to plant the seeds of his denomination in Southern Illinois during the '60s and '70s. It is a story of hardship and disappointment, of sacrifice and achievement, and is interesting as a matter of history as well as personal recollection. Mr. Douthit's strong and practical prejudice against alcoholic beverages made him unpopular with many of the natives in the section of the country in which he was a missionary, and in his crusade against ignorance he was materially hampered by persons hostile to his principles. He was an Abolitionist in a locality and time when it meant the risk of his personal safety, and had several exciting experiences during his efforts to enlist troops. The book is not an important one, except as a human document. It tells a very real story.

OUR RAILROAD TRANSPORTATION

Dr. Emory Johnson in a New Edition of His Book Considers Present-Day Railway Problems.

IN the United States we have passed recently through two distinct eras of railway legislation. One was motived distinctly by selfish interest, and ran its course in the seventies and eighties. The Grangers then were resolved upon lower rates, regardless of the results to the railways. Passion and prejudice were the characteristics of that era. The appearance of Emory Johnson's "American Railway Transportation"* in an enlarged and revised edition indicates the character of the second and present era. It is motived by regard for the public welfare, according to the declarations of its leaders, and is based upon knowledge and experience to a degree unknown in the earlier era.

Dr. Johnson's book will serve an excellent purpose in spreading the light among all willing to see it. It is historical and descriptive in character. On the one hand it avoids excessive generalization in principle, not raising theories which might be argued about indefinitely without conclusion. And on the other hand it avoids minutiae which distract attention without informing the judgment. Thus it would serve excellently for an advanced textbook, and it would hardly be less useful for the practical man who wishes to refresh his recollection with the times, manners, and reasons in which things came about.

Dr. Johnson is an advocate of a policy of thorough in the application of Government regulation, and yet he is so free from prejudice that he sets down frankly the failures of the policy as well as its aspirations. It is undeniable that prohibition of combinations and agreements among railways compelled consolidations and approximations to monopolies. It is on the record that the requirement of competition fostered discrimination, about the most obnoxious of railway offenses. And yet where Government regulation has failed so completely in such comparatively simple matters it is suggested that it should attempt to use the railways as social regulators, in equalizing markets, and costs of access to markets, by adaptation of rates and accommodations in a manner rather Providential than governmental.

The decisions of the Inter-State Commerce Commission have contemplated something of the same sort. It is well that such a thing should be done perfectly or not attempted. Already there are signs that the commission is drawing upon itself the ill-will which formerly was vented upon the railways when the railways attempted irregularly what the commission is attempting with all the forms of law. It is all in the day's work, and a useful restraining force, that railways should feel and appreciate the interaction between their policy and public opinion. But it is another matter that a department of Government or a writer of Dr. Johnson's standing should expose itself and himself to the differences of opinion regarding the "socialization of rates and fares—the collection of the total revenue to which the carriers are entitled by fixing charges primarily with reference to the needs of society, and only secondarily with regard to the cost or value of each particular service."

That is a very open question, and minds will differ about it, as they will about Socialism itself. Would it not be well to postpone action upon such theories until some degree of agreement is reached regarding them? It is easy to describe them in terms applicable to the railway millennium, but it is equally optional to doubt whether they are feasible, or even preferable to old-fashioned ways of doing the same thing.

AN ANCIENT UNCLE REMUS.

A new edition of "Tales Within Tales," first published in the early Persian about the year 550 A. D., has just been given to the world in English by Sir Arthur N. Wollaston, K. C. I. E., (E. P. Dutton & Co., $1.) These tales are adapted from the fables of Pilpai, the dreamer, a kind of ancient Uncle Remus, for like Uncle Remus, he runs to the beast fable, the earliest form of satire and allegory.

The series of stories, which is one of the Romance of the East Series, takes its title from the fact that the anecdotes, each illustrating some moral, keep folding up and branching out after the manner of tale-telling at a "smoker," where one story surely moves some other guest to say, "That reminds me—"

The author has translated the tales into plain English, although his style is a little involved—perhaps to suit the involved atmosphere of the series. He admits, however, that he has taken away much of the verbiage of the Orient, but while he has left enough quaintness to suggest the Oriental origin of the stories, the thought occurs that perhaps he has stripped them of too much. But beast stories will always hold their own charm, and this addition to the list should prove instructive to the young and at least interesting to the old.

NEGLECTED WIFE'S JOURNAL

WHILE the world stands, no doubt, and men and women dwell in it, there will be marrying and giving in marriage among them. And sometimes women will weary of excellent husbands and run away with other men for better or for worse. Sometimes, also, the hearthstone and the estimable woman beside it, whom age has withered or custom staled, will not hold the husband. The strange woman will lure him—she who is still young and beautiful, or seems so—who still spells mystery.

There will always be the tragedy of the one that is left. There will always be the husband cast aside and the neglected wife. The exact feelings of the husband cast aside none but himself will ever know, perhaps—men are strangely shy in some matters. The exact feelings of the woman in one case, at least, are unshrinkingly revealed by Mabel Herbert Urner in a morbidly truthful volume entitled "The Journal of a Neglected Wife," (B. W. Dodge & Co.)

The specific case in the book deals with the particularly tragic and peculiarly uninviting situation in which the wife has already reached an unlovely middle age—has lost her art of charming largely by neglect of it—when she discovers that her husband has found elsewhere what she has ceased to give.

Waked from her domestic placidity by the shock—transformed from housewife into woman again, her love made fierce by jealousy, it is the business of the book to lay bare her agony, her shame, her thwarted passion, her pitiful attempts to grow young, the slow breaking of her pride—the course of her suspicions and her life beside the ruined hearth, while the man comes and goes. For the man has a certain faithfulness—he is no libertine—and she is of the women who cling.

One may only guess, of course, but the thing reads like a transcript of a personal experience. If you are yourself a neglected wife—or expect to be—if you are a husband cast aside and would know how the other half feels—if you are a physician and would add another to your clinics, or philosopher and would disabuse your mind of the silly notion that men and women are rational creatures, you may find something for your purpose in this distressful and humiliating narrative.

BOOK OF A HUNDRED BEARS.

There is some truth in the saying that one cannot judge a book by its cover. F. Dumont Smith's "Book of a Hundred Bears" is a strong argument in favor of the dictum, and it proves, moreover, that the title of a book is not necessarily an index to its contents. In the first place, this "bear" book is not nearly as bad as the very commonplace binding and make-up would indicate, and in the second place it is not, strictly speaking, a "bear" book. Instead it is a cheerfully written account of the author's experiences in traveling through Yellowstone Park. "Before my visit to the Yellowstone," he says, "I had known intimately but one bear. Now I am on speaking terms with more than a hundred of the most refined, intelligent bears in the world. Hence the title of this book." There are but two chapters about bears—tame bears at that—who get their daily sustenance from the garbage heaps of the park hotels. The rest of the book is given to descriptions and appreciations of natural phenomena which have been described and appreciated before. A touch of humor here and there makes the narrative readable and, in spots, interesting. (Chicago: Rand, McNally & Co.)

The Green Finch.

F. Claude Kempson, in "The Green Finch Cruise," (Longmans, Green & Co., $1.75,) tells a humorous story of an English clergyman's vacation spent in sailing up and down the Solent in a fifteen-foot yawl. Interest in the story is greatly enhanced by the illustrations, which are reproductions of some very clever drawings made by the author of the book. The pictures are really more amusing than the story itself.

The Mother and the Father

By W. D. Howells

In words that are the simple words of everyday using, Mr. Howells has told in verse the story of a wife and husband in three momentous hours—the hour of the birth of their child, the hour of her marriage, and hour of her death. The range of joy and anguish that these contain are etched delicately, sharply, with a master's intuition.

The Hand-Made Gentleman

By Irving Bacheller

It is a story of success and humor. So far all reviewers agree that the book is filled with a certain charm that takes hold of the reader's interest at the first page and retains it to the end of the story. Moreover, it rewards the interest of the reader with scenes and characters that he will delight to know and remember. It is a tale as noble and uplifting as "Eben Holden." Says the Boston Transcript: "The story not only is interesting as a romance, but it is informing as an exposition of the development of the century." In "The Hand-Made Gentleman" is that blend of humor and pathos that makes for distinction.

Peter-Peter

By Maude Radford Warren

It's a Romance out of Town. This Peter loses his money, not his wife. Peter and Margery belong to old, aristocratic families, and Margery's family especially are upset over the change which drives the darling daughter into rustic poverty. That's the story—this rustic poverty—and twins! Light as a cream-puff and sparkling as a brook.

The Lady in the White Veil

By Rose O'Neill

This sprightly and mirthful American novel has all the dash of a detective story. It begins with the landing of the hero from Europe. He is seized with longing to have a look at the empty family house, and is astonished to see coming out of it a young woman in a white veil. She asks him to call a cab, and he enters with her. From this point on the story never stops. The author herself has made the illustrations.

The Ether of Space

By Sir Oliver Lodge, F. R. S., etc.

The author here advocates the view which makes the Ether not only all-pervading, but massive and substantial beyond conception—the most substantial thing, perhaps the only substantial thing in the material universe—the substratum of which matter is composed.

GEORGE MEREDITH.

IT is less agreeable to try to determine George Meredith's relative position among English novelists than to recall the aesthetic pleasure one who has read his books has derived from them in the last thirty years or so. There can be no general agreement as to Meredith's comparative standing in literature. It is to no purpose to class him with Dickens, Thackeray, and George Eliot. All such classifications are of dubious value anyhow, while to a reader whose keen enjoyment of Dickens, for example, continues through a lifetime, Meredith's works are likely to seem repellent, dry, and difficult. It is useless to say that he wrote his books in his own manner, by way of explanation. So did Dickens and Thackeray write positively in their own manner, choosing the subjects they liked best and treating of them with no other thought than to express the humor and pathos, the irony and tragedy of human life as they saw it. They consciously made no concessions to popular taste. Of course, Meredith made none, and his last thought was popularity. That his books, or many of them, deserve to be called great, in relation to the mass of fiction, is undeniable, but he was probably no greater in an artistic sense than the novelists who appealed more surely to the multitude of readers, from Fielding to Trollope and Wilkie Collins.

Still, to all who had the patience to master his style, his charm was irresistible. With practice the novels which seem so difficult in reading to the uninitiated become as easy to read as the simplest, straightforward narrative. But one must read them lovingly, alert to all their beauties of style and subtleties of expression. Skipping through Meredith is out of the question. The best of English story tellers of his generation, in the view of a few readers, (in comparison with the readers of Thackeray and Dickens,) he compels the closest attention, sentence by sentence, while his stories are rarely very impressive in themselves. A distinguished critic called "The Adventures of Harry Richmond" a "sketch in three volumes." Truly, it is hardly more than a sketch, as far as plot goes. Yet it is one of the richest in variety of characterization and incident of all his novels. The style of Meredith repelled the multitude from the first, yet the style is essential to the books, and one who takes up the books in the right spirit soon masters all there is to master in the style, obtains the key, so to speak, and reads with unfailing refreshment.

"The Ordeal of Richard Feverel" is the first of Meredith's significant books, and we fancy that "One of the Conquerors" is the last of them. "Lord Ormont and His Aminta," we believe, still charms the members of the Meredithian cult, which came into being about the time of the publication of "Diana of the Crossways," a quarter of a century ago, but it seems tedious to others. "An Amazing Marriage" is truly an amazing book, with little else to recommend it. But in appraising his best work we should add to the list which includes "Feverel," "Evan Harrington," "Sandra Belloni," "Rhoda Fleming," "Vittoria," "Harry Richmond," "Beauchamp's Career," "The Egoist," and "Diana," the short story called "The Tale of Chloe," which appeared, we believe, the same year as that brilliant treatment in fiction of the marriage question, which caused his little host of admirers so loudly to proclaim his genius. The passion and irony of this study of Bath in the day of Beau Nash are highly effective.

The theatre of George Meredith is crowded with interesting characters. Every least important personage is clearly defined, living, endowed with recognizable traits. The house servants, the inn waiters, the idlers, the gypsies, are never mere lay figures. Some of his rustic characters are worthy of his great contemporary, Hardy, notably Farmer Fleming and Farmer Blaize. His aristocratic types are of unmistakable verity. Sir Willoughby Patterne, the egoist, who stands for all time as the representative of his class; Sir Austin Feverel, Adrian Harley, Cousin Beamish are only a few of the aristocrats whose names come easily to mind. It seems that a hundred others as distinctly drawn figure in his pages. As for his women, what novelist in any language has ever surpassed him in denoting the strength and weakness, the fascination, the wisdom, the shrewdness, the folly of the sex? Clare Dorey, Lucy Desborough, Bellona Mount, Clara Middleton, Diana Merion, Janet Ilchester, Princess Ottillia, Chloe Caseldy, Duchess Susan, Mrs. Berry, Emilia Balloni—how their names, their traits, the comedy or tragedy of their lives, crowd upon the memory when Meredith's name is mentioned!

They have been comparing Meredith lately with Gissing. Some critics of authority find more to admire in the later and younger writer, who was cut off so sadly in his prime. Gissing's literary idol seems to have been Dickens. In his books, too, there is always a settled sociological purpose. He set out to reform things, or to show them up clearly in such a way as to inspire reformers. Coherent, graphic, veracious, and interesting studies of life are found in his books, but he seems hardly on the same plane as Meredith. Criticism of life, in the true sense, Meredith's novels surely contain, but his moral is not obtruded. Its existence is sometimes dubious. A child may discern the moral of Austin Feverel or Diana. But where is the moral of Roy Richmond? That volatile, humorous, pathetic, flamboyant, irresponsible, delightful scion of Princes is one of Meredith's characters who loom largest in our mind. There is positively Shakespearean breadth in his make-up. There is as little purpose as moral in his story, to be sure. It is as pure romance as any book of Bulwer or G. P. R. James.

Probably Meredith has no close kin among English novelists. He is singular in his style, in his outlook, in his way of studying and depicting human nature. His influence has been discovered in the books of Smith, Galsworthy, Locke, Leonard Merrick. Of course, those younger writers know their Meredith and admire him. They assuredly do not imitate his manner, and it is doubtful if any one of them ever derived very much inspiration from him. Meredith stands alone, and his place is higher, though he is not among the highest.

AMONG THE AUTHORS.

CHARLES W. FURLONG, F. R. G. S., who has written an account of his recent travels in South America for Harper's Magazine, has sold the objects which he collected from the Indians in Patagonia to the American Museum of Natural History. Dr. Bumpus, the Museum's director, declares the Furlong collection of uncommon value, "as it represents a disappearing people." Among the objects gathered is a tent of guanaco skin, which has been extremely hard to obtain, because the native regards it as his actual home. There are skulls and skeletons, harpoons and arrows, with the implements for making these, and a specimen of the fur shawl-like garments ingeniously worn fleece side out in localities with heavy rainfall, in order to shed the water.

Edwin Markham, Bliss Carman, Horace Traubel, and Leonard D. Abbott of Current Literature are among the prospective guests at a "Whitman Fest" which will be given to-morrow by the Swedish sculptor, Charles Haag, at his country studio near Norwalk, Conn. According to the invitations, an attendance is expected "of the unregenerate elect, the vagabond writers and artists." A bust of Whitman, just completed by Mr. Haag, will be exhibited, and there will be "talks" on the life and work of the poet, the whole affair to be enlivened by "a Swedish lunch on the lawn." Mr. Haag, a student of the Rodin school of sculpture in France, has recently come to this country. Some of his studies in outdoor peasant life, carrying with them a decided Whitmanesque flavor, have found their way into various art exhibitions as well as into the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Will N. Harben has left New York for the Summer and has gone to the South, which is his birthplace. Mr. Harben plans to spend some time in Charleston, a section which was home ground to the Harben family in the previous generation, before going on to his old home in Dalton, Ga.

Frederick William Stack, author of "Wild Flowers Every Child Should Know," published this week, was formerly field collector of natural history at Vassar College. He is now at the head of the manufacturing department of one of the New York publishing houses.

Forrest Halsey, author of the society novel, "Fate and the Butterfly," has two dramas in the field. One of these, "The Cat's-paw," starts this month in Chicago, while his other new play, "The Higher Law," opens this month, with Fanny Ward in the leading rôle.

The Rev. W. Elsworth Lawson, author of "Euphrosyne and Her Golden Book," has lately left his charge in Mexico City, where he has lived for the last eleven years, to go to the Pilgrim Congregational Church in Oakland, Cal., where he hopes to find more time for his literary work.

G. Lowes Dickinson, author of "The Letters of a Chinese Official," &c., and A. B. Filson-Young, author of "The Wagner Stories," &c., are two English writers who are at present traveling in the United States.

Henry George, Jr., is now in Japan, whence he writes that he is armed with a copy of C. B. Fillebrown's book, "The A B C of Taxation," and "expects to make use of it."

Hamlin Garland has been a visitor in New York from Chicago. Shortly after his return to the latter city Mr. Garland expects to go to his Summer home in Wisconsin.

Ferris Greenslet, author of the "Life of Thomas Bailey Aldrich," and literary adviser of the Houghton Mifflin Company, has returned from making brief visits to Rome and London.

Cale Young Rice and his wife, Alice Hegan Rice, have returned from Europe and are on their way to their home in Louisville, Ky.

DRIFT OF LONDON LITERARY GOSSIP

Books on Gardening Retain Their Popularity—"Letters of Junius" Again—To Dramatize Hall Caine's Novel.

LONDON, May 12.—Nearly all Britons, except those of the pure cockney variety, take a great interest in gardening. Several new treatises on this general subject are announced. The Hon. Mrs. Evelyn Cecil writes "A History of Gardening in England"; Sir George Sitwell has produced an essay "On the Making of Gardens," and John Weathers gives us the fruits of a special study of "The French System of Intensive Cultivation." The great and wholesome importance in England of "the life near the soil," which, during a good part of the year, is the complement to the life in the city wilderness, is well illustrated in works of this kind.

Earl Nelson, collateral descendant of the great naval chieftain, has written a brochure on the latter which Jarrold & Sons will shortly publish. It is said to possess great value, from the exclusive access of the author to material left by the great Nelson.

An English version of "The Jew and Human Sacrifice," by Dr. Strack of the University of Berlin, will be published this month by Cope & Fenwick. The work has produced an enormous impression in Germany, where eight editions of it have been issued. It disproves the charge of ritual murder against the Jewish race and presents the results of a scientific research into the history of blood offerings in religious worship. Dr. Strack has revised the original work and made some important additions to it.

James Smith of Australia seeks, in a small book which J. M. Dent & Co. are about to issue, to produce a strong impression that the "Letters of Juinus" were written by Gibbon the historian. His conclusion is based chiefly on "coincidences of style" and "the anonymous writer's military experience and profound knowledge of the French language and literature." The mere suggestion of such a shallow argument seems to have damned it in advance, for the announcement has been received with little else than sneering contempt.

Frederich List, the German champion of the American tariff system, wrote much on this subject, which is hardly known at all outside of his own country. There is no doubt that the biography of him, written by Margaret Hirst, which is to be conjoined with his "Outlines of American Political Economy," in the volume which Smith & Elder are to publish on the 18th inst., will find many readers, especially in England, where the question of artificial protection of native industries apparently enlists greater and greater interest every day. An introduction to the volume has been written by F. W. Hirst, editor of The Economist, and brother of the translator.

Another attempt by a clergyman, (the Rev. Holden E. Sampson,) has been made to "reconcile science with religion." His book is entitled "Progressive Creation," and offers "a theory of the origin of life, of nature and the forms of evil, and of the earth and other heavenly bodies," which the publishers, (Rebman, Limited,) aver to be entirely novel.

Mrs. Humphry Ward's new book, "Daphne; or, Marriage à la Mode," will be published by Cassells on the 21st inst. Out of materials gleaned in her recent visit to America the author has constructed a story said to reveal in an afflictive degree the laxity of the American social code and the extreme carelessness with which the obligations of the marriage state are there regarded.

John Lane is to issue a book by Prof. Archibold of Brown University, Rhode Island, devoted to the personality and the life of Margaret Gordon, Thomas Carlyle's first love, who afterward became Lady Bannerman. A play is to be made out of Hall Caine's latest novel, which is to appear in book form in August. L. N. Parker is collaborating with Mr. Caine in the dramatization of "The White Prophet."

"Walks in Paris" is the title given to an English version of a work by Georges Cain, Conservator of the Musée Carnavalet, which Methuen & Co. have brought out. It presents some new archaeological identifications, and the illustrations are mainly taken from old prints. R. B. D.

Light of the Stars.

An unpretentious story of Eastern Texas is told by Miss Hattie Donovan Bohannon in "The Light of the Stars," (R. F. Fenno & Co., $1.) It deals with simple country folk, and its principal character is a lad of ignoble birth upon whom fortune refuses to smile, in spite of his good character, his high purpose, and his indomitable courage.

EARLY STRUGGLES OF A COMPOSER

Richard Wagner's Letters to Minna, His First Wife, Tell of Disappointments and Domestic Infelicity.

THE indefatigable Mr. William Ashton Ellis would leave nothing of the important Wagner literature without its English translation. He now gives us these voluminous letters* of Wagner to his first wife as a sort of pendant to the letters of Wagner to Mathilde Wesendonck; and it may be also, as a sort of "pièce justificative" after those remarkable outpourings, as a sort of rehabilitation of the composer. They will indeed serve in that way. In his preface to this, as to the former collection, Mr. Ellis uses the material supplied him by Wagner himself to justify his relations with his wife, and to put those relations in the best light. But in truth this collection is not nearly so much in need of defense or of any "confession and avoidance," as was the record of Wagner's relations with his affinity on Lake Geneva.

The impression made by the letters themselves is much in Wagner's favor. There are 270 of them in all, extending from 1842, the "Dresden period," when Wagner was conductor at the Royal Opera, to 1863, just before the burst of sunlight came to him in the summons by Ludwig II. of Bavaria to live and work at Munich in royal favor. They were twenty-one years of storm and stress, of stubborn, dogged striving after the unfolding ideals of a great genius, of vain strife and recurring disappointments, of failure to impose upon the world what he knew were works of supreme greatness and power. The sorry story of Wagner's relations with his first wife during this period and her attitude toward his work is fairly well known in its general outlines. It was a melancholy union. She was a commonplace young actress whom he married in his salad days. His growth to the estate of a great genius came gradually thereafter. She never rose above her level; she never had a conception of his greatness. She became a suffering, peevish woman, who looked upon her husband as an impracticable visionary, exiled for a mad folly, wasting his time in idle aspirations and in the production of musical dramas that nobody understood or wanted, when he might be producing popular operas that would keep them both in wealth and comfort. It is easy enough to understand how, from her point of view, she was a very ill-used and long-suffering woman. She certainly suffered; and Wagner, from the excesses of his ardent temperament, his extravagance in certain things, his chronic impecuniosity, could never have been an easy person to live with.

Yet these letters go far toward winning the sympathy of their readers toward Wagner. He was clearly doing everything in his power to keep his wife informed of his doings, to entertain her, to cheer and encourage her. The letters are full of affection, of feeling, sometimes of eloquence, often of wit and humor. They are, in a word, exceedingly interesting—more so than many of his epistles to other people in which he struck a deeper note and attempted to preach and philosophize. He clearly strove to make the best of things, as far as his wife was concerned. It is only too evident from the letters themselves that Minna's efforts were not at all in that direction. He has much patience and forbearance; always appealing to affection, to duty, and good feeling. He frequently, however, has to answer what were evidently enough nagging complaints and insinuations very often unjust. We need only open at random to find such passages as these:

> Really, a mite of belief in those nearest one is a beautiful thing. Belief doesn't seem to strike very deep with you, and I often have to give you explanations it were better to omit.
>
> How can you declare that I never mention your letters? Please look mine through and you'll find that almost every time I thank you for the last letter received.

Once more (he writes to "Poor dear Minna") I cry to you repeating it a thousand times, have patience, and, above all else, have trust.

> Whatever I say or write, even with the best intention, I stir up nothing but misfortune and misunderstanding. If I keep silence on certain things I make you distrustful and suspicious that I want to circumvent you; then, if I write seriously and openly, and at the same time thoroughly composingly—as I, poor ass, believed—I learn that I have been hatching a fiendish plot to hurry you under the turf!

There are, it must be confessed, a good many such passages; and it is easy to imagine the cause of them. But it would be a mistake to imply that they suggest the prevailing tone of the letters. These are full of racy and vivid descriptions, often most amusing, gossipy, and with not a few glimpses of his views of the musical life in which he was living from time to time. His unhappy experiences when he was conducting the Philharmonic concerts in London, much of his life at Zurich in his exile, his days in Venice, his wretched life in Paris, culminating in the famous "Tannhäuser" fiasco, and the last dreariness of his trials at Biebrich on the Rhine, the darkest hour before the dawn—these are all set forth in lively colors, in high lights and strong shadows.

There are allusions to offers that reached him from America that are interesting at this day. He thought of coming hither with the utmost aversion, and only as a means of accumulating a little money. He wrote from London in the midst of his disgust with his experiences there in 1855:

> On the top of it all I have to inform you that people in America have been casting strong glances my way, and an inquiry has already reached Präger from a Mr. Mason whether I might be prepared to accept the call and offer of several combined societies in New York to present my things there; and they hope to let me have the formal invitation in a few months' time. Just imagine the bliss of that prospect, immediately after my return from London, to have to set sail again for America!

In 1859 he wrote:

> New York! They make me an offer to-day for five months at 30,000 francs and traveling expenses. It seems as if they want to tempt me, so I have roughed out my plans as follows: I shall ask for 50,000 francs, also Klindworth as assistant, so that I may have only my own operas to conduct, and Klindworth to help me even with those.

"Mutz"—his pet name for Minna—evidently balked at the prospect, for a little later he goes on:

> Fie, Mutz, don't speak so disrespectfully of America. Don't be alarmed—it's something to think of. Five months might easily be flung away if I could thereby make us free and independent for the rest of our life.

New York and the New Yorkers' money haunted him for some time, and his feelings are uttered in such ejaculations as, "America! America, thou must help!" The opera project was dropped, and he heard no more from the American manager; but in July, 1859, "America is on the haunt again. A German opera will not come off there; but they want to engage me for three months' concerts on the terms discussed. Well, we'll wait and see; in the meantime I do not set much store by it." Which was well, for nothing, in fact, ever came of the idea; and it was probably as well not only for Wagner and the cause of his music but for New York likewise that this premature attempt to transplant Wagnerian art was not made.

ONE IRISH SUMMER.

William E. Curtis has put into a book which he calls "One Irish Summer" (Duffield & Co., $3.50) a number of newspaper letters he wrote while he was in Ireland last Summer. He went to the Emerald Isle chiefly for the purpose of seeing what progress had been made in the uplifting of the Irish people from their poverty and wretchedness. No Government, he says, ever did so much for the material welfare of its subjects as Great Britain is now doing for Ireland, and he cheerfully bears witness to the fact that the improvement in the condition of the Irish people during the last few years has been very great.

Ireland is being gradually redeemed, we are told, and the redemption is proceeding so rapidly that it is a matter of congratulation to every Irishman and every sympathiser of the Irish race. Mr. Curtis spent several months in Ireland, and went well over the island with his eyes and ears open and his mind alert; his testimony as to the advancement that has taken place may therefore be accepted as altogether reliable.

The story of his travels in Ireland is very agreeably told. It fully justifies the opening paragraph of his book, in which he urges Americans to devote more of their European holidays to the exploration of the Irish country, assuring them that there is no country in the world more attractive, unless it be Japan, and that there is no people more genial and courteous to strangers than the Irish people. The book is generously and well illustrated.

MR. W. P. GARRISON.

AN attractive personality and an admirable career are exhibited to us in the little volume that memorializes Wendell Phillips Garrison, one of the founders of The Nation and for many years its chief editor, (Houghton Mifflin Company, $1.50.) There can be no question that Mr. Garrison's was a successful life. The great work to which he devoted himself practically throughout his manhood years turned out as he wished it to turn out; he lived and died, admired and beloved by those who knew him best, and, at the end, he met death without a tremor. What greater success could come to any man?

With wealth and fame Mr. Garrison's aspirations had no concern; his chief ambition apparently was to do well the work that fell to him through his connection with The Nation. When he and Mr. Godkin founded the paper, in 1865, their purpose was that it should win a reputation for scholarship, literary quality, and lofty political ideals. To this purpose Mr. Garrison, upon whom the management of the paper devolved from the very beginning, devoted himself unsparingly. He lived for The Nation, submerged himself in it, and found his greatest happiness in the high regard that was manifested for his paper by intellectual and patriotic Americans.

There never has been any abatement in the admiration of the scholarly and literary people of the country for those features of the paper that especially appeal to them, and if at times its political opinions have provoked adverse criticism there never has been any impeachment of its patriotism or its sincerity. When on account of a physical ailment Mr. Garrison gave up his charge in 1906 after forty-one years of hard and enthusiastic work, he had a right to be proud of what he had accomplished; for as the editor of The Nation he certainly had held it up to the ideals which were in his mind and Mr. Godkin's when they began its publication.

Those who are responsible for this memorial volume have devoted only a few of its pages to a biographical notice of Mr. Garrison's life; they have undertaken, through the publication of letters he wrote to friends and contributors to The Nation, and of sundry articles from his pen that were published in his paper and elsewhere, to indicate what sort of man he was in his workshop and what sort of relations existed between him and those who were more or less closely associated with him. Mr. J. H. McDaniels, who contributes an introduction to the memorial, says of the letters which have been selected for publication: "They reveal, on the whole, the secret of Mr. Garrison's extraordinary fitness for his profession, his attention to detail, his painstaking accuracy, his unwearied interest in everything pertaining to his craft." To this we may add that they make it clear that Mr. Garrison was a man of infinite tact, kindly disposition, and inexhaustible patience—three qualities which are of inestimable value in the conduct of a literary journal.

THE BORROWED WIFE.

DEALING with what may happen when a young man borrows a young woman to enact the rôle of wife for the benefit of a rich aunt, who has insisted upon his getting married, and has descended suddenly from far Japan upon his Pike's Peak bungalow in full expectation of finding a wife installed there, "The Rule of Three" (Small, Maynard & Co.) is a very pleasant little trifle by Alma Martin Estabrook. The upshot in the end—to employ the immortal language of Tom Hood—is what might be expected. The young man falls head over heels in love with the young woman.

Meanwhile the complications and incidents are, some of them, quite ingenious and amusing. In order to disperse the breath of scandal at the outset let it be said that the borrowed young woman is a very nice young woman indeed, and is chaperoned by a most irreproachable grandfather. Also the rich aunt falls sick immediately, and the function of the borrowed wife is to attend upon her in a darkened chamber.

The book is called "The Rule of Three" because there are two other women involved—a designing siren, with artful Titian hair, and a female prig—to quote from the maiden rich aunt upon her recovery. The confection is agreeably sentimental, with a saving spice of humor.

Swinburne's Most Popular Lines.

The Westminster Gazette notes that of all the quotations used from Swinburne's poems since the poet's death, the following, from the number of quotations, appears to be the most popular:

> From too much love of living,
> From hope and fear set free,
> We thank with brief thanksgiving
> Whatever gods may be
> That no life lives forever,
> That dead men rise up never,
> That even the weariest river
> Winds somewhere safe to sea.

These lines are from "The Garden of Proserpine."

Noteworthy New Novels

JUST READY.

Alice Duer Miller, author of A Modern Obstacle, in her LESS THAN KIN presents a love story with a striking plot involving the welcoming of a supposed prodigal son, newly returned from South America, by an exclusive New York family of entire strangers. ($1.25.)

The influence of Kenneth Graham and much of his charm seems to dominate THE LONG GALLERY by Eva Lathbury, a new author of unusually fine quality. But with the glamour of childhood memories mingles the influence of dead ancestors, whose portraits hang in the Long Gallery of Southern Court in England. Three unusually attractive women are prominent, there is considerable humor, and tragedy is not wanting.

A BOOK OF THEORY :: :: By ARTHUR SYMONS

One volume. Cloth, 8vo. $2.00 net.

This is a new and revised edition of Mr. Symons' book of critical estimates of dramatic and musical persons and subjects.

The additions, corrections, and changes made since the first issue in 1903 are so great that it is practically a NEW WORK, more in line with the author's advance towards his theory of aesthetics.

The position of Mr. Arthur Symons as a critic and interpreter, both in literature and art, has been advancing steadily for a number of years. The appearance of a book by him is of more than passing interest to the literary world.

VIEWS OF READERS.

Erasmus Darwin and His Theory of "The Descent of Man," Anticipatory of His Famous Grandson's Work—The Humor of "Hearts Are Trumps"—In Defense of Great Men—Letters on Various Topics.

I.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

In answer to the query of Erskine N. White in your issue of May 15, I would say that the Darwin referred to by Irving in the passages quoted from "Knickerbocker's History of New York" was Erasmus Darwin. The "theory of the renowned Dr. Darwin" is to be found in Canto I. of "The Temple of Nature; or, the Origin of Society," a poem published in England in 1802, and in New York "printed and sold by T. & J. Swords," 1804.

Irving's reference is to the following lines:

Ere Time began, from flaming chaos hurl'd
Rose the bright spheres, which form the circling world;
Earths from each sun with quick explosions burst,
And second planets issued from the first.

I do not find in Darwin's poem any reference to a descent "from a remarkable family of monkeys," but the following quotation from it might stand for an intimation of the later evolutionary theory as to the origin of man:

Imperious man who rules the bestial crowd,
Of language, reason, and reflection proud,
With brow erect, who scorns this earthy sod,
And styles himself the image of his God,
Arose from rudiments of form and sense
An embryon point, or microscopic ens!

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

If your correspondent, Mr. E. N. White, will refer to Erasmus Darwin's "Zoonomia," Volume 1, published in 1794, and to his "Temple of Nature," published in 1802, it will be evident to him that Dr. Darwin "plainly foreshadowed the views of his more illustrious grandson."

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Erasmus Darwin is the Darwin referred to in the passage from Irving quoted on your first page in your issue of May 15. In his poem, "The Temple of Nature," quoting Buffon and Helvetius, he advances the supposition that mankind may be descended from a single family of monkeys whose thumbs happened to be opposed to their fingers. IV.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

In THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS of May 15 Mr. Erskine N. White quotes a passage from Irving's Knickerbocker History of New York, published in the year in which Charles Darwin was born, wherein the evolution of man from the monkey is ridiculed as a foolish conceit of Buffon and Darwin.

That the modern idea of evolution was a "Darwinian theory" even at that period is further shown by an extract from a letter of Coleridge to Wordsworth, under date of May 30, 1815: " * * * the absurd notion of Pope's Essay on Man, Darwin, and all the countless believers, even among Christians, of man's having progressed from an ourang-outang state." (Letters of S. T. Coleridge. Edited by Ernest Hartley Coleridge, vol. II., page 643.) Can there be any doubt that Charles Darwin received the idea and inspiration of that "epoch-making book," "The Origin of Species," from his grandfather, Erasmus Darwin? D. H. FITCH.

"Hearts Are Trumps."

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

There has recently been published a novel by Alexander Otis, entitled "Hearts Are Trumps," which I think it worth while to call to the attention of your readers. I take pleasure in hailing Mr. Otis as the legitimate successor of the late lamented Frank R. Stockton.

In fact, he is better than Stockton in some ways. Stockton, with all his merits, was somewhat too fantastically elaborate in his humorous imaginings altogether to suit the American reading public's taste. Stockton's book "The Great Stone of Sardis," for example, has more than a little in common with H. S. Wells's "The War of the Worlds," and Mr. Wells's work is much more popular in England than it is here. Fantastic allurements beguile the English reading public; the American taste runs more to the strong, simple, and direct. Mr. Otis is more simple and direct than is Stockton. If he has less humor than that author he has far more wit. I have recently been reading Congreve's comedies, "The Double-Dealer," "The Way of the World," and "Love for Love." While I don't say that Mr. Otis is so great an author as is Congreve (he isn't) I must confess that I have been reminded, in reading Mr. Otis's book, of Congreve's wit—the wit in "Hearts Are Trumps" is just as incisive and ever-present as in the comedies of the Restoration dramatist.

Mr. Otis certainly has as much romance as has Stockton. "There she comes with romance on her young eyelashes," says Basil Plympton, the hero of the story, referring to Beatrice Apthorpe, "the bewitching damsel of the photograph." There is a satisfying abundance of this romance in the book. Finally, Mr. Otis is by far Stockton's superior in point of plot and dramatic interest. "Hearts Are Trumps," is so strong in this respect that it will be strange if some theatrical manager does not see in it a very good play. This aspect of the book interested me so much that I gave a copy of it to William Archer, the well-known English dramatic critic, when he was in New York a few weeks ago, to read on the voyage back to England.

My favorite reading in the way of fiction being such excellent, interesting, and classic writers as Thomas Hardy, George Meredith, R. L. Stevenson, Balzac, and Maupassant, it is probably a high tribute to the very real merits of Mr. Otis's book that it should have interested me as it has. The "goods" must be there. As its merits are of a popular sort (all humor is in essence popular, of the people) no doubt the general public will be as enthusiastic as I am about it. "He imposed on the Bishop, he cheated the wardens, he fooled Mr. Dobbs, he deceived everybody," says one of Mr. Otis's characters, referring to another. The American reading public (as Lincoln remarked) can neither be imposed on, cheated, fooled, nor deceived. As regards this book I am inclined to think their verdict will agree with mine.

Readers who are tired of the prosy moralizings of callow youngsters who undertake, in the space of 300-odd pages, to reconstruct the heavens above, the earth beneath, and the waters under the earth, will turn to the wholesome geniality and debonair light-heartedness of "Hearts Are Trumps" with relief.

Works of humor are very hard to "place." They should not be compared, for purposes of rating, with "serious" novels, but rather with other works of humor. "Hearts Are Trumps" can be compared to "Pigs Is Pigs" with no discredit to itself.

Inner Lives of Great Authors.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

More ink and paper have been wasted over foolish and frivolous matters concerning the inner lives of great men, or some peculiar feature of them, than has been utilized for purposes of biography. The innumerable controversies that have arisen over some phase of a great man's life, the continual probing into private affairs of geniuses, the eagerness of certain "celebrated" writers to scandalize a great man's reputation, are entirely unworthy of public attention. Defaming, vilifying, and damning have had their due share of shameful tolerance by an unknowing public. In the name of common sense, let such nonsensical "stuff" be burned as "forbidden rubbish."

The ceaseless stream of so-called literature that damns or defends the scandal of Byron, the painstaking treatises that attempt to scientifically ascertain or define the nature of Poe's intemperance, the cold shower that suddenly dispels the romantic illusion of Copperfield, and in general the malicious attacks of monster vultures who feed with ravenous greed upon the reputations of authors—all these should be firmly trodden under foot and denounced by critics and the reading public.

Let no publisher deign to accept "stuff" bearing upon such nonsense, although the public demands it. Give a dog wholesome food, and he will refuse a bone. Likewise, let our writers give forth essays in the style of Macaulay or Carlyle, or at least sane, readable biography, and the public will readily spurn the trash of scribblers.

Thus will the diseased desires of the public be supplanted by a healthy appetite for what is good and wholesome in literature, and thus will a great nuisance be abated. FELIX SPER.

"Peppis, Peeps, Pips, or Peps?"

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

The London Daily Chronicle's conclusion that Samuel Pepys's name was pronounced "Pips" by his contemporaries, because his clerk in a rhyming couplet makes it rhyme with "lips," is a non sequitur. We must first know that it was a perfect rhyme and not as imperfect as are many by the best poets. Even if a perfect rhyme, which is a mere conjecture, we must next know that "lips" was pronounced in 1679 as it is now. While "that clerk must have known the way to pronounce Pepys" we do not know about the rhyme, and it is certainly not conclusive that "to his contemporaries Pepys was clearly 'Pips'."

Mind and Matter.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Though it has been generally conceded by unbiased leaders of thought that Prof. Ward in "Naturalism and Agnosticism" settled for this generation, at least, the separateness of mind and matter, scientists arise with characteristic optimism to resuscitate the departed.

So Mr. Marsh, in his "A Theory of the Mind," fully and admirably reviewed in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS several weeks ago, comes bravely to the rescue of the mechanistic theory and reopens the coffin.

The machine-man theory was inevitable, with the evolutionary hypothesis well launched, and that the ingenuity of all the intellectual men cannot give it permanent and logical existence points to the weakness of the hypothesis that originally led to it.

Any attempt to prove the oneness of mind and matter must be in the realm of the metaphysical and apart from that actual experience of Life which does not depend upon science for its consciousness of a higher Intelligence. F. K.

No Refuge But in Truth.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

The review of Goldwin Smith's "No Refuge But in Truth" in last week's issue is illogical. The Bible is the so-called "revelation" by which Christianity is supported. There is no other "revelation" and no other support. A "revelation" from an infallible and omnipotent God must necessarily be "an infallibly dictated book," free from "errors and incompletenesses." What is the practical value of a "concept"? According to the reviewer the "concept" that is nearly twenty centuries old is now "outgrown." A new one has sprung up. But "the present methods of theological thought" have no more authenticity than the old ones. They are mere "concepts," mere guess work.

If the "concept" that Goldwin Smith criticises has been "virtually discarded," so much the worse for the "concept," but there are a few million people who still cling to it, and he is well employed in criticising it. It is a dreadful waste of time to criticise the modern thought fads of those who are sufficiently enlightened to recognize the absurdity of the old theological myths and dogmas, but are not sufficiently honest and strong-minded to say "I don't know," as Goldwin Smith does, in regarding the great problem. Without a Shadow.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

In reviewing "The Man Without a Shadow," by Oliver Cabot, a Baltimore reviewer speaks of the title as having been taken from "Peter Schlamel," a German novel. Was not the name of the German classic "Peter Schlemihl," not "Schlamel"? It seems to me that I recall a fairy tale of a youth of that name who bartered his "shadow" to an "old gray man"—the devil, I imagine—for some absurd or doubtful benefit.

As I remember it, one of our old-fashioned novelists, George Wood, wrote, about the middle of the last century, a satiric comedy on contemporary life entitled "Peter Schlemihl in America." At all events, the name appears to have been used in Germany to denote any careless, happy-go-lucky person who takes no thought of the future and has little regard for his own self-respect.

Confused Book Titles.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Apropos of your interesting article upon book titles and the curious distortions they sometimes suffer, two instances of such distortion, one located in New York and the other in Boston, have never, so far as known to the writer, found their way into print. A friend of the writer, standing in the book department of a large store, overheard the following conversation between a would-be purchaser and the lady clerk:

"I am looking for a copy of 'The Devil in Distress.' "We have no book of that name. Do you remember the writer?" "Oh, yes; Marie Corelli." "Marie Corelli? Don't you mean 'The Sorrows of Satan?'" And he did. The Boston bookseller was nearly prostrated by a demand for "John Stuart Mill on the Floss." J. B. C.

THE WOMAN HERSELF
An Anonymous Romance
The heart story of a woman whose soul pours forth strains of the intensest passion.
In her, love takes precedence over convention and law with a joyousness undimmed by a consciousness of wrong, yet not without commiseration for those who suffer for her happiness.
She has the emotional capacity of a great artiste, and with it the moral irresponsibility. So potent is the love draft she drinks into her heart that it infects the pages of the book as with a subtle mental intoxicant.

AMONG THE MAGAZINES.

The Second Installment of Tables of Contents of June Periodicals Bears Out the Promise of the Earlier Publication, Presenting an Unusually Attractive Group of Monthlies—Many Highly Instructive and Entertaining Articles.

THE table of contents of the June magazines, the second installment of which appears to-day as a complement to those published a week ago, presents a varied and highly interesting selection of articles for the reading public. As a whole the June monthlies have seldom been exceeded in the entertainment they are certain to afford to their patrons, and that is saying a great deal.

An interesting article in The Century is entitled "With the Coin of Her Life," in which Margaret Deland, S. Weir Mitchell, and Owen Wister each write to the same theme—which concerns thirteen at table. Gen. Morris Schaff writes on the "Battles of the Wilderness" in the Atlantic Monthly. Stories by Edith Wharton and Jesse Lynch Williams figure among others in Scribner's. In Putnam's, Count Zeppelin and Frank P. Lahm, both write on the topic for which they are admirably suited, aerial navigation.

Miss Ida M. Tarbell turns her attention to the Beef Trust in an article entitled "Where the Shoe Is Pinched," which appears in The American. But the best idea of what the monthlies offer to their readers is to be obtained from a glance at their tables of contents:

Appleton's to Discontinue.

The publishing house of D. Appleton & Co. announces its decision to discontinue the publication of Appleton's Magazine after the June number. It is the intention of the house to devote its entire time to the publication and promotion of books in the various fields which it has covered since the business was organized by Daniel Appleton more than eighty years ago. There are said to be more than 5,000 titles in the present Appleton book catalogue, embracing all the departments of general literature as well as medical books, school and text books, encyclopedias, and subscription books, and books in the Spanish language.

The Legacy { Of a Man Who Wanted to Do His Duty.

Part I., By Theocratus. Price 50 cts.

The Legacy is not a novel; it is a protest flung in the face of the community which is responsible for it.

WHO CAN CONTRADICT IT?

The Southern Star (Atlanta, Ga.) says:

"The object of this book is to set the reader to thinking. It is not filled with dry, uninteresting matter, but is chuck full of common sense and straight from the shoulder blows against the conditions prevailing. It is bound to make you sit up and take notice, and it will probably bring you to a better understanding regarding the why and wherefore of your existence, and your duty upon this earth."

NEW YORK BOOK ANNOUNCEMENTS

Important Historical and Genealogical Works—The Problem of Immortality—Darwin Centenary Volume.

THE centenary volume entitled "Darwin and Modern Science," an exhaustive abstract of which has already appeared in these columns, is published to-day by G. P. Putnam's Sons. The book consists of a series of twenty-nine essays, written in commemoration of the centenary of the birth of Charles Darwin, and of the fiftieth anniversary of the publication of the "Origin of Species." It is edited by A. C. Seward, M. A., F. R. S., for the Council of the Cambridge Philosophical Society and the Syndics of the University Press. Another book published to-day by the Putnams is William P. Pickett's "The Negro Problem: Abraham Lincoln's Solution." In this work the author reviews the history of the "problem," discusses the present status of the negro, and advocates the adoption of Lincoln's proposed disposition of the negro by emigration.

Important Historical Works.

An exhaustive work on "The Life and Times of Master John Huss," by Count Lutzow, is just published by E. P. Dutton & Co. In this work the author gives an account of the career of Huss as a religious reformer and as a Bohemian patriot. A main object of the book is to portray the social, political, and religious life of Bohemia in the latter part of the fourteenth and the beginning of the fifteenth century. The volume contains a map, and is illustrated by four photogravures and other reproductions from old prints and paintings.

Other books being published this month by the Duttons are "New Things and Old in St. Thomas Aquinas," being a translation of various writings and treatises, with an introduction covering the life and work of Aquinas, by H. C. O'Neill; "An Historical Introduction to the Marprelate Tracts: A Chapter in the Evolution of Religious and Civil Liberty in England," a work covering the first thirty years in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, by William Pierce; "Auction Bridge and How to Play It," by Capt. H. S. Browning, ("Slambo" of the Westminster Gazette.) This week is published a new and revised edition of "Plays, Acting, and Music: A Book of Theory," by Arthur Symons, already noticed in these columns.

This week the Fleming H. Revell Company publishes the three following books: "Tell Me a True Story," being tales of Bible heroes for the children of to-day, by Mary Stewart, illustrated and with an introduction by A. F. Schauffler, D. D.; "Satan and the Saint; or, The Present Darkness and the Coming Light," a series of Bible studies, by James M. Gray, D. D., and "By the Great Wall," comprising the selected correspondence of Isabella Riggs Williams, missionary of the American Board to China, 1866-1897, with an introduction by Arthur H. Smith, author of "Chinese Characteristics," &c.

A book by the late Frank Norris will be published next month by the John Lane Company. The title is "The Third Circle," and in it is given a description of the underworld of Chinatown in San Francisco.

Some Books of Genealogy.

Four books of genealogy are published this month by the Grafton Press. The first of these is in two large volumes by Emma C. Brewster Jones, and comprises an account of the descendants of Elder Brewster, who came to this country in the Mayflower. Since there are 35,000 names in the index to the book, the prolific character of the family is amply indicated. "The Chaffee Genealogy," by William H. Chaffee, gives an account of the descendants of Thomas Chaffe of Hingham, Hull, Rehoboth, and Swansea, Massachusetts, 1635-1909. The name Chaffee appears in this book spelled in eleven different ways. "The Woodruffs of New Jersey," by the Hon. Francis E. Woodruff, formerly United States Commissioner of Customs in China, gives an account of the Woodruff family from the year 1508, when Thomas Woodrove was its representative in Fordwich, Kent, England. "The Holman Genealogy," by David Emory Holman, M. D., of Attleboro, Mass., contains an account of the descendants of Solamon Holman of Newbury, Mass., and a brief sketch of all of the other early settlers of the name in this country. The index contains over 6,800 names, among them that of President Taft, whose grandmother was a Holman.

"Are the Dead Alive?" is the title of a book by Fremont Rider which is published to-day by B. W. Dodge & Co. The book is founded on a series of articles by the same author running during the Winter months in The Delineator, and comprising a compendious review of recent progress in psychical research. It contains many photographs, some of them never published before, illustrating various phases of psychic phenomena. A special feature of the book is the series of statements of personal belief, in reply to the question asked in the title, secured for this work from such writers and investigators as Sir Oliver Lodge, Prof. William James, Dr. Cesar Lombroso, Count Tolstoy, Prof. Charles Richet, Dr. Maxwell, and numerous others

This week Longmans, Green & Co. are publishing a book of memoirs entitled "Cloister to Court: Scenes from the Life of Charlotte of Bourbon, Abbess of Jouarre, Princess of Orange." The subject of this book left the convent of Jouarre and became the wife of William the Silent, from which marriage the present Prince and Princess of Wales are both descended. Another of this week's books is an account of mountain travel in Garhwal and Kashmir, entitled "Five Months in the Himalayas," by A. L. Mumm, late Honorary Secretary of the Alpine Club. This volume, a royal octavo, is illustrated with four panoramas, twenty-four full-page plates, about five collotypes on India paper, mounted in the text, and two maps.

Three other books which will be published before the first of next month by Longmans, Green & Co. are "A History of Malta During the Period of the French and British Occupation, 1798-1815," by the late William Hardman of Valetta, illustrated by documents, with an epitome of subsequent events, edited, with introduction and notes, by J. Holland Rose, Litt. D.; "The Life and Times of Bishop Challoner, (1691-1781,) by Edwin H. Burton, D. D., F. R. Hist. Soc., &c., in two volumes, uniform with the "Dawn of the Catholic Revival in England, 1781-1803," by Mgr. Bernard Ward, and "Steel Roof and Bridge Design," by W. H. Kerr, lecturer in the University of Edinburgh.

Tristram and Uncle Toby in Real Life

What promises to be an exhaustive treatment of its subject is contained in Prof. Wilbur L. Cross's "The Life and Times of Laurence Sterne," which the Macmillan Company publishes this week. In the compilation of this work the author has had access to many letters and documents whose existence was unknown to previous historians, and has thus been able to discover a number of autobiographical details in "Tristram Shandy" and "A Sentimental Journey." A feature of the book is the reproduction, in some cases for the first time, of every portrait of Sterne in existence. Besides his biographical purpose, Prof. Cross has aimed to portray eighteenth century society as it was in the days of Sterne.

Other books published this week by the Macmillan Company are "The American High School," a history of its development from its English prototype, together with a discussion of the practical questions that surround its further growth, by John Franklin Brown; "The Elements of Hygiene for School," a textbook for the teaching of children to care for their bodies and their homes, by Isabel McIsaac, author of "Hygiene for Nurses"; "Genetic Psychology," a work intended for the layman as well as the specialist, and dealing with the first dawn of intelligence upon the lowest forms of animal life, by Prof. E. A. Kirkpatrick, author of "Fundamentals of Child Study," and "Recitations for Assembly and Classroom," by Anna T. O'Neill.

Some Forthcoming Fiction.

Before the end of the month Cassell & Co. expect to publish a novel by Margaret Young called "The Wreathed Dagger." This is a story dealing with the times of Charles I. of England, and depicts the siege of Cromwell of Thirlby House after the battle of Edgehill. The book has already been dramatized for stage production in the near future.

Among their art publications, Cassell & Co. issue this month "Cassell's Royal Academy Pictures and Sculpture, 1909." The illustrations for this volume are printed on a specially selected art paper; a Rembrandt photogravure forms the frontispiece. Three technical books are published this month, as follows: "Outlines of Electrical Engineering," a work which occupies a middle ground between a textbook and one of reference, with numerous diagrams and illustrations by Harold H. Simmons, A. M. I. E. E.; "Elementary Dynamo Design," giving the methods and calculations necessary for the design of dynamo-electric machinery, by W. B. Hird, B. A., M. I. E. E., and "Popular Electricity," a book of practical knowledge for the student of electricity, by W. Hibbert, F. I. C., F. C. S. All three of these books are profusely illustrated.

A novel promised for this month by Duffield & Co. is "The Cuckoo's Nest," by Martha Gilbert Dickinson Bianchi, author of "A Modern Prometheus." This is a story of "smart Americans" at Paris and Monte Carlo, portraying life at the famous gambling resort in the Prince of Monaco's little country.

Special editions of Mark Twain's "Is Shakespeare Dead?" and the anonymous novel "The Inner Shrine" have just been sent to Honolulu by Harper Brothers.

This month, or possibly during the first part of June, Dodd, Mead & Co. will publish a book by William Hanna Thomson, author of "Brain and Personality," entitled "What Is Physical Life?" Like his former work this one is a treatment of scientific subjects from a popular standpoint. The specific topics treated are Present Status of the Darwinian Theory, Reproduction and Heredity, Unicellular Micro-organisms, the Metazoa, or the Multicellular Forms of Life, the Great Food Question, Internal Adaptation to Environment, As to Ourselves.

In the early part of next month Dodd, Mead & Co. will publish a novel by Foxcroft Davis called "The Whirl." This is described as a story of Washington diplomatic society, "with a dash of adventure and the spice of a big political intrigue."

A novel promised for next month by D. Appleton & Co. is by James Edmund Dunning, and bears the title "The Master Builders." It is described as a novel of American manners and adventure, the main theme of which is concerned "with the character of a rather remarkable woman, while the background of the novel deals with an exciting episode in the development of the navy of the United States." Another work of fiction, which will be published probably at the same time with Mr. Dunning's novel, is a story by Roy Norton, author of "The Vanishing Fleets," &c., called "The Toll of the Sea." The scene for this story is somewhat on the ultra-scientific Jules Verne order, and involves various cataclysmic disturbances on the Pacific Coast of the American continent, and a manifestation of magnetic power by a mysterious remnant of the Aztec race. This magnetic power, say the publishers of the book, is suggestive of an invention of the German naval engineer Holman, as described in a dispatch from Berlin on the 1st of this month, by means of which the destruction of an enemy's fleet is insured.

Besides Mrs. Humphry Ward's novel, "Marriage a la Mode," Doubleday, Page & Co. publish this week F. W. Stack's "Wild Flowers Every Child Should Know," and Mary J. Mitchell's "Fireless Cooking."

Three books promised for this month by Henry Holt & Co. are "The French Revolution: A Short History," by R. M. Johnston, author of "Napoleon," &c.; "Chinese Immigration," published as an additional volume to the American Public Problem Series, by M. R. Coolidge, and "Melchisedec," a tale of the Northwest, "with a strong appeal to those interested in present religious tendencies," by Ramsey Benson, author of "A Lord of Lands."

ADDED A CHAPERONE.

MANY men have written of treasure seekers marooned in the Pacific upon lone treasure islands not set down in the Admiralty charts—many men, too, have written of lovers cast away upon like far "isles aside." But where Defoe and Stevenson and Charles Reade have gone before it has remained for William Wallace Cook in "A Quarter to Four" (the G. W. Dillingham Company) to undertake to combine all the excitement of this style of fiction with a complete observance of the outer forms of the most rigid propriety. He has added a chaperone to the ship's company.

When you know that you are sailing off into the South Seas with a piratical Captain, a crew of cutthroats, a traitor in the after cabin, a beautiful young woman who has been a stenographer and typist in a New York lawyer's office, but whose manners are those of a young person very primly brought up on Maria Edgeworth in a very small town—when you know that a nice old widow lady of Emmetsburg, Ioway, is along, too, you are perfectly sure that no harm can happen to any but the wicked members of the party. You feel confident that the horrid sea oaths of the seafaring persons forward will rarely be allowed to escape from the fo'c'sle.

Having thus reassured you, the thoughtful author strews plots, dangers, adventures about his treasure seekers with a lavish hand—lures you on with teakwood chests hid in sea-washed caves and containing one knows not what riches, permits you to observe at a proper distance the blameless and correct courtship of the fair typist with the Maria Edgeworth manners by the bold hero. The adventures are not ill-devised—though the execution is too much for the writer's skill—and the initial idea is original enough to raise hopes of a sense of humor—hopes which are presently blasted.

LITERARY NEWS OF PHILADELPHIA

Looking Forward to the Publication of "The Show Girl" by Max Pemberton—Various New-Books.

THE John C. Winston Company is looking for a great success for Max Pemberton's new story, "The Show Girl," which they are to bring out about the first of the coming month. The story has already caught the fancy of British readers, and according to the London dispatches stood at the head of the "best sellers" in April. Dealing with the adventures of a young Englishman in Paris and his attachment for a young theatrical person, the show girl of the title, the interest of the tale is well sustained. It is said to be Mr. Pemberton's best story.

John Reed Scott's new story, "The Woman in Question," has been fortunate in stirring up a controversy in Pittsburg social circles, which sees or affects to see in the plot a development of a choice bit of social gossip, in which a Pittsburg heiress and a Chicago youth of wealth figure. Mr. Scott is ill at the present moment and is not aware of the circumstances attending the issue of his story, but when he learns that the turmoil has resulted in the printing of a second edition within less than a week he will doubtless regard the threats of social reprisals in Pittsburg with some complacency. The Lippincotts, who brought out the book this week, report the prospects of a brilliant success for the story as being unusually bright.

Craig Lippincott sailed for Europe this week on a trip in which he will as usual combine pleasure and business. After a stay at Carlsbad he will go to London to make arrangements for a number of Fall publications which the Philadelphia publishing house of which he is president will undertake.

The Lippincotts issued this week several works of scientific interest, the most popular being Charles R. Gibson's "How Telegraphs and Telephones Work." As indicated by the title the book tells in non-technical language and with the aid of copious illustrations the essential things to be known and understood about these two great modern agencies for communication. A chapter on wireless telephony and a discussion of the electron theory bring it fully up to date. Other scientific books of the week are a new third edition of Moore's standard two-volume treatise on "Sanitary Engineering," revised and enlarged by E. J. Silcock; "The Screw Propeller," by A. E. Seton; "Antimony," by Chung Yu Wang, geologist for the Hunan Province, China, and "Dustless Roads—Tar Macadam," by J. Walker Smith.

An attractive garden book is in preparation by George W. Jacobs & Co., and will be brought out during the Summer. It is the work of Mrs. Richmond, and will be illustrated in color and by photographs. It will bear the title, "In My Lady's Garden," and being divided into weeks, will give practical advice to the garden lover for the selection and care of plants, the laying out of the grounds, the lawn, the wild garden, the water garden, &c. Directions for the taming of birds "so that they will fly to one's hand for food" are also promised.

A little volume on the "Cambridge Colleges," by R. Brimley Johnson, containing historical and descriptive material, and another on "Canterbury Cathedral," by T. Francis Bumpus, are also on the Jacobs's list for early publication.

ONE GIRL'S ADVENTURES.

"The Plotting of Frances Ware," (Moffat, Yard & Co.,) by James Locke, relates a story as full of dangers, excitements, romantic happenings, and most unusual events as any American girl could ever hope to experience. Frances Ware herself, being a rather serious-minded young woman, the sister of a Harvard professor, and accustomed to the staid society of a university town, seems to have been rather glad when it was all over and she was back in Cambridge again. She was her brother's companion away off on the edge of the Turkestan desert, whither the professor had gone to make excavations and discover archaeological secrets. To them appeared Count Michael Zembec, a Pole, escaped from Siberia, and looking like a wild man. They befriended him and he and the girl fell in love with each other. Later they met again in Paris and were married. But it was in his home in Warsaw that most of the plotting took place and most of the exciting incidents happened—incidents that must have been most surprising and disconcerting to a young lady accustomed to the society of Harvard professors. She is fairly enmeshed in a tangle of plotting and counter-plotting and criss-cross intriguing, which the author has contrived with a good deal of cunning. But he does not seem to possess many other of the novelist's qualifications.

OLD ENGLISH SCHOOLS.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY has made another contribution to education through the publication by the Teachers College of a book entitled "English Grammar Schools in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth," the author of which is A. Monroe Stowe. The book deals mainly with the independent schools that were established all over England just after the destruction of the monasteries. The author is of the opinion that, through study of these schools, it is possible to grasp some of the chief characteristics of the educational institutions that came into existence during the reconstruction movement of the Elizabethan period; to this end he seems to have made a very careful and minute examination of all the records relating to the independent schools, and to have acquired considerable interesting information concerning their foundation and support, their government, their teaching staff and curricula, and the school life of their pupils.

The records indicate that these schools, as a rule, were not very jolly institutions, and that the lot of the small boys who attended them was not free from misery. A good deal of the intellectual and spiritual training the boys of the Elizabethan age received was well beaten into them by the schoolmasters' rods. Mr. Stowe writes:

> Since the content of the curriculum was not such as to arouse in the pupils a spontaneous interest, recourse had to be made to various external motives. While prizes were offered and other appeals were made to the sense of pride and ambition in the pupils, the strongest impulse was furnished by fear. Supreme confidence appears to have been placed in the rod or bundle of switches. Not infrequently the schoolmaster was a severe taskmaster, who relied upon his rod to inspire his pupils to be regular and punctual in attendance, to memorize and recite their lessons, and to speak Latin in and near the school. While some of the pupils may have had their "diligence heightened" by such treatment, not a few came to dislike both school and learning, and, according to Brinsley, "thought themselves very happy if their parents would set them to any servile or toiling business, so that they might keep from school."

But the British parents of that time, like the British parents of to-day, liked to have their boys beaten, and were apt to be attracted toward the school where boys were severely disciplined. This was so well known to educators that some of them thought it good business to make the rod and switch prominent in the seats of the institutions over which they presided. The theory on which this brutal treatment of pupils was based was that a man with a strong arm and a good switch could lick a moral character into a boy, no matter what he might be to start with.

Mr. Stowe says masters beat their pupils because they conscientiously believed that was the surest and best way to make the most of them; he does not think their excessive use of the rod is to be accounted for on the theory that they found pleasure in torturing the little ones committed to their care. Very likely the masters were moved both ways; without doubt many of them took positive delight in inflicting pain upon their pupils while at the same time they felt they were doing great things for the sufferers. The conscientious British schoolmaster of the Elizabethan period undoubtedly was a good deal of a brute.

Three Books of Poems.

The popular notion that "poetry does not pay" seems to find a difinite contradiction in the case of at least one publisher—Mitchell Kennerley—who made contracts this week to publish three books of verse in the near future. One of these is by Bliss Carman, another by John G. Neihardt, author of "A Bundle of Myrrh," and the third volume of posthumous verse by John Davidson.

Books in Demand.

The circulating department of the New York Public Library gives the following as the most popular books of the week ended May 18: Adult Fiction—Lane's "Katrine," Fox's "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Locke's "Septimus." Juvenile Fiction—Alcott's "Little Women," Lang's "Fairy Books," Barbour's "Behind the Line." Non-Fiction—Ibsen's "Plays," Chesterton's "All Things Considered," Münsterberg's "Psychotherapy."

Writings of James Pierrepont Greaves and Francis Foster Barham—"Cicely, or The Rose of Raby," by Agnes Musgrave—The Second Funeral of Napoleon by Thackeray—A Woman's Answer to Kipling's Vampire—Answers From and Appeals To Readers.

COMMUNICATIONS intended for this column should be written on one side of the paper only. They must contain the name and address of the writer, though, if preferred by the inquirer, initials only will be printed. While the endeavor will be made to answer all queries of interest in the order in which they are received, this cannot always be accomplished.

A. L. LEUBUSCHER.—I am desirous of obtaining the fullest possible information concerning the writings of James Pierrepont Greaves. I have a copy of a work entitled "Letters and Extracts from the Writings of James Pierrepont Greaves." Two volumes in one. The first was published at The Concordium, Ham Common, Surrey, 1843; the second at London, John Chapman, 1845. There are two brief memoirs in the first volume, by F. A. Barham and Alexander Campbell. The latter states that the "Letters" were addressed to him.

James Pierrepont Greaves was born in 1777 and died in 1842. He founded the Aesthetic Society. He was a follower of Jacob Boehme, and is said to have been saturated with German transcendentalism. Francis Foster Barham, the Alist, considered him as essentially a superior man to Coleridge and with much higher spiritual attainments and experience. "His numerous acquaintances regarded him as a moral phenomenon, as a unique specimen of human character, as a study, as a curiosity and an absolute undefinable." In later life he was a vegetarian, a water drinker, and an advocate of hydropathy. He printed a few of his writings in obscure periodicals. Two volumes were published after his death from his manuscripts.

Francis Foster Barham was born in 1808 and died in 1871. His intense spiritual aspirations led him to attempt to found a new form of religion called Alism, "a name derived from A, Al, or Alah, the most ancient and universal title of Deity in the Hebrew Scripture." He founded a Society of Alists, and also a Syncretic Society. He also belonged to Greaves's Aesthetic Society. He was the author of numerous works. "The Alist, or Divine, a Message to Our Times," was published in London in 1840, and "A Key to Alism and the Highest Initiations, Sacred and Secular," appeared in 1847. Isaac Pitman in 1873 published in London a Memorial of Francis Barham.

The memoir of Greaves is not by the founder of the Campbellites, but by another Alexander Campbell. In 1843-45 the head of the Campbellites was in America attending to his duties as President of Bethany College.

JAMES B. WASSON.—When I was a boy I read a book published, I think, by the Minerva Press of Edinburgh, entitled "Cicely of Raby," the Raby being Raby Castle, the home of a family named Neville, if I remember aright. Kindly tell me something about the book, its author, &c., and where I may purchase a copy of it.

"Cicely; or, the Rose of Raby: An Historical Novel," in four volumes, was published anonymously in 1795. The author was Agnes Musgrave. We do not find a sketch of her in the biographical works we have at hand. One of our readers may know something about her. The Nevilles of Raby traced their descent from Gilbert de Neville, who commanded William the Conqueror's fleet. The name is derived from the Norman fief of Neuville-sur-Touquer. More than one of the lords of Raby had a daughter named Cicely. Second-hand bookstores and auction rooms where old books are sold are the places where one is likely to secure a copy. One of the libraries may have the work. Raby Castle, dating from the fourteenth century, and long the seat of the Nevilles, now belongs to Lord Barnard.

J. W. NAGLE.—A copy of "The Second Funeral of Napoleon, or the Chronicle of a Drum," by Titmarsh, who as I remember was Thackeray, is in my possession. I understand it has some value. I believe I read some months ago that there were no more than eight in existence.

It is rare and valuable. A copy fetched $375 in the Hillis sale in November, 1908, and another copy brought $345 in the Lapham sale in December, 1908. It was said in the Lapham sale that not more than five copies were owned in this country. The little work was written by W. M. Thackeray before he became famous. He was in Paris when the second funeral of Napoleon Bonaparte took place.

A. S. D.—Can you give me any information concerning the poem entitled "The Vampire, With Apologies to Rudyard Kipling"? I remember the first five lines as follows:

"There was a fool, and she lowered her pride
(Even as you and I,
To a bunch of conceit and a masculine hide;
But the fool saw only his manly side,
(Even as you and I.)"

The poem asked for by our correspondent is "A Woman's Answer to the Vampire," by Felicia Blake, (with apologies to Kipling.) The verses follow:

A fool there was, and she lowered her pride
(Even as you and I)
To a bunch of conceit in a masculine hide—
We saw the faults that could not be denied,
But the fool saw only his manly side,
(Even as you and I.)

Oh, the love she laid on her own heart's grave
With the care of her head and hand,
Belongs to the man who did not know
(And now she knows that he never could know)
And did not understand.

A fool there was, and her best she gave
(Even as you and I)
Of noble thoughts, of gay and grave,
(And all were accepted as due to the knave)
But the fool would never her folly save,
(Even as you and I.)

Oh, the stabs she hid, which the Lord forbid
Had ever been really planned,
She took from the man who didn't know why
(And now she knows he never knew why)
And did not understand.

The fool was loved while the game was new,
(Even as you and I)
And when it was played, she took her cue,
(Plodding along as most of us do)
Trying to hide his faults from view,
(Even as you and I.)

And it isn't the ache of the heart, or its break
That stings like a white-hot brand—
It's the learning to know that she raised a god
And bent her head to kiss the rod
For the one who could not understand.

IRVING.—I purchased some time ago a copy of Irving's Sketch Book, printed by C. S. Van Winkle. I find Nos. 1 and 2 are dated [illegible], while the other numbers are dated 1820. Is part of this a first edition, and how do the different dates come to be bound in one volume?

There are seven numbers to "The Sketch Book." Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 were issued in 1819, and Nos. 6 and 7 in 1820. Our correspondent therefore has first editions of Nos. 6 and 7 only. These two numbers have fetched $1.75 at auction. We can only guess at the reason the numbers with different dates were bound in one volume. We presume that the publisher happened to have these numbers on hand, and, as they formed a complete work, he bound them together. We cannot say what the volume is worth, as we find no sale of a copy of "The Sketch Book" thus made up.

E. B. WILKERSON.—Kindly let me know the value of a two-volume edition of Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered," in French, published in 1783.

"La Gerusalemme Liberata," frontispiece and vignette titles, 4 volumes, 12mo, Paris, 1783, fetched $12 at auction in this city in 1899.

G.—I should like to locate a poem I saw some time ago called (?) "In the Paleozoic Age." It begins "When I was a tadpole and you were a fish in the Paleozoic age," &c. Can you help me to the complete poem?

The poem about which our correspondent inquires is "Evolution," by Langdon Smith. It was originally published in The Morning Journal in this city, and was subsequently printed in the Scrap Book, April, 1906.

V. T.—Can you kindly give me that poem of Kipling's containing

"Now it is not good for the Christian's health
To hustle the Aryan brown,
For the Christian riles and the Aryan smiles,
And he weareth the Christian down;
And the end of the fight is a tombstone white
And the name of the late deceased;
And the epitaph drear: "A fool lies here
Who tried to hustle the East."

I have looked through all his works, but failed to find this special poem, that I wish very much.

The lines quoted by our correspondent stand at the head of the fifth chapter of "The Naulahka."

H. T. M.—Can you tell me the answer of this charade, which is quoted in Jane Austen's "Emma"?

My first doth affliction denote,
Which my second is destined to feel.
And my whole is the best antidote
That affliction to soften and heal.

The answer to the charade is "Woman." The first syllable is "woe" and the second "man."

Mrs. M. K. U.—Can you tell me who wrote, or where I can find, the poem beginning:

"I sat alone with my conscience
In a place where Time had ceased"?

Our correspondent will find the poem "Alone With My Conscience" in "Heart Throbs," a small volume of verse published by the Chapple Publishing Company of Boston, Mass.

Answers from Readers.

M. C. L.—The sunken city of Germany that forms the subject of Wilhelm Muller's lyric, translated by Mangan and quoted by John E. Norcross in "Queries" of April 17, is named Vineta, its location being near the Island of Rugen. One of the novels of E. Werner, based on this legend, is called "Vineta."

The same parallel which Muller draws between the bell chimes from the city under the waters and those of "memory's wonder city" is used by Ernest Renan in the preface to his "Souvenirs de Jeunesse": "It seems to me that I have in my own heart a town of Is, which still has its obstinate bells that ring for the sacred offices and call for men who hear no more. Often I stop and listen to these trembling vibrations, which seem to come from infinite depths, like voices from another world. As age comes on I take pleasure, especially in Summer, in collecting these distant sounds of a lost Atlantis."

Moore in the poem "Let Erin Remember" notes the similitude between Memory's glimpses of former days and the fishermen's occasional view at evening of the old-time round towers covered by the waves of Lough Neagh.

There is good historical evidence to show that a real city of Is or Ys existed centuries ago on a spot that, because of the subsidence of the Brittany Coast, is now covered by the waters of the Bay of Douarnenez, where, even yet, it is said, the old walls can be discerned at low water.

The legendary story of Is has been versified by Julien Brizeux, among others, and is told in prose in Emile Souvestre's "Le Foyer Breton."

T. W. HAIGHT.—Referring to the subject of the old English Reader, about which one of your correspondents made inquiry, would say that a century ago, and for twenty or thirty years following, the name of Lindley Murray was used as being nearly a synonym for structural English. His complete grammar, a stout octavo of about 670 pages, was regarded as so far superior to any other treatise on the same subject that a proposition for its displacement in the schools in favor of any other work whatever would have been received with scorn by all intelligent teachers of the English language. One can hardly now read any standard author of that era without finding somewhere an allusion to this acknowledged master of lingual analysis. His English Reader was still more popular, in respect that it was read by thousands who were not students of grammar, and was regarded as the standard of literary excellence in the lower grades of schools as well as in the upper.

In my own boyhood, sixty-odd years ago, although other series of reading books had found their way into many of the public schools of Jefferson County, N. Y., where I lived, the "old English Reader" was often cited enthusiastically by people of middle age or thereabout, and on occasions they would rehearse whole pages of verse by Shakespeare, Milton, Pope, Cowper, Young, and other poets then held to be classics, taken from this compilation, the best known, probably, of all the compilations of literature that had been made up to that time.

The division of the work was into groups—"Select Sentences," "Narrative Pieces," "Didactic Pieces," "Argumentative Pieces," "Descriptive Pieces," "Pathetic Pieces," "Dialogues," "Public Speeches," and "Promiscuous Pieces" in prose, occupying [illegible] 12mo pages, while the poetry, similarly grouped, was comprised in about eighty additional pages.

Mr. Murray was born in Pennsylvania in 1745, and lived on this side the Atlantic until the year succeeding the close of the war for independence, in which he took no part on either side, but accumulated property by trade. In 1784 he made a new home in England, near York, and from that time forward until his death, in 1826, devoted himself to literary work, generally of an educational character for school use. The grammar was published in 1795, and The Reader not much later. Up to the middle of the last century the greater part of knowledge possessed by citizens of the rural districts of the United States of English literature was derived from Murray's readers and grammar.

Mrs. A. E. KEMLAGE.—Replying to "W. L." in Appeals to Readers in your issue of May 1, would say that the poem inquired for is entitled "Which?" and can be found in a small collection called "Poems of Home Life," published by The American Tract Society. The copy I have access to of this book was given to a member of my family away back in 1870, and the book is doubtless out of print. The author of the poem is Mrs. Ethel Lynn Beers. The poem follows:

"Which shall it be? Which shall it be?"
I looked at John—John looked at me;
Dear patient John, who loves me yet,
As well as though my locks were jet.
And when I found that I must speak,
My voice seemed strangely low and weak:
"Tell me again what Robert said!"
And then I listening bent my head.
"This is his letter:

"'I will give
A house and land while you shall live,
If, in return, from out your seven,
One child to me for aye is given.'"
I looked at John's old garments worn,
I thought of all that John had borne
Of poverty, and work, and care,
Which I, though willing, could not share;
I thought of seven mouths to feed,
Of seven little children's need,
And then of this.

"Come, John," said I,
"We'll choose among them as they lie
Asleep"; so walking hand in hand,
Dear John and I surveyed our band,
First to the cradle light we stepped,
Where Lilian the baby slept,
A glory 'gainst the pillow white.
Softly the father stooped to lay
His rough hand down in loving way,
When dream or whisper made her stir,
And huskily he said, "Not her!"

We stooped beside the trundle bed,
And one long ray of lamplight shed
Athwart the boyish faces there,
In sleep so pitiful and fair;
I saw on Jamie's rough red cheek,
A tear undried. Ere John could speak
"He's but a baby, too," said I,
And kissed him as we hurried by.

Pale, patient Robbie's angel face,
Still in his sleep bore suffering's trace;
"No, for a thousand crowns, not him"
He whispered, while our eyes were dim.

Poor Dick! bad Dick! our wayward son,
Turbulent, reckless, idle one—
Could he be spared? "Nay, He who gave
Bade us befriend him to the grave;
Only a mother's heart can be Patient enough for such as he;
And so," said John, "I would not dare
To send him from her bedside prayer."

Then stole we softly up above
And knelt by Mary, child of love.
"Perhaps for her 't would better be,"
I said to John. Quite silently
He lifted up a curl that lay
Across her cheek in wilful way,
And shook his head. "Nay, love, not thee."
The while my heart beat audibly.

Only one more, our eldest lad.
Trusty and truthful, good and glad—
So like his father. "No, John, no—
I cannot, will not let him go."

And so we wrote, in courteous way,
We could not drive one child away.
And afterward, toil lighter seemed,
Thinking of that of which we dreamed,
Happy in truth that not one face
We missed from its accustomed place;
Thankful to work for all the seven,
Trusting the rest to One in heaven!

GEORGE A. OSBORNE.—In your issue of April 17 "M. A. B." inquires as to the poem:

"So let me live that when I die
My life shall show no blot of shame,
And o'er the grave wherein I lie,
Beneath my plainly graven name,
Upon a low and modest stone,
Which every eye can quickly scan,
May this be carved and this alone,
'He never wronged his brother man.'"

The inquiry relates to the author, Howard N. Fuller, and to the correct wording of the last line. Let me say that the poem was written by Mr. Fuller thirty-six years ago when he was a student at Rutgers College, class of 1874. He says that it was written in response to the request of a college friend for a motto to go on a schoolroom wall, and that the last line, as originally written, was

"He loved his God and fellow-man."

This line was later changed to

"He never wronged his brother-man."

Howard N. Fuller is author of other verses, including perhaps the most effective college song known among American colleges, the Rutgers song, "On the Banks of the Old Raritan." He is now Controller of the City of Albany.

H. C. LUCKMAN.—In response to "S. L. D." who asks, "Who was Thyrza?" I think he would enjoy reading "Maid of Athens," by Lafayette McLaws, published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston. Although this book, so far as I know, lays no claim to being anything more than a tale of fiction, it gives the reader a very charming and vivid idea of who Thyrza might have been.

QUERIES, ANSWERS, AND APPEALS FROM READERS.

M. A. B.—The poem "Two Glasses," inquired for by "J. M." on April 24, is by Ella Wheeler Wilcox, as folows:

THE TWO GLASSES.

There sat two glasses, filled to the brim,
On a rich man's table, rim to rim.
One was ruddy and red as blood,
And one was clear as the crystal flood.

Said the Glass of Wine to his paler brother,
"Let us tell tales of the past to each other.
I can tell of banquet, and revel, and mirth,
Where I was king, for I ruled in might;
For the proudest and grandest souls on earth
Fell under my touch, as though struck with blight.
From the heads of Kings I have torn the crown,
From the heights of fame I have hurled men down.
I have blasted many an honored name;
I have taken virtue and given shame;
I have tempted the youth with a sip, a taste,
That has made his future a barren waste.
Far greater than any King am I,
Or than any army beneath the sky.
I have made the arm of the driver fail,
And sent the train from the iron rail.
I have made the good ships go down at sea,
And the shrieks of the lost were sweet to me.
Fame, strength, wealth, genius before me fall;
And my might and power are over all.
Ho! ho! pale brother," said the Wine,
"Can you boast of deeds as great as mine?"

Said the Water Glass: "I cannot boast
Of a King dethroned, or a murdered host;
But I can tell of hearts that were sad
By my crystal drops made bright and glad;
Of thirsts I have quenched, and brows I have laved,
Of hands I have cooled, and souls I have saved.
I have leaped through the valley, dashed down the mountain,
Slept in the sunshine, and dripped from the fountain.
I have burst my cloud fetters and dropped from the sky,
And everywhere gladdened the prospect and eye;
I have eased the hot forehead of fever and pain;
I have made the parched meadows grow fertile with grain.
I can tell of the powerful wheel of the mill,
That ground out the flour, and turned at my will.
I can tell of manhood debased by you
That I have uplifted and crowned anew;
I cheer, I help, I strengthen and aid;
I gladden the heart of man and maid;
I set the wine-chained captive free,
And all are better for knowing me."

These are the tales they told each other,
The Glass of Wine and its paler brother,
As they sat together, filled to the brim,
On a rich man's table, rim to rim.

Information about the poem and copies of the verses have been received from Mrs. E. N. Miner, "E. A. P.," "A. E. M.," New York; Evelyn Cable, New York; "W. D. L. R.," New York; Miss Ellen Goggin, New York; Fay Burrows, Brooklyn; Louise C. Girvan, Glen Ridge, N. J.; "J. J. C.," Brooklyn; W. J. Fawcett, New York, and M. E. Buehrle, New York.

WILLIAM HAMILTON OSBORNE.—In relation to the "Ahkond of Swat" poem published in your issue of April 24, I inclose another poem of a somewhat nonsensical character, quoted by me at nearly full length in a serial story of mine called "O'Keefe, Akoond of Swat," published in 1904. The poem I have marked I found in an old newspaper of uncertain date in the State Library at Trenton, N. J., some years ago. I don't know the author's name, but there is no doubt that the poem appeared in one or more newspapers about twenty-five years ago. The poem is as follows:

"Who, or why, or which—or what
Is the Akoond of Swat?
Is he tall or short, or dark or fair;
Does he sit on a sofa, a stool or a chair—or squat;
Is he wise or foolish, young or old;
Does he drink his soup and his coffee cold—or hot;
Does he sing or whistle, jabber or talk,
And when riding abroad does he gallop or walk—or trot;
Does he wear a turban, a fez or a hat;
Does he sleep on a mattress, a bed or a mat—or a cot—
The Akoond of Swat?

"Does he write a copy in round-hand size,
Does he cross his t's and finish his i's—with a dot;
Can he write a letter concisely clear,
Without a speck or a smudge or a smear—or a blot;
Do his people like him extremely well,
Or do they whenever they can rebel—and plot;
If he catches them then, either old or young,
Does he have them chopped in pieces or hung—or shot—
The Akoond of Swat?

"To amuse his mind, do his people show him
Pictures, or any one's last new poem—or what?
At night, if he suddenly screams and wakes,
Do they bring him only a few small cakes—or a lot;
Does he live on turnips, tea or tripe;
Does he like his shawl to be marked with a stripe—or a dot—
Does he like to lay on his back in a boat,
Like the lady who lived in that isle remote—Shallott—
The Akoond of Swat?

"Does he beat his wife with a gold toy pipe
When she lets the gooseberries grow too ripe—or rot;
Does he wear a white tie when he drives with his friends,
And tie it neat in a bow with ends—or a knot;
Does he like new cream and hate mince pies;
When he looks at the sun does he squint his eyes—or not—
Somebody—or nobody knows, I wot,
Who, or why, or which—or what
Is the Akoond of Swat?"

CAROLINE BENSEL.—The lines quoted by "J. P. G." are by Longfellow, and correctly quoted are: "Look not mournfully into the past. It comes not back again. Wisely improve the present. It is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy future without fear, and with a manly heart."

K.—Some one has said that Sidney Lanier or John Hay wrote these lines:

"The inner side of every cloud is bright and shining,
And so I turn my clouds about,
Always wear them inside out,
To show the lining," &c.

They are by Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, and occur in one of her short poems.

E. A. HOWE.—The author of the poem asked for by Mr. Charles H. Hart in your issue of the 24th ult. is Mr. Walter Learned. It is entitled "In Explanation," and may be found in a volume of his poems entitled "Between Times," published by the Frederick A. Stokes Company in 1889.

The poem follows:

You've spoken of love,
And I've answered with laughter;
You've kissed my kid glove,
You've spoken of love;
Why! powers above!
Is there more to come after?
You've spoken of love,
And I've answered with laughter;

Her lips were so near
That—what else could I do?
You'll be angry, I fear.
Her lips were so near.
Well, I can't make it clear,
Or explain it to you.
Her lips were so near
That—what else could I do?

T. O. BAKER, Sr.—Can any of your readers tell me the title of the poem given below, the author's name, and whether the verses quoted comprise the whole of the poem?

"When, in future distant years,
Thou shalt look upon this page
Through the crystal veil of tears
That dim our eyes in after age,
Think it was a mother's hand,
Though her smile no more thou'lt see
Pointing toward that 'better land,'
Gave this sacred gift to thee.

"To thy chamber, still and lone,
Fly—and search this sacred page;
When earth's blandishments are gone,
Every grief it will assuage.
Close thy door against the din
Of worldly folly—worldly fear—
Only let the radiance in
Of each heavenly promise here.

"When thy bruised spirit bends
'Neath the weight of sorrow's chain,
When of all life's Summer friends
Not one flatterer shall remain;
Lay this unction to the wound
Of thy smitten, bleeding breast—
Here the only balm is found
That can yield the weary rest.

"Nor alone in hours of woe
'Search the Scriptures,' but while joy
Doth life's blissful cup o'erflow,
Be it oft thy sweet employ;
So, remember in thy youth
Him whose Spirit lights the page,
Thou shalt have abundant proof
He will not forget thine age."

M. K.—Can any of your readers tell me what the following lines are from:

"Sundays observe, think when the bells do chime;
'Tis angel music; therefore come not late."

A. B. S.—I would be very glad to receive any information concerning an old Scottish ballad entitled "Sir James the Ross," the first stanza of which is:

"Of a' the Northern Scottish chiefs
Of high and warlike name
The bravest was Sir James the Ross,
A knight o' muckle fame."

It is a long and interesting ballad, and for over a century has been known and recited in my family. I have searched many old collections, many collections of old ballads, and made numerous inquiries, but have never seen it in print or been able to learn of its authorship.

O. R. N.—Some years ago I read a poem which was, I believe, anonymous, entitled "Buried at Sea," as near as I can recall the lines:

"He bid us good-bye drearily
At the first dawn of day.
We bid him good-bye cheerily
As the light died away.

"For it's a dead long watch he's a-keeping there,
And a long, long night that lays a-creeping there
While the great ship rolls by."

Could your readers assist me in finding the poem?

L. H.—Can any of your readers inform me where I can find the poem beginning:

"Night, and the curtains drawn,
The household still—"

I saw an extract from it in a magazine story about two years ago; the name of the author was not given.

I should also like to know the name of the poem and the author from which comes this quotation:

"Go thou before, and leave me to my crucifix,
Whose pallid burden, sick with pain,
Watches the world with wearied eyes,
And weeps for every soul that dies;
And weeps for every soul in vain."

J. M. K.—Many years ago I heard the first verse of a parody on Byron's "Isles of Greece," as follows:

"The town of Nice, the town of Nice,
Where once mosquitoes buzzed and sung
And never gave us any peace
Long years ago when I was young;
Eternal Winter chills it yet—
It's always damp and mostly wet."

I am anxious to learn who was the author of the above lines, and whether there are any more verses, in which case I would like greatly to secure a copy.

BENEDICT KAISER.—In the sixties I saw a poem which I would like to get again. I do not know the name, but it began thus:

"The King can drink the best of wine,
So can I;
He has enough when he would dine,
So have I;
He cannot order rain or shine,
Nor can I.
Then where's the difference, let me see,
Betwixt my lord the King and me?"

BOSTON GOSSIP OF LATEST BOOKS

A New Series of Works Treating of the Philosophy of Life—Barnstable in Romance—Various Notes.

BOSTON, May 21.—The twentieth century divine, be he called priest, minister, or elder, cannot be accused of being insensible to the movement of the world about him, and one of the evidences of his sensitiveness is "The New Philosophy of Life Series," which is the first of the H. M. Caldwell Company's announcements for 1909. The author is the Rev. J. Herman Randall of New York, and the first volume, "The Real God," contains two essays, "The Universal Mind" and "The Divinity of Man," the former teaching that God is within us, the latter that the diviner self within us waits only for recognition to reveal its powers. The sober, quiet statement contains all that can be found in the florid proclamations of any "new thought" movement, and is entirely harmonious with the theories of its more modest apostles, but the author's fellow-denominationalists instantly perceived the value of the essays when they were first given to the public, and were they likely to be its only readers the success of this book would be answered, but creed counts for little in book buying to-day.

The six volumes of the series already planned to follow are the "Subconscious Mind," "The Power of Suggestion," "Mental and Physical Man," "Paths to Attainment," "The Supreme Victory," and "The Rebirth of Religion." They are to be small books bound in brown cartridge paper, the title in gold, the initial in vermilion, and their general aspect trim and elegant.

Mr. Curtis Dunham's "Gamboling With Galatea," which is to come next Saturday is, in a certain way, a barnyard jungle book, although its author, like all writers except Mr. Kipling, does not seem to be aware that animals, being lower in the scale of being than savages, must have even a better conceit of themselves and must be more indifferent to their betters. Setting aside this fault, the goat, pig, calf, colt, and dog are very good and undeniably funny. The poet, painter, and professor who appear in the story are amusing in another way, and Mr. Oliver Herford has made an adorable Galatea in his pictures.

Besides other books already announced for publication at the same time, Houghton Mifflin Company announce "Choosing a Vocation," fortunately written by the late Prof. Frank Parsons, before the grave swallowed up his great treasure of knowledge of young men, and ways to help them. He had charge of the Vocation Bureau, the advisory department established last year at the Boston Civic Service House. The name suggests anything but the cautious, hard-headed methods pursued by the bureau, which aims at compelling a man to find himself, "to grow a backbone," as an irreverent youth phrased it, after having sought it under protest, and found himself convinced of his limitations, but filled with resolve to enlarge them. Prof. Parsons described his methods and gives examples of their application in special cases, and complicated questions, and his book will keep his memory green for many a year.

The apeing of the colleges by the high schools and of the high schools by the elementary schools is seldom commendable, but it is desirable that the youngsters should early learn how to make a handsome "memory book," lest when they became high school or college seniors they find themselves face to face with expensive volumes, owned by classmates, and utterly ignorant of the measures by which to give their own contributions an elegant appearance. That they may have an opportunity to acquire this knowledge, Messrs. H. M. Caldwell & Co. this year issue for the first time "School Day Memories," compiled by Miss Helen P. Strong for the use of pupils in the elementary school, having handsome colored lithographs on its alternate pages, and binding in many colored boards with gilt lettering and watered-silk backs. Not too much writing is required from the owner of the book or from her friends, but she cannot escape learning the importance of care and taste long before she has finished the record from entrance to graduation, and she will tranquilly face the high school and college records when she comes to them.

"The High School Days," with Mr. L. J. Bridgman's decorations and illustrations, has for this year donned a dress of Venice dimity in many colors and patterns, gold lettered on sides and back, and there is a new "Senior" edition of Miss Marion L. Peabody's "My Graduation," bound in Holliston crash, with an embossed panel inlaid in the cover.

Those who have fancied that every possible variety of Utopian prince has been set before their weary eyes will find a new variety in John Valentine, Duke of Sayon, Prince of Bergeland, the hero of Mr. Anthony Partridge's "Kingdom of Earth." In Russia, as the last few months have shown, the police may conspire against themselves, but for a Crown Prince to plot his own downfall is beyond expectation. What is much more, he effects it, and in doing so leads the reader and the King's chief of police a pretty dance of bewilderment. Mr. A. B. Wenzell has illustrated the book, which is published by Messrs. Little, Brown & Co.

From the bombs and conspiracies of Bergeland to the simplicity of Barnstable, Mass., forty odd years ago is a long step, but it must be taken in order to speak of Miss Mary Matthews Bray's "A Romance of Barnstable," to be published by Richard G. Badger. It is a very good description of the actual domestic life in the families of the retired sea Captains of "the Cape" in the days before slang was considered an excusable fault among gentle folk, but it is the simplest of chronicles. Even its war scenes deal with the hospital rather than with the field, but quite innocently its author leaves her heroine about to contract one of the marriages forbidden by Moses and by Christians.

Next week Small, Maynard & Co. will issue Winthrop Packard's "Wild Pastures," nature studies sure to amuse and not so exaggerated as to arouse the mildest lion hunter.

The Green Bag for May is made memorable by a paper on "The Wilson Act and the Constitution," by Prof. Andrew Alexander Bruce, Dean of the College of Law in the North Dakota University. The argument is so stated as to be within the comprehension of the reasoning layman and deals with a question concerning which no responsible voter should be ignorant. Since last January, when the magazine passed from the possession of its original publishers, the Boston Book Company, into the hands of the Riverdale Press, it has been edited by Arthur W. Spencer, who seems to have no difficulty in securing good contributors. The Hon. Charles J. Bonaparte and Perley Morse, C. P. A., of New York appear in this number, and it opens with an excellent sketch of the new United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York. The "Revilied of Periodicals" by articles alphabetically arranged, and "Latest Important Cases," arranged alphabetically by subjects, are valuable to any reader or writer in haste. "Useless but Entertaining" was the magazine's description of itself in its early days. Now it seems to be both useful and entertaining.

Warren Wood's "The Tragedy of the Deserted Isle," brought out by the C. M. Clark Publishing Company, is an account of the lives of Burr and Blennerhasset, with special attention paid to the conspiracy. It is seriously but pleasantly written, and contains many passages from Burr's letters and a large part of William Wirt's famous argument.

STEPHENSON BROWNE.

COLLECTIVISM.

M. BEAULIEU'S "Collectivism" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) would have had a greater success of the moment if it had appeared among us at a time when Socialism seemed ascending, rather than descending. Before the Presidential election returns appeared we were told that they would teach us something, but the lesson they teach is different from what the prophets predicted. No less an authority than Keir Hardie has assured us that we have no fit perception of the merits of Socialism. We are, therefore, in the very state of unfriendly conviction to which perusal of M. Beaulieu's book would tend to lead us, and we are less worried about the future than we were.

This leaves unaffected the solid merits of this distinguished writer upon a subject of permanent interest. So long as the sociologists insist upon reforming us against our wills, and in ways which we would not choose, there will be need of an armory of arguments against them, and Leroy Beaulieu's is a welcome addition. Although not a book of the moment it is something better, being a book of a year or perhaps a decade. As Socialism—or collectivism, to use Beaulieu's word—is a cult of no country, it is appropriate enough that a book by a Frenchman, translated well by an Englishman, should be offered to Americans. The book truly possesses cosmopolitan virtues as well as suitability to a subject of permanent interest. It is this quality of solid worth which distinguishes the book from many other concurrent publications.

The Inner Shrine

An Immediate Triumph!

A NOVEL OF TO-DAY

A few of the Enthusiastic Reviews this Remarkable Novel has called forth in its first two weeks

The New York Times says:
"The author of 'The Inner Shrine' has the story-teller's instinct. The dialogue is particularly clever."

The New York Sun says:
"The story is vigorously told. It is a good story."

The Detroit Journal says:
"The book's great strength, the artistry of its technique, and the cleverness of the character-drawing . . . make a deep impression on account of its unusually fine qualities. The author of 'The Inner Shrine' should be proud of it."

The Baltimore News says:
"It is well to remember that the title rings like the coin cast by Mrs. Wharton; that Mrs. Deland has an unexpected way of manifesting herself recently; that W. J. Locke is quite capable of masquerading; that Booth Tarkington . . .; that Theodore Roosevelt . . . In fact, you never can tell, you never can tell!"

The Detroit Free Press says:
"Whoever the author, the book is vivid, alive, abundant in insight and dramatic situations."

Rochester Post Express, in a review of nearly two columns:
"No greater novel has been published for many years in the United States."

The Philadelphia Press says:
"A notable contribution to American fiction."

Helen Ring Robinson in The Denver Times:
"I have laid down the story with a long sigh of satisfaction, for I felt that I had found a novel which meets the ultimate test of fiction that is worth while."

The Rochester Union and Advertiser says:
"Taking everything into consideration, this is about the best book that has been published in many months."

The Richmond Dispatch says:
"The book is clean and wholesome in tone and will doubtless prove one of the popular successes of the year."
